Had a Stroke of Paralysis

And Found a Cure in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is always better to prevent serious diseases of the nerves. There are many warnings, such as sleeplessness, irritability, headaches and nervous indigestion.

Prostration, paralysis and locomotor ataxia only come when the nervous system is greatly exhausted. Even though your ailment may not yet be very serious, there is a great satisfaction in knowing that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will cure paralysis in its earlier stages.

Mrs. R. Bright, 215 Booth avenue, Toronto, writes: "Two years ago my husband had a stroke which left him in a weak, nervous condition. He started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills, and we saw the good results almost immediately. They have made a new man of my husband and we cannot speak too highly of them."

A little daughter of a clergyman was not feeling very well, and had to be put to bed early.

'Mother,' she said, 'I want to see my dear father.'

'No dear,' said her mother, 'father is not to be disturbed just now.'

Presently came a pleading voice, 'I want to see my father.'

'No dear,' was the answer, 'I cannot disturb him.'

Then the four-year old parishioner rose to a question of privilege.

'Mother said she, 'I am a sick woman and want to see my minister.'

In the counting-house of a certain city office, usually closed at six o'clock, the office boy—not a new one, either—has been known like others of his fraternity, to occasionally forget to do those things which he ought to have done, and the manager has had at last to impress upon him the advisability of making a note of anything important on a memorandum form and keeping it in a conspicuous place as a reminder.

The other day a piece of paper was noticed pinned to the wall in front of the lad's desk, and, upon examination, it was found to bear the following:

'Memorandum. Leave at six.'

Caught a Bad Cold.

'Last winter my son caught a very bad cold and the way he coughed was something dreadful,' writes Mrs. Sarah E. Duncan, of Tipton, Iowa. 'We thought sure he was going into consumption. We bought just one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that one bottle stopped his cough and cured his cold completely.' For sale by all dealers.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, some years ago, appeared before one of the copyright hearings being conducted by the congressional committee on patents in Washington. The list of speakers was a long one, and in an effort to conclude the session at a reasonably early hour the chairman was allotting time sparingly. Thomas Nelson Page, who had been granted ten minutes, asked so entertainingly that half an hour elapsed before his hearers took note of the flight of time. It was then Dr. VanDyke's turn.

'How much time do you need, doctor?' inquired the chairman, consulting his timepiece a trifle anxiously.

'Ten minutes — by Mr. Page's watch,' replied Dr. VanDyke, and a mid the merriment which followed he was invited to talk at as great a length as he desired.

I have taken three bottles of Chamberlain's Tablets and am now a well woman and weigh 168 pounds. I can eat anything I want to, and as much as I want and feel better than I have at any time in ten years. I refer to any one in Boone Mill or vicinity and they will vouch for what I say.' Contentment.

Let me but do my work from day to day;
In field or forest, at the desk or loom;
In roaring market place or tranquil room,
Let me but find it in my heart to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray:
"This is my work, my blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can best be done, in the right way."
Then I shall see it, not too great nor small,
To suit my spirit, and to prove my power;
Then shall I cheerful greet the labouring hours
And cheerful turn, when the long shadows fall
At eventide, to play and love and rest,
Because I know for me my work is best.

—HENRY VAN DYKE.

Milk Production in Canada.

A very comprehensive bulletin under the above title has just been issued from the press and forms No. 74 of the regular series of bulletins of the Experimental Farms.

Its author, J. H. Grisdale, director of Dominion Experimental Farms, has made milk production a subject of special study and experiment for many years and has embodied in this bulletin the most valuable of the information obtained.

As suggested by the subtitle, (Crop Rotations, Dairy Barns, Breeding Dairy Cattle, Feeding, Care and Management of Milk Cows) the subject of Milk Production is not as simple as might appear at first glance. A maximum output is dependent upon many factors and the author's endeavor has been to treat of these as fully as possible, so that the bulletin may be of value to the general farming community both in aiding them to make a start along correct lines and also as a work of reference on those dairying problems which occur from time to time.

The subject of Milk Production is treated under the following heads:—

(1) The farm chosen, the rotations followed and the crops grown.

(2) The breed of cattle selected and the breeding methods followed.

(3) Stables and care and management of the herd.

(4) Milking and care of milk.

(5) Feeding methods and rations.

Under No. 1, are discussed questions of prime importance which arise before the would be dairyman takes up the problems of dairying proper. The location and area of a farm best suited to his purpose, the nature of its soil, the most suitable crops to grow and rotations to follow are treated of. Suitable rotations are given for all parts of Canada and a diagram is given showing arrangement of fields under a three and four year rotation. The diagram also shows a good arrangement of the farm buildings, runs and paddocks.

(2) The breed of cattle chosen will be readily admitted to be an essential factor to success. The author is convinced, however, from his experience that there is no 'best' breed and says: 'Generally speaking, the best breed is the breed the man likes best.' Several breeds are mentioned which would be likely to prove suitable where the milk is shipped to a cheese factory or to a city and others given where butter is to be manufactured. The character of the farm and the abundance of forage will also affect the breed chosen.

A brief account of the various breeds known to Canadian farmers follows.

The herd having been established, the method of keeping it in a high state of efficiency naturally suggest itself. This is discussed from all points of view;—pure-breds vs. grades, the bull, the dairy calf and the heifer, with notes on the feeding and care of each. Judging the dairy cow is also treated at some length.

Under (3). Stables and Care and management of the Herd, the construction and ventilation of the cow stable is taken up and certain principles of building indicated. The necessity of abundance of air and sunlight are shown and methods of obtaining these essentials indicated. Farther on in the bulletin, a special section on the Ventilation of Dairy Stables is devoted to full the author's findings on this subject.

In milking and Care of Milk will be found advice on the economical and cleanly handling of that product including care of utensils, milking machines, brushing, washing and clipping of cattle, etc.

Under Feeding Methods and Rations, the whole subject of feeding the milk cow is taken up, what, when and how to feed being fully discussed. Following this is a section entitled 'The Philosophy of Feeding' in which he question is gone into in more detail and in a more scientific way, although so treated as to be readily understood by all. Various 'Feeding Standards,' that is, the amounts of protein, carbonydrates and fats required for maximum production and the amount of each in various feeds are given along with instructions on the making up of rations from feeds on hand which will conform with these standards.

Many farmers in all parts of Canada were communicated with as to their feeding methods. The replies of a large number are included in the bulletin and also the author gives some rations which he suggests as being suitable for different parts of the Dominion.

In 'Some Notes on Feeds' those most commonly used by dairy farmers are taken up as to their palatability, economy and quality.

Stable Hygiene and the treatment of some of the more common troubles to which dairy cattle are subject is dealt with in Part 6. A list of remedies likely to be required is given and also brief notes on some diseases.

The results of 20 years' experiment at work with dairy cattle at the Central Farm follows. These will be found to illustrate and justify the conclusions drawn in former sections.

The publication is profusely illustrated with diagrams and plates and is provided with a complete index.

It is now being issued to the Experimental Farms mailing list. Those not on this list, who desire a copy, may obtain it by addressing the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Europe's Good Roads.

The wide interest that the road question has for all classes in Europe is remarkable, and it is this unity of purpose that builds on the network legacy left by the Romans, Frances Milton writes in the Scientific American. Since that time, and that of the Henris and Louises, to whom were due much of the elements of beauty that compose the French road system to-day, particularly with respect to tree planting alongside, and since the latter day of the military road making genius of Napoleon, much has been undertaken in the way of refinement which has produced, if not an actual money return, at least a prosperity which would otherwise have been unknown.

To be just there are as good roads in the United States to-day as in France. In top dressing, in comport with the needs of the new locomotion, according to any one of the four or five methods commonly made use of in America, results are superior even to anything yet achieved in Europe.

Brick is found on some roads of Holland, but it dates from before the motor car era, before even that famous pavement of Terra Haute, Ind., owning already to some twenty years and still good. Great claims of durability are made for brick, and if these two examples have any weight, the thing would seem to be worth something. In France there is a famous stretch of Route Nationale in the south, near Marseilles. Straight as an arrow, flat as a billiard table and smooth as marble, with a row of windbreak cypresses on the north in the writer's opinion is the nearly ideal roadway. French national, departmental and communal roads, as a class, are the best in the world.

In the French Alps are the finest mountain roads in Europe, far and away ahead of those of Switzerland on all accounts. Many of them were due to the genius of Napoleon and his military road builders, and if their main purpose in times past was strategic, to day they are essentially practical.

The mountain roads of Austria are a close second, particularly when it comes to considering them from the point of view of the motor car.

Italy has a nationalized road system; so has Belgium, Austria and most of the German confederation. The first three meet the situation but partially, organization and control being decidedly inferior to that in France.

Of all work that produces results nine-tenths must be drudgery. There is no work, from the highest to the lowest, which can be done well by any man who is unwilling to make that sacrifice. Part of the very nobility of the true workman to his work consists in the fact that a man is not daunted by finding that drudgery must be done, and no man can really succeed in life without a good deal of what is called in ordinary English, pluck. That is the condition of all work whatever, and it is the condition of all success—and there is nothing which so truly repays itself as this very perseverance against weariness. —Intellectual Life.

How to Make Anarchists.

Scour the countries of Europe for able bodied men and women who desire to better themselves.

Fill them with hope by giving them glowing reports of what a wonderful place the United States is and of how easy it is here to attain wealth and affluence, together with personal liberty equal rights and exact justice.

When they arrive make every effort to humble them by giving them low wages, by huddling them together in quarters unfit for human habitation and by gouging them on every side.

Call them contemptuous names to them, such as 'guineas' or 'wops.'

If they complain or ask for better treatment, tell them they are only foreigners and should have stayed in their own countries.—Life.

Childhood Ailments

Ailments such as constipation, colic, colds, vomiting, etc., seize children of all ages and the mother should be on her guard against these troubles by keeping a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. If any of these troubles come on suddenly the Tablets will cure them, or if the little one is given an occasional dose of the Tablets he will escape these troubles. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

It appears that about ten and a half per cent. of the population of Canada over five years of age can neither read nor write. Ontario makes the best showing. Next to it comes Prince Edward Island, with 7.62 illiterates. New Brunswick is further down with 14.07 that can neither read nor write. Nova Scotia has 10.35 illiterates. This is a poor showing for a province that has had a good educational system in operation for more than one generation.

Hoboes and Others.

In fastidiousness the hobo easily keeps pace with his times. For him the comforts of other days were but a stage in the evolution of his peculiar class. He claims for himself now a definate place in society with moving picture censors, chiefs of police and all the other luminaries that various communities enjoy on the (purely incidental, of course) payment of considerable salaries.

The present demand of the hobo is surprisingly small. All he asks is a hammock underneath the freight car where the steel rods are as hard as ever. He does not send an elaborate menu wide spread through the country so that people may know what will satisfy his vagabond appetite. Perhaps at his next convention he will formulate this; it is not to be supposed that one convention could deal adequately with all the phases of his interesting problem.

That problem is not only to live but to live well on confidence, to achieve without striving, and to enjoy without remorse or useless speculation on the morrow. Hence his similarity to another class.

Those who live on the people may be roughly divided into hoboes and public officials. The hoboes exist largely because public officials grab so much money there is not enough left to go around; and the public officials exist to look after the hoboes.

Militia Promotions to be Deserved.

Every encouragement is being given by the Minister of Militia to competent officers of the force for promotion and under the present administration zeal and efficiency are being recognized. Formerly political pull under the Liberal administration was the lever used for promotion. That is now being abolished and the new regulations issued by the Minister of Militia indicate that searching inquiry into the records of officers will be made.

The Minister of Militia has given directions that in future he is to be furnished in the case of every promotion above the rank of captain with a detailed record for the last five years of the militia services of the officer in respect of seven points:—

His personal record as a rifleman.

Has he, while captain of his company, sent or taken any men to the Provincial or Dominion rifle matches?

What are his qualifications, natural and acquired?

In what condition does he keep his account books?

What special interest does he take in keeping his company together previous to and during annual training?

What number of his officers and men have qualified at provisional or permanent schools of instruction?

What voluntary drill has his company performed yearly before going to camp?

In case of a regimental officer, similar questions are to be furnished.

Such business-like methods in the administration of the militia force will appeal to every Canadian irrespective of party, who wishes to have the Canadian militia force a credit to the Dominion. Competent officers mean competent men and an economizing in the public funds. The present minister is achieving good results for the money spent.

Killarney House, County Kerry, Ireland, the seat of the Earl of Kenmare, was destroyed by fire on Aug. 31st, most of the contents of the house, among which were many works of art, being burned. Several valuable family portraits, plate and books were burned, but the principal furniture, tapestries and the collection of china were destroyed. The house which was in the Elizabethan style, was built thirty two years ago at a cost of $1,000,000. This house is situated on the Kenmare demesne, which lies on the Lower Lake (Lough Leane), and is near the village of Killarney. The present Earl of Kenmare was born in 1860 and owns about 160,000 acres of land. He is a Lieutenant of the County Kerry.

Zam-Buk Proved Best.

AMBULANCE BRIGADES ADOPT IT

Zam-Buk has been selected as the balm to be carried by the members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade. This is further proof of its superiority.

Mr. G. W. Pyatt, of 15 Southview avenue, Toronto, Superintendent of the Riverdale Division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, writes: 'Both in personal use and in first aid work I have proved Zam Buk to be of great value. I have used it for the past five years, and do not believe there is any other balm to come up to it.'

Mr. Geo. H. Westmore, of 127 Yonge street, Toronto, Divisional Superintendent of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, also writes: 'I am pleased to report that the members of this Brigade use Zam Buk when on public duty, and find it very useful. It is a wonderful healer. Personally I constantly use Zam Buk in my calling as chiropodist, and find it very helpful in healing sore feet, and as a dressing for corns and bunions after treatment and extraction.'

Surely a balm that is worthy of a place in the wallet of an ambulance officer should find a place in your home! You may not require it to-day or next week, but as accidents don't give warning, be prepared. It is at the same time soothing, healing and antiseptic; keeps good. Zam-Buk is a cure for skin diseases, eczema, piles, old sores, cuts, burns, poisoned wounds, ringworms, abscesses, sprains, scalds, boils, ulcers, blood-poison, etc.

50 cents, all druggists and stores. Refuse harmful substitutes and imitations. There is nothing 'just as good.'

Fall Excursions to Montreal.

Montreal is always a city of interest and especially so in early autumn when the weather is enjoyable, the many stores crowded with seasonable novelties, and the places of amusement in full swing. A visit there at this time of year cannot be otherwise than enjoyable, and with the very low fares prevailing on the Intercolonial Railway in connection with the annual Fall Excursion, the round trip can be made more cheaply than at any other time. On Sept. 11, 12 and 13th the round trip fare from Windsor Jct. will be $14.50, tickets good for return Sept. 29th. On Sept. 25, 26 and 27th the same rates will prevail with the return limit October 13th. Travellers from the Maritime Provinces have the choice of two of the finest trains on the continent, the "Ocean Limited" and the "Maritime Express," both renowned for the excellence of their sleeping and dining car service.
