LITERARY WOMEN.

The Strange Superstitions and Beliefs Some of Them Have.

From the N. Y. Mail and Express.

"It is said that actresses have superstitions and vagaries in a more marked degree than any other women," said an old litterateur to a Mail and Express writer. "But that is a fallacy which should be exploded; it does them a great injustice. Literary women have more oddities than any other class. New York is the home of a majority of women who desire to live by their pen and in no other city can they be studied to better advantage. Many of them believe in theosophy, transmigration of the soul into animals, pantheism, Mohammedanism, atheism, evolution and many other isms that place them out of the pale of Christianity. But they are not orthodox even in what they profess to believe and have many queer ideas and notions in connection with their religious faith. Now I know a young woman who at times is a charming writer, who imagines that her soul several hundred years ago inhabited the body of a great general. Her theory is that the soul never goes to another world and becomes a spirit, but merely leaves the casket or body of one person at death to find a home in another just born. By this means the immortality of the soul is explained. Her idea is that at times, by some freak, the soul or life principle in a dog gets into the body of a man and produces a monster. No man, she argues, can ever become immortal until his soul has been refined and purified by inhabiting for several centuries the body of a woman. The inconsistency of such a belief is apparent, but no amount of arguing can convince her that nature works on a more original soul plan than the one she believes in. This woman is practical outside of this crochet.

"People can be great and have peculiar beliefs. Gen. Stonewall Jackson thought that eating black pepper gave him rheumatism in his left leg. Another literary woman, who perhaps is destined to make a stir within a few years, is an out-and-out atheist. Yet she goes to church and believes that number thirteen is a bad number; that to turn back when once started on a journey is not good luck, and that when the left ear burns a friend is talking about her. She can begin with Aristotle and Plato and by ingenious reasoning show that these worthy ancient philosophers were simply beautiful talkers and did not believe what they preached. She thinks Empedocles the wisest man of the ancients, because he jumped into the crater of Vesuvius to make his followers think he had ascended to heaven. Madame Blavatsky converted several to her belief in theosophy and they still relate wonderful things of that disciple of Gautama.

"One woman who can turn out three or four bright articles per day, firmly believes that she has already been in the nirvana state for over a thousand years and has just come upon earth for a brief period before going back again. She asserts that Edwin Arnold, the author of the 'Light of Asia,' is a seer and held spiritual communication with Gautama in order to get inspiration to write the 'Great Renunciation.' This woman has children and they attend Sunday school regularly. The father, however, is orthodox and thinks Gautama and his nirvana a humbug. Many female writers, especially those who drop into poetry, imagine they receive spiritual inspiration from authors who have been long dead. I could mention one whose name is frequently in the papers, who firmly believes she receives material aid from the other world. Strange, too, with this belief she is not at all superstitious about signs or omens. She has been sadly duped by several notorious mediums whom the press has exposed, yet she has faith in the ability of certain persons to trot a ghost out at any moment when the lights are turned down and the audience are away from the stage. I attribute many of the eccentricities in female writers to the fact that they try to keep up their physical animation by the free use of stimulants. A gentleman had a daughter who was writing a novel. She grew paler and thinner every day, but seemed to have a wonderful amount of animation at times, especially about the time she sat down to write. He was at a loss to account for it, as she took little exercise. One day his wife confessed to him that the daughter was using stimulants freely to assist inspiration. She said the daughter had read that Ouida, who was almost a skeleton, used stimulants to get up steam to finish a novel, and why not emulate that successful writer? The stimulant rock I advise all women writers to avoid. Have your lams, your superstitions, your omens and your vagaries, but shun liquor inspiration. The names of these women? Oh, no, I would betray confidence if I divulged their names."

—For weak lungs, spitting of blood, weak stomach, night-sweats, and the early stages of consumption, "Golden Medical Discovery" is specific. By druggists.

Women's Work and Ways.

Mme. De Salis is preparing a new work on culinary art. Its advent is looked for with pleasure by gourmets and cooks alike.

The Christian Register predicts that when Harvard celebrates its 500th anniversary the women will sit with the graduates in the lower tier; will wear gowns (without trains) among the Faculty on the platform, and will rise among the distinguished guests to receive the honors of the university.

Boston has a gymnasium exclusively for the use of women. It has six bowling alleys, a tennis court, a gymnasium hall, a running track of twenty laps to the mile, hot and cold water baths, etc. It was projected by Miss Mary Allen, who has for years been a devotee of physical culture. It is well patronized.

Miss Georgia Cayvan, the actress, has written an interesting article for the February Brooklyn Magazine, on "Young Women and the Stage." The paper, which is Miss Cayvan's first literary effort, is in answer to the question: "Can you advise young girls to adopt the stage as a profession?" x

Mrs. Haddock of Iowa, in her paper on "Women as Landlords," read at the Women's Congress in Louisville, estimates that 1000 women own and manage farms in her own State, while in Oregon women farmers are so numerous that they excite no comment. The number of women land-owners is increasing all over the Union.

—It may be only a trifling cold, but neglect it and it will fasten its fangs in your lungs, and you will soon be carried to an untimely grave. In this country we have sudden changes and must expect to have coughs and colds. We cannot avoid them, but we can effect a cure by using Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that has never been known to fail in curing coughs, colds, bronchitis and all affections of the throat, lungs and chest.

According to a German newspaper a number of women in Prussia propose to make new translations of both the Old and the New Testament to the end that certain passages that bear very hard on the women may be rendered more correctly than man's jealousy and partiality have yet permitted. Several translators have been appointed, but as they have only just begun their Hebrew and Greek studies the confusion of man may be some time delayed.

It seems that the idea of attempting to defeat nature by going without food is in no sense a novelty. Notes and Queries cites an instance which occurred in 1357, during the reign of Edward III, of a woman who was consigned to Nottingham Prison for life for the murder of her husband, who held herself without food or drink for forty days. Her experiment served a practical purpose, for it moved His Majesty's heart to pity, and he ordered her liberation.

—Free and easy expectoration immediately relieves and frees the throat and lungs from viscid phlegm, and a medicine that promotes this is the best medicine to use for coughs, colds, inflammation of the lungs and all affections of the throat and chest. This is precisely what Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is a specific for, and wherever used it has given unbounded satisfaction. Children like it because it is pleasant; adults like it because it relieves and cures the disease.

St. George's Training College for Women, opened in Edinburgh last month, is organized upon the plan of the Maria Grey Training College in London. The college aims at giving professional training to women who are already well educated, and an entrance examination (except in special cases), or the possession of certain specified certificates, is among the conditions of admission. Lectures are given in preparation for the Cambridge Teachers' Examination, and the students are admitted to practice in several Edinburgh schools.

—Maladies multiply one another. A simple fit of digestion may—especially if the constitution is not naturally vigorous—throw the entire mechanism of the liver and bowels out of gear. Sick headache follows, poisoning of the blood by bile ensues, and there is grave and serious disturbance of the entire system. Check the threatened dangers at the outset with Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, the medicine that drives every impurity from the blood.

The Home for Overworked Horses, established in London through the efforts of Miss Linde, reaches further than its name implies, inasmuch as it benefits man as well as beast. The object is to provide quarters where poor cabbies and tradesmen may obtain rest and treatment for their animals at a moderate cost, or free of all charge, as the circumstances indicate. Horses of well-to-do people will also be treated and cared for. It has been found expedient in the present state of the finances of the establishment to drop the scheme of lending horses to the poorer of those who make use of its benefits.

—F. Burrows of Wilkesport writes that he was cured of a very dangerous case of inflammation of the lungs, solely by the use of five bottles of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Feels great pleasure in recommending it to the public, as he had proved it (for many of the diseases it mentions to cure) through his friends, and in nearly every instance it was effectual.

Two large shipping firms, the Ocean Steamship Company and Messrs. Booth & Co. of Liverpool, employ women to make, keep up and copy lists of the lading and cargoes of their ships, and the accounts relating to the wages and payment of the men. An important part of the latter work consists in giving half the pay to the wives or other dependents. The ships' libraries are also kept in order by women, and the linen, curtains and carpets made, mended and sorted by them. The linen is tied into packets of five or ten to facilitate counting and reshipping. And all this work, as well as the direction of the cuisine (for dinners are served at midday to all the employes in the building where this work is carried on), is under the supervision of a woman, who looks after every separate item and individual under her control.

—When the eyes become weak or the lids inflammed or sore, a disordered system or a scrofulous condition of the blood is indicated, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best remedy. It invigorates and vitalizes the blood and expels all humors. d

Quaint Old Marriages.

From Brooklyn Magazine.

The world discourages, and rightly so, the marriage of December with May, and when such marriages took place in former times they were usually recorded in some such way as this: "22d August (1782). At Bath, Captain Hamilton, aged 30, to Mrs. Munson, a lady of rank and fortune, aged 85." We may find even a distance of eighty years between an old man and his bride. In February, 1769, "Robert Judge, Esq., of Cookreville, Ireland, aged 95, to Miss Annie Nugent, aged 15. He served in King William's wars and received a ball in his nose." Particulars of height as well as of age, fortune and length of courtship were often given: "December (1755). At York, Mr. Thomas, a grenadier in the Yorkshire militia, 6 feet 2 inches high, to Miss Hannah Tennick of Clearham, 3 feet 2 inches high, with a fortune of £2000." And on April 5, 1785, at Ripley Church, Mr. Robert Long was married to Miss Reynard; between them there was a disparity both in age and size, "the bridegroom being 87 years of age and more than 6 feet high; the bride 20 years old and a little more than 3 feet high." The record of a marriage in 1779 of a couple aged respectively 80 and 85 concludes thus: "And what is still more remarkable, there has been a courtship carried on betwixt them for more than sixty years."

—Ayer's Hair Vigor improves the beauty of the hair and promotes its growth. It prevents the accumulation of dandruff, cleanses the scalp and restores a natural color to gray hair. Have you received Ayer's Almanac for the new year? d

Why They "Want the Earth."

From the Brooklyn Times.

Baron Von Humboldt says that in all tropical countries the natives show an almost irresistible desire to swallow earth; and not alkaline earths, which they might be supposed to crave in order to neutralize acid, but unctuous and strong smelling clays. Women on the Magdelena River, while shaping earthen vessels on the potter's wheel, put large lumps of clay in their mouths, and it is often necessary to confine children to prevent them running out to eat earth immediately after a fall of rain. Humboldt, in descending the Orinoco, passed a day with the earth-eating tribe of Indians called the Ottomacs, and thus describes the peculiar diet and habits of the people: "The earth which the Ottomacs eat is soft unctuous clay, a true potter's clay, of a yellowish-gray color, due to a little oxide of iron. They seek for it on the banks of the Orinoco and Meta, and select it with care, as they do not consider all clays equally agreeable to eat. They knead the earth into balls of about five or six inches in diameter, which they burn or roast by a weak fire, until the outside assumes a reddish tint. The balls are remoistened when about to be eaten."

—Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

The Castor Bean in America.

From the Savannah News.

Few persons, perhaps, in this section are aware of the extent of the cultivation of the castor bean in portions of this country. Its prominence as a crop in Illinois is due to the repeated failure of the wheat crop, which it has in a measure superseded. The plant is a native of Egypt, Africa, and its chief nursery in this country is Egypt, Ill. It attains a height of about four feet in Southern Europe and America, but in India reaches the size of a tree. It was known to and used by the ancients. The Greeks called it croton. The Counties of Jefferson and Franklin, Illinois, claim the largest acreage devoted to it. In Southern Illinois a territory of over 20,000 acres is given up to its cultivation. To pay expenses and yield a fair remuneration it must bring at least $1.25 per bushel. Last year it sold on an average of $1.40, and farmers were encouraged. The same kind of soil that is favorable to wheat and corn serves for the bean. It requires a sandy loam, and is said to be ahead of clover in its fertilizing qualities.

"Doctor," said the friend, stopping him on the street, "what do you take for a heavy cold?" "A fee," replied the doctor softly, and so passed on.

—Use the safe, pleasant and effectual worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; nothing equals it. Procure a bottle and take it home.

Little Tidies About the House.

From the New York Commercial Advertiser.

A dainty spread for a baby's bed is of cream serge with pink clover blossoms strewn over it. The border is edged with pink and white cord.

A table-cover of gray-blue satin sheeting has a flight of swallows embroidered across it. The birds are worked in the natural colors and form an effective decoration.

A pretty bag for holding dusters is of cream linen, embroidered with disks in various colors. The top of the bag is faced with turkey-red, and the drawing-strings are of pink and green ribbon.

A cream plush table-cover has the border and the centre of Indian embroidery applied with gold thread in tapestry stitch. The lining is pale-blue satin, and a tassel fringe with all the tints that are found in the embroidery finishes this rich cover.

Lost Youth.

"I want the moon," we lisping said;
"I want it in my little bed."
When older grown we tossed a ball
Skyward, and hoped a star would fall.

"Bring me a ladder long, and I
Will ride the clouds and climb the sky;
I'll peep into the crimson west
Where the great sun has gone to rest."

In youth we entered "No Man's Land,"
And plucked the fruit ripe to each hand;
By song's bright sea on singing sand
Rose our fair castles, frail as grand.

To-day the moon is high in Heaven;
The stars to mortals are not given
For shining toys; Care's drifting sand
Has choked the path to "No Man's Land."

Friend! in dim wood and shady lane
We loiter, seeking youth in vain;
But somewhere she is waiting yet,
Her rosy feet with May dew wet.

We hear the far-off thrilling flute,
And sigh; the music is not mute.
But not for us the magic strain;
She will not come this way again.
—Helen Irvine Grigg.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in packets by Grocers, labelled thus: James Epps & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

CATARRH
CATARRHAL DEAFNESS
A NEW HAY FEVER
TREATMENT
Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and Eustacian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these diseases are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A descriptive pamphlet sent free on receipt of stamp by A. Dixon & Son, 305 King-street W.
