Poetry

A WOMAN'S LAST WORDS.

Let's contend no more, love,
Strive nor weep—
All be as before, love,
— Only sleep.

What so wild as words are?
—I and thou
In debate, as birds are,
Bawk on bough!

See the creature stalking
While we speak—
Hush and hide the talking,
Cheek on cheek!

Where the apple reddens
Never pry—
Lest we lose our Edens,
Eve and I!

Be a god and hold me
With a charm—
Be a man and fold me
With thine arm!

Teach me, only teach, love!—
As I ought
I will speak thy speech, love,
Think thy thought—

Meet, if thou require it,
Both demands,
Laying down my spirit
In thy hands.

That shall be to-morrow
Not to-night:
I must bury sorrow
Out of sight.

—Must a little weep, love,
Foolish me!
And so fall asleep, love,
Loved by thee.

Miscellaneous Selections.

[FOR THE CHRONICLE.]

Mr. Durant,—I see you sometimes publish articles in favor of the Temperance cause, perhaps you will not be averse to insert the following relating to the Prohibitory Bill, from a Maine paper:—

NOT CONQUERED.

A party like ours, based upon the principles of temperance, freedom, and justice, cannot be conquered. We never felt more confidence in the ultimate triumph of these principles, than we do at this moment. Our success is certain, our triumph is sure.

"Wait a little longer!"

The battle of prohibition is not yet fought. The temperance men of Maine will yet show to the world that they will protect themselves from the grogshops. The reign of violence is not always.—The reign of rum is not for ever.

What though the demoniac shout of triumph goes up from every den in the land? This triumph is short. The hopes of humanity are not thus to be crushed forever, the woes of wives and children are not to be perpetuated always.

There is a stern logic in events, and elections which are carried as this has been, do not prove the backward tendency of revolutions. As "vaulting ambition [illegible] itself," so do such reactions [illegible] and you shall, in a few months, look for the successful party which is now shouting itself hoarse in our streets and it cannot be found.

Temperance men of Maine! hold to your integrity. "Don't give up the ship!" Organize! organize! and let us be up and doing, and the mad triumph of our enemies to-day will but hasten them to a speedier over throw.

We never felt more like doing battle, than we do now, and if Heaven spares our life, we will not cease to labour in this good cause, till the last grog-shop IS DRIVEN FROM THE SOIL OF MAINE!

From forty-five to fifty thousand men are with us, and they are men that can be counted on. In such a party, and such men we will do and dare. We are with them in good report and evil report, in victory and defeat.

We had rather be defeated with a good cause, than to succeed with a bad one.

—"Mere fine joy Marcellus exiled feels,
Than Cæsar with the senate at his heels."

When the truth is apparently at a discount, when justice is turned backward, and equity is prostrate, we will betake us to the side of truth, and share her fate rather than shout the praises of wrong for any temporary gain to us vouchsafed.

"Then to side with truth is noble,
When we share her humble crust,
Ere the cause brings fame and profit,
And 'tis prosperous to be just.
Then it is the brave man chooses,
While the wavering stand aside,
Doubting in his abject spirit,
Till his Lord is crucified,
And the multitude make virtue
Of the faith they once denied."

The temperance men of Maine will not be disheartened, though temporarily defeated, for in the end their triumph is sure.—Maine paper.

WHAT IS MODERATE DRINKING.

It is the great deceiver of nations, promising health and long life, yet destroying more by its tendencies than war, famine, or the plague.

It is a sweet morsel in the mouth, but gravel in the stomach.

It is the A B C of drinking; the picture book, leading the young and thoughtless to the worst lessons of intemperance.

It is regular quack medicine, making splendid promises, but performing no cure, and yet demanding enormous pay.

It is the sterling point to the work-house, the asylum, and the gallows.

It is a light fingered gentleman, who feels every corner of the drawer, and to the very bottom of the purse!

It is the first step in an inclined plane of rapid descent, smooth as marble, and slippery as glass, ending in an abyss of ruin.

It is a beautiful serpent, whose fangs and deadly venom are concealed by the dazzling of his coils.

It is hypocrisy personified, an affected outside sobriety, while all is agitation and uncleanness within.

It is an ignis fatuus tempting its fated followers over trembling bogs, and tumbling them down a frightful precipice.

It is the whirlpool of rum in which thousands have sunk to rise no more.

It appears an angel of light, assuming a smiling countenance, but in reality a demon of the bottomless pit.

WAR IN A DRY GOODS STORE.

The following rich affair is reported in one of the Philadelphia papers as having come off in that city a few days ago. The incident of the day was an assault on a distinguished dry goods man in Second street by Mrs. Dorothy Owen, a lady who sells country produce in High street market. Mrs. Owen, with a basket full on her arm, went to Mr. ——'s store to buy three quarters of a yard of pink sarsanet. The storekeeper misunderstanding her, gave her three yards and a quarter of silk instead of the quantity required. Mrs. O. laid down a half eagle, and Mr. —— of course took payment for three yards and a quarter. Mrs. O. protested that she had called for only three quarters of a yard. Mr. —— boldly asserted that the quantity demanded was three yards and a quarter. Mrs. Owen now fired up, and let Mr. —— know that she had always entertained a suspicion that he was a rogue, but now suspicion was changed into certainty. Some other hard words passed between them, and as hard words often lead to something harder, Mrs. Owen made a punch at his phizog.

Then Mr. —— made a masterly retreat to an elevated perch where his desk is fixed, and there, like the indignant baron in his turreted tower, bade defiance to his furious assailant. But Mr. —— in his imaginary security forgot that the improvements of modern warfare make the defence of castellated holds a very precarious undertaking; he forgot, in short, that the science of projectiles had been added to military tactics, and that balls and shells do tremendous execution at a great distance. He was soon reminded of this fact, or something like it, when Mrs. Owen had thought herself of her basket of eggs, an expensive ammunition at the present time, being very scarce and costly in proportion. Mrs. Owen considered that offensive war cannot be carried on without a pecuniary sacrifice, and submitting to the necessities of the case, she began to bombard the tower of lofty sort in which Mr.—— had intrenched himself.

The first missile aimed at Mr.——'s face, was avoided by a timely dodge, but it took effect on the face of the clock; which was placed just behind the desk, and a fragment of shattered glass cut off a small slice of the storekeeper's ear leaving enough of the organ, however, for any use or ornament. The next two or three discharges were highly creditable to Mrs. Owen's skill in gunnery. One of the rockets hit Mr. ——, in the middle of the forehead, and bursting there, poured its unavoidable contents downwards over his nose and mouth. Another, exploding on his black satin vest, left an orange coloured line that appeared to be a burlesque imitation of a gold guard chain. The clerks perceiving in what easiness their employer was placed, hastily endeavored to erect on the counter breastwork parapet composed of bales of Osnaburg, Russia duck, and brown s'irings to cover besieged fortress. But Mrs Owen was not to be balked by any such engineering stratagem, or a chair and thence straight, the elevation of the counter and having thus surrounded the enemy's work, she poured in her fire with such overwhelming effect that the besieged party capitulated, begging a cessation of hostilities, and promised to "make all right." This surrender however, was only a stratagem of war; for Mr.—— had secretly dispatched one of his clerks for a reinforcement which come from the police office, and Mrs. Owen yielding to superior numbers was made prisoner.

ADVICE TO CONSUMPTIVE PERSONS.—Giving advice to consumptives, Dr. Hall says:—"Let all you can do, even be a great deal in the open air, to convert what you eat into pure healthful blood. Do not be afraid of out-door air, day or night. Do not be afraid of sudden changes of weather; let no changes, hot or cold, keep you in doors. If it is rainy weather, the more need of your going out, because you eat as much on a rainy day as a clear day, and if you exercise less, that much more remains in the system that ought to be thrown off by exercise, and some ill result, some consequent symptom or illbeeing is the certain issue. If it is cold out of doors do not muffle your nose, eyes and mouth, in furs, veils, woollen comforters and the like; nature has supplied you with the best muffler, with the best inhaling regulator, that is, two lips, shut them before you step out of a warm room into the cold air, and keep them shut, until you have walked briskly a few rods and quickened the circulation a little; walk fast enough to keep off a feeling of chilliness, and taking cold will be impossible. What are the facts of the case? Look at a railway conductor going out of hot air into the piercing cold of winter, and in again every five or ten minutes, and yet they do not take cold oftener than others; you will scarcely find a consumptive man in a thousand of them. It is wonderful how afraid consumptive people are of cold air, the very thing that would cure them, the only obstacle to a cure being that they do not get enough of it, especially if it is cold, when it is known, that the colder the purer it must be; yet if people cannot go to a hotter climate, they will make an artificial one, and imprison themselves for a whole winter in a warm room, with a temperature not varying ten degrees in six months; all such people die and yet we follow in their footsteps. If I was seriously ill of consumption, I would live out of doors day and night, except it was raining or mid-winter, then I would sleep in an unplastered log house. My consumptive friends, you want air not physic; you want pure air, not medicated air; you want nutrition such as plenty of bread and meat will give, and they alone; physic has no nutriment, gaspings for air cannot cure; monkey capers in a gymnasium cannot cure you. And stimulants cannot cure you. If you want to get well, go in for beef and out-door air, and do not be deluded into the grave by advertisements and unreliable certifiers."

HOW TO KEEP YOUR HUSBAND IN ORDER AND IN TUNE.—The outline for a revolution.—Mrs. Mackeyline (brandishing her tea-spoon) logician:—"We have a man, dears, who comes regularly to wind up the clocks, and a man to tune the pianos. Now, what I want dears, is a man who will come say once a-week, and at the same time that he looks at the clocks will regulate our husbands a bit, so that they be kept properly in order—neither too fast nor too slow—for the next eight days, and I want, also, another man, who, after he has examined the pianos, will run his fingers over our husband's temper, and by administering a judicious turn here, and putting on the screw there, will keep him in tune just another week. By this happy regulation, dears, our husbands will probably jar less, and be more regular in their movements. We shall not find them, loves, every time we happened to play a little upon their tempers, breaking out into a violent discord, worse than any marine piano you hire at Brighton? nor will the fine gentlemen, dears, when you have ordered a nice toad-in-the-hole, or set your hearts upon a lovely dog-in-the-blanket, which is to be done to a turn precisely at six think of walking in quietly at eight, and inquiring in the coolest manner, "Is dinner ready?"—(Great clattering of cups and saucers, and other loud demonstrations of applause, only checked in their growth by the sudden appearance of the husbands after their wine, so that the end of the revolution was never known.

With a true wife, the husband's faults should be secret. A woman forgets what is due to herself, when she condescends to that refuge of weakness, a female confident. A wife's bosom should be the tomb of her husband's failings, and this character far more valuable, in her estimation, than his life.

To pronounce a man happy because he is rich, is just about as absurd as to call a man healthy because he has enough to eat. A very common mistake.

PRIESTS' PROTECTION SOCIETY.

The fourfold object of this Society is:—1. To protect priests who abandon the apostacy of Rome. 2. To protect and educate young men originally intended for the priesthood in the Romish Church. 3. To disseminate Scriptural and Anti-Popish instruction. 4. To reform Romish Priests throughout Great Britain, Ireland, and foreign countries.

NINTH ADDRESS
TO
CHRISTIANS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

MEN AND BRETHREN!

Were we to judge of Christianity to-day by the progress she has made on earth during the past twelve months, since the day we last addressed you, we should say, that her course has not been onward; that she has rather hidden in heaven her wounded head, as it subsumed of pugnacious man, in its still wild, uncultured nature; of religion misrepresented under the guise of the Gospel; of truth torn from the seamless garment of Christ; of wisdom insulted, while the divine lessons of the Son of Thunder, of the sword unsheathed, forbidden by the word of the Spirit, on the Mountain of Lebanon; and of wars waged and maintained both by sea and land, unauthorized and uncommanded by the Prince of Peace.

We are reminded that we spoke to you, on that Anniversary, on the momentous subjects of WAR; of the Lies of Calmet; of the Pains of raw Wounds; of the Carnagine of Gog. We shall now invite your attention to the consideration of other matters, no less stupendous in their character, whether we view them as affecting the temporal or eternal interests of our fellow mortals, as individuals or as nations, in the countless family of man.

That corruption of Christianity, akin to human nature, foretold by the Apostle Paul, which found its embodiment at Rome, in the sixth century, in the 302d year of the Christian Era, has issued a decretal, in contrary to the code of Jesus Christ, and to revelling to His brethren and followers that it may be termed a Lie on Christianity. It is false in doctrine, unsound in argument, and devoid of truth: We mean the

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION OF THE VIRGIN MARY.

That new decree only passed on the 8th December, 1854, in the face of enlightened Christendom, is accompanied by a penalty, in the seventh section, of excommunication on every priest of Romanism who declines to believe and teach it.—That is, every priest of her's is sworn to credit and inculcate what he knows in his heart is fabulous, vain and foolish; and, if tested by the canon of Revelation, he will find it to be groundless, hopeless, and idolatrous!! But, to perfect the Bull in that which is still more monstrous, the concluding clause enacts that—"If any one be so guilty as to impugn the definition, or to stop the Bull, let him know that he will incur the wrath of Almighty God, and of the blessed Apostles Peter and Paul!

How any man, much less a Pope Pius, could conceive such a fiction, and promulgate it as a reality for an article of human creedness, is beyond our conception, except this Pius is mad, and that in his madness he has reached the very bottom of the apostacy; and from that pathos of degradation he shall set up, unexpectedly and unintentionally a new supposition, or religion, if you will, to be called hereafter, the of Pio Nono, and her adherents shall be denominated by the style and title of Maryites.

In Maryism, then, the Immaculate birth of the Virgin can be no more be proved from the Book of Revelation than the worship of the Virgin, and her perpetual virginity. Each doctrine, as absurd as it is, is alike untenable from that foundation of truth by all the writings of the Vatican. For Maryism be maintained by the sages of Rome, with a goddess at its head, as a religious system distinct from Christianity, and we have no objection to their human invention; but, so long as they claim for it identity with the followers of Christ, and the Creed of the Apostles, we must protest against the union, and deny its divinity. Christ the Saviour did not undervalue his Virgin Mother, when He said—"Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." Nor did He exalt her above her other children—"James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas, and his sisters."

What saith the Scripture, brethren, in favour of this new decree? It is absolutely and positively silent. Not one plain, honest, fair, explicit text can be adduced in its favour; while there are recorded almost an innumerable number against it; and the whole tenor of the Sacred Volume is opposed to the Franciscan or Dominican fancy.

Alas! for "Catholic" unity!

What saith the Holy Spirit. All men are conceived and born in sin—"Adam begat a son after his own likeness, after his image." "What is man that he should be clean; and he which is born of a woman, that he should be righteous? Behold he putteth no trust in his saints; yea, the heavens are not clean in his sight. How much more abominable and filthy is man, which drinketh iniquity like water? How then can man be justified with God? or, how can man be clean that is born of a woman." "Behold I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me." No man is without sin. "For there is no man that sinneth not." There is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good and sinneth not." Christ alone was without sin. "For he hath made Him to be sin for us who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." "He was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." "And in Him is no sin."

Again, the early doctors of primitive Christianity, improperly called, by a pagan name, the Fathers of the Church, have not left us one word on Mary's immaculate conception. So true is this, that Melchior Canus, a monk and a bishop, in his treatise on "Theological Texts," which, up to this day, has been considered a master-piece of divinity says, in the first chapter of his seventh book—"All the saints who have mentioned this subject have all unanimously asserted, that the Blessed Virgin was conceived with orginal sin." And St. Bonaventure, whose authority as a Cardinal and Franciscan cannot be impugned by any Romanist, after having quoted St. Paul, St. Augustine, and the tradition of the Church, made the following eclerated declaration:—"Now no man, of all those whom we have seen or heard to this day, has ever dared to say, that the Blessed Virgin was conceived without original sin." These authorities, beyond a doubt, are amply sufficient to establish the fact, that the primitive Church did not for many centuries, entertain any idea of the Immaculate Conception.

Of modern divines, Dr. Parisis, the very ultramontane Bishop of Langres, says—"That the proofs of Mary's immaculate conception, though gathered from all Christian authorities, do not go beyond the limits of human certainty." Cardinal Lambruschini, in his dissertation makes the following very candid remark—"It is true that the Holy Scriptures do not say explicitly that this extraordinary privilege was ever bestowed on Mary."

DEARLY BELOVED ROMAN-CATHOLIC FELLOW-MEN!—We appeal now in solemn earnestness to your common sense, to banish this heretical article from your new creed! It has neither God, nor antiquitity, nor the Virgin Mary herself in its favour. She rejoiced in Christ her Saviour, and so, in like manner, should you; for He has invited ALL, every child, son and daughter of Adam, including his Virgin Mother, to come unto Him and be saved. Accept, therefore, eternal redemption and salvation in His name with her, for "there
