WHAT IS IT GOOD FOR?

Dr. Arnott Denies that Alcohol is a Stimulant or a Medicinal Aid.

A fair-sized audience assembled at the Medical College yesterday afternoon to hear the opening lecture of the fall term, which was delivered by Dr. Arnott, lecturer for the college on clinical medicine. A few minutes after 4 o'clock Dr. Fenwick, dean of the faculty, opened the proceedings by welcoming those present. He referred to the progress of the college during the past few years, and predicted that the present term, which would mark the opening of their eighth year, would be even more successful than the past.

The lecturer was then presented and was well received. His subject was "The Use of Alcohol as a Medicine in the Treatment of Diseases." Dr. Arnott in a neat preface to his subject said that the opinion of the young men was the most valuable thing that he could have. They were the levers which determined whether he would have success or failure in life. It was possible to buy, borrow and steal opinions, but such opinions were never the students' own. The better way was to think out to some extent original and practical opinions. The use of alcohol, he said, coming to his subject, was especially a subject which everyone should think out for himself—especially its use as a medicine for the treatment of disease. By the term "alcohol"

EVERY FORM OF INTOXICANT

was meant. A notion was general at one time that wine was blood-making, beer fattening, and whisky stimulating, but such was not the case. Alcohol in them all was the active principle. The alcohol removed from old port wine left nothing. The same rule held good with similar beverages. Beer was defended as nourishing, but the alcohol extracted from it left its value at nothing. An eminent authority in estimating its value as a nourishment, with the alcohol extracted, calculated that it would require six barrels of it to give nourishment such as would be found in one loaf of bread. The result of these experiments has been that doctors in England have stopped prescribing anything but alcohol pure or slightly flavored. Fothergill, a man of great ability, has rated alcohol as a food and a stimulant. Time has

DISPROVED THIS STATEMENT.

Fothergill himself towards the end of his book appears to have been afraid of alcohol, lest the prescribing of it might make drunkards of the patients. Eminent men of today say that this apprehension is well grounded. Liquor is a fruitful source of disease. A trip through the hospital will prove this.

Sidney Ringer has said that alcohol aids digestion and aids in functional activity, but in another place the same author says that it lessens a man's power of muscular endurance, and in another that it makes a weary man feel good. But what must

is the statement that it must not be given during the day, but in the evening. The object of citing these cases, continued the speaker, was to show the contradictions and inconsistencies of some eminent men on this question. Other eminent men affirm that alcohol gives increased circulatory activity and vigor of nerve center, but the same will admit that it lessens muscular activity. T. K. Chambers is of the opinion that it is doubtful if alcohol is ever a stimulant. Lees says that it neither generates nor increases nerve force, and all the authorities of 1889 agree that with but a few exceptions

ALCOHOL IS USELESS.

The diseases for which it is recommended are typhoid fever and blood-poisoning. For myself, said the Doctor, I take the ground that it is never directly a stimulant, that it does not aid digestion, that it is not nourishing and that it does not arrest waste. A stimulant increases strength. Alcohol increases action and this is mistaken for strength. The brain is made up of various faculties congregated together. There are the moral and intellectual faculties and the animal instincts. The higher faculties are the first to be affected and disturbed by alcohol. They afterwards become paralyzed and even the animal instincts are impaired, which leaves the drunkard with vegetable and purely organic life. The records of the Temperance Hospital in London give at least as good results as any other, and in or own city the able Superintendent of the Asylum for the Insane has demonstrated beyond a doubt that the death rate of the institution has been lowered and the proportion of cures increased since he abandoned the use of alcohol. My own opinions have developed, not from any fanatic temperance notion, but from the accumulation of evidence, and from my failure to see good flow from its administration.

A Dinner Pill.—Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healthy nutriment it becomes a poison to the sytem. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions and convert the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia.

Some desire to be served as kings, but only pay as laborers.

Many persons waste their best energies only to die rich.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhœa, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.
