FATHER DROWNS AS FRIENDS WATCH

Edwin A. Harris, Windsor, Goes To Death at Point Pelee.

Special to The Advertiser.

Leamington, July 19.—In sight of a number of friends, Edwin A. Harris, 1468 Dougal Ave., Windsor, was drowned at Point Pelee about 3 o'clock this afternoon. The body was washed up on the beach about a hour and a half later.

Harris and C. K. Newman, of Ford City, neither of whom could swim, went in bathing near the bathhouses. Harris was wading out ahead of Newman, and suddenly disappeared in deep water. As he went down he called for help, but Newman could not get to him. Others who heard the cry and Newman's alarm, made an effort to aid, but were unsuccessful. Among those on the beach was Mrs. Harris, who was prostrated when she learned that her husband was drowned.

When the body came ashore, Arthur Newman and George Patton of Windsor, and others, worked for about an hour with artificial respiration, but without effect. Coroner Dr. M. A. Kendrick, of Leamington, was called to the scene, and after inquiry, determined that an inquest was not necessary, and the body was removed to Windsor tonight.

Harris was a prominent real estate dealer and insurance broker, in Windsor, and was one of a large party spending the week-end at the Point. He served overseas during the late war as a member of an engineers corps, and was recognized as an athlete, and the champion lightweight boxer of the division.

HIJACKERS SEIZE MONEY, WHISKEY

Make Escape With Loot From Liquor Barge in Speed-boat.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Windsor, July 18.—Pulling up in a speed-boat alongside a liquor barge at the Port Lambton dock on St. Clair river, hijackers bound two men and succeeded in making away with $600 in cash and 45 cases of whiskey. The robbery occurred at 6 a.m. today, when the boat containing four men pulled up beside the barge. The two men were held up and bound with ropes while the boat was ransacked. It is believed that the speed-boat was stolen from Detroit.

The telephone wires were cut, and after the employees on the barge struggled free from their bonds they gave the alarm to the police. The river is being watched from both shores, and police have been notified in all adjacent towns to watch for the thugs.

U. F. O. NOMINATION AT STRATHROY AUG. 20

Political Organization Plans Meeting—Several Names Mentioned.

Special to The Advertiser.

Strathroy, July 19.—A nomination meeting of the U. F. O. political organization will be held in the Lyceum, Strathroy, on August 20, at which a candidate will likely be nominated to contest the riding at the next election.

This was decided upon at a meeting of subdivision representatives with the executive on Saturday afternoon. The meeting was well attended and representatives appeared keenly anxious to place a candidate in the field despite the fact that President Harold Currie called their attention to the fact that J. C. Elliott, K.C., was an opponen whom they had reason to fear and whom they could hardly expect to beat. He pointed to the fact that Mr. Elliott withdrew when there was a marked desire to have a farmer representative and that the Drury government recognized his ability when they called him in as a legal advisor.

President Currie stated that he wanted it distinctly understood that he would not be a candidate, despite rumors to the contrary.

Several names were mentioned as possible candidates, among them being J. Sullivan, reeve of Adelaide; Tom Turnbull, of Lobo; J. Edward Campbell, Lobo; C. C. Henry, of Metcalfe, ex-warden of Middlesex, and Allan McDougall, reeve of Caradoc.

Shortly after the building collapsed.

About 700 bushels of wheat, 20 tons of hay and the other contents were destroyed. Spontaneous combustion is believed to have been the cause of the fire. The loss is only partly covered by insurance. The farm was formerly known as the Larsh farm.

WOMAN POISONS 3 CHILDREN THEN DRINKS ACID AND DIES

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Ont., July 19.—Mrs. Mary Hanes, 28 years old, 156 Josephine avenue, drank poison and died Saturday, after also poisoning her three children, one of whom is believed to be dying in Grace hospital. The other two are in a serious condition.

When James Hanes, 31 years old, a one-legged war veteran and an employee of the Ford Canadian plant, returned from an errand to the grocery for his wife about 11 o'clock Saturday morning, he found three children in agony on the floor, while his wife stood beside a table near them, drinking from a small aluminum mug. Hanes deposited a few articles on the table and asked what was the matter with the children.

Without answering, she lifted the cup to her lips and drained it of the remainder of its contents. A moment later she was seized with violent pain. As she fell to the floor, Hanes called for help from his neighbors, and prepared to rush his family to a hospital, but before he was able to get the children to his automobile, his wife died.

Of the children, Ronald, 5 years old, and James Malcolm, 4, it is believed will recover, while Patricia, 2 years old, is regarded as doubtful.

Hanes said his wife gave him instructions for an errand to the grocery, and asked him to stop at a drug store and get an ounce of carbolic acid ,with which she said she wanted to treat the back of one of the children who was sick.

TOWN WOULD QUIT GREY FOR BRUCE

Hanover Plans New Annexation When Council Refuses Paving Money.

Special to The Advertiser.

Hanover, July 19.—The town of Hanover is on the verge of secession from Grey county, and is planning annexation with the county of Bruce. This action is being taken as a protest against the action of Grey county council in refusing to vote Hanover money for paving.

Early last spring the town council passed a motion to have Main street, which is a connecting link in the provincial highway, paved from end to end. The province was to assume 40 per cent of the cost of the same, the county 40 per cent and the town 20 per cent.

The contract was let, but when Hanover applied for the usual grant at the June session of the county council, it was refused. At a special meeting it was again refused.

Members of the council declared that steps will be taken immediately, regarding the matter.

It is expected that Neustadt, a village, also situated on the Grey-Bruce boundary, will follow Hanover's example, and will seek annexation with Bruce. Neustadt has also a street paving program on this year.

WHEAT IN OXFORD WELL DEVELOPED

Ingersoll District Crop Proving Better Than Anticipated Few Weeks Ago.

MUCH NOW CUT

Special to The Advertiser.

Ingersoll, July 19.—Much of the wheat in this district has been cut, and general reports are that the crop is better than expected a few weeks ago. Following the long spell, showers during the last two weeks hastened the wheat to maturity, but the development has been very satisfactory.

Good Races Expected.

The opinion is entertained among many interested in the Ingersoll fair that the recent change in the dates, which made it the last one on this circuit, should mean a full card for the racing events.

Information Asked.

A legal opinion on the agreement between the Ingersoll Pile Company and the town of Ingersoll has been received by the council. It is understood that more definite information is desired before a meeting is arranged with the officials of the company.

Work Appreciated.

Citizens are very appreciative of the Kiwanis Club to provide playground equipment for the children at Memorial Park. The sum of $615 was raised by the club at the garden party, but to pay for the large swimming pool and equipment, an additional $250 or $300 will be required, and the club is planning to raise this amount quickly.

STARVED HEARTS

By MILDRED BARBOUR.

CONCERNING THE ACTION AND THE CHARACTERS.

BARBARA who sold nerself into a loveless marriage, and

MADELON, his beautiful orphaned niece, whose father's marriage ne had opposed some twenty years before and whose guardianship now devolves upon him. He broke up her boy-and-girl affair with

DUANE FARLEY, and turned him for sympathy to Barbara, who, unknown to Farley, fell in love with him, and sent abroad, with business ruin as the only alternative, Madelon's real love.

JULIAN BARTON, whose suit was sponsored by

ANN ORDWAY, lifelong family friend, whose deep love for Lane was hopeless, because she wasn't born beautiful. Lane sends Barbara and Madelon to California where the latter meets

HOWARD CHANDLER, fascinating drifter.

CHAPTER XIX.

"Don't You Understand, My Beautiful?"

Madelon and Chandler reached the summit of the giant rock that overhung the sea just as the sun, a glowing ball of crimson fire, hung poised on the edge of the far horizon.

Madelon, panting a little from the climb, her cheeks flooded with lovely color, turned appreciative eyes to her companion.

"It's worth the exertion, isn't it? I've never seen anything so beautiful."

He stripped off his white flannel coat and spread it over a ledge of the rock.

"Sit here, where that pretty and becoming frock will not be damaged."

He flung himself down at full length beside her. She thought that she had never seen anyone so lithely graceful. Under his thin silk shirt, his shoulders moved with the flexibility of a beautiful animal.

She felt his irresistibly fascinating personality overpowering her. He was staring up at her, not at the approaching sunset, and the breath fluttered in her throat and her fingers were unaccountably cold.

Determined to resist the spell of his uncanny charm, she fixed her eyes steadfastly upon the wonderful scene that lay spread before her.

Slowly the sun dipped into the sea. By infinitesimal fractions, its glowing crimson orb was quenched in the fathomless waves. It seemed to Madelon as though great clouds of steam and spray must rise from the region of its disappearance, but the sea lay calm and almost ripple-less. Its blue had paled to slate gray—and then suddenly, like great crimson and saffron fingers spread across the still waters, came the afterglow. The whole world of land and sea was filled with its roseate glory.

Madelon drew a deep breath and relaxed from her tense posture.

Chandler laughed softly.

"Didn't I promise you something beautiful? . . . Ah, but you should see the sunset on Waikiki. When I am at home, which alas is seldom," he shrugged, "I watch it each evening from the veranda of my hacienda. I have a house on the side of the Punchbowl, facing to the sea. The Punchbowl, you know, is an extinct volcano that rises sheer against the sky behind the city of Honolulu. There is a big rock halfway up the hillside where the Kanakas once made human sacrifices to Pelei, the Fire Goddess. I can look down on that rock from my garden. Below me are the Japanese rice paddies, like fragile fairy gardens, half flooded with water. Beyond me, on one side is Pearl Harbor, and on the other Waikiki Beach. I can watch the sea glinting in the sunlight and hear the whisper of the coral reefs.

"Bourganvillian climbs over my verandas and a poinsettia hedge screens me from the roadway. During the long afternoon the palm trees sway drowsily in the hot sun. At night, the sweet, fresh, fragrant wind comes in from the sea and brings with it the scent of the mountain flowers over which it passes."

Madelon listened, fascinated. He was not looking at her now. His eyes were on the sea, as if across its illimitable blue he saw the place he painted.

"But there is nothing to hold me there," he went on. "The soul can become satiated with beauty that is unchanging. So I have become one of life's vagabonds. By the very law of contrasts, I seek a new appreciation of my little island paradise. American cities of brick and steel, London wrapped in fog, the snows of Petrograd, the artificial nights of Paris . . . . all these I see and taste of. And then, one day, I go home and am reborn."

He turned to her suddenly with that strange little whimsical smile that she found so appealing.

She felt herself drifting under the potency of the spell he cast about her. Desperately she strove to grasp some tangible thought that would protect her against the forces which were sweeping her away.

She thought of Julian Barton and her unhappy love, of the joy of his safe companionship, of the black night when he went away.

She was terrorized to find her memories growing dim, under the spell of Chandler's presence.

Chandler spoke softly. His eyes were warm, caressing, like the afterglow of the sunset which was slowly fading above the sea.

"You are very beautiful, Madelon. Yours is a beauty, ever changing, of which no man could tire . . . I should like to see you there in my Hawaiian garden with your fair hair limned against the sunset and a poinsettia blossom flaming against the breast of your white gown . . . Ah, but I shall see you there! Shall I not, Madelon?"

Under her startled gaze, he laughed softly, lazily.

"Don't you understand, my beautiful? . . . . I am asking you to be my wife?"

PETAIN'S ADVENT HEARTENS FRENCH,

Marshal Received by Sultan, Who Is Threatened by Krim.

Rabat, French Morocco, July 18.—The arrival of Marshal Petain and the news of forthcoming large reinforcements have greatly heartened the French forces facing the hordes of Abd-el-Krim, Riffian pretender to the Moroccan sultanate.

The marshal, vice-president of the superior war council, arrived here by aeroplane from France yesterday. Petain will stay here two or three days before going to Fez, to the capture of which city Abd-el-Krim is bending his best efforts.

Today the marshal is being received by the Sultan. He expects to remain in Morocco for fifteen days, conferring with the various commanders and laying the foundation for the organization which it is believed will bring rapid victory.

The situation as a whole seems to be slightly better, although it is still serious. A strong force of Riffians has cut the high road at Ain Aicha and is maintaining a steady rifle fire against that post. Abd-el-Krim also seems to be preparing a concerted attack upon all posts between Bab Hoceine and Tafrant.

The French are keeping a number of mobile columns on the go in all directions to reassure wavering tribes.
