Nervous and Mental Depression.

The indefinable mental distress and alarm which so often afflict the patient in Hypondriasis, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, and other diseases depending on nervous exhaustion, yield more surely and rapidly to PHOSFOZONE than to any other medicine; and exercising, as it does, so potent and so permanent an influence on the nutrition, molecular balance, activity and force of the brain and great nervous systems, is sufficient to entitle PHOSFOZONE to a foremost place in therapeutics, being extensively used and prescribed by physicans, and recommended by all medical journals.

PHOSFOZONE is sold by all druggists, in bottles, at $1 each, or six for $5.

Poetry.

Good Bye.

The New York Herald says the following poem was the last thing written by the late Major Whyte Melville, who was, if possible, mourned for his manly and intellectual qualities on this side of the Atlantic as much as on the other. Whyte Melville was one of those rare natures that do not belong to any one country. These were his last written words:—

Falling leaf and fading tree,
Lines of white in a sullen sea,
Shadows rising on you and me—
The swallows are making them ready to fly.
Good-bye, summer! Good bye!
Good-bye!

Hush! A voice from the far away!
"Listen and learn," it seems to say,
"All the to-morrows shall be as to-day"
The cord is frayed and the cruse is dry,
The link must break and the lamp must die,
Good-bye, hope! Good bye,
Good-bye!

What are we waiting for? Oh! my heart,
Kiss me strait on the brows and part!
Again! again! My heart! my heart!
What are we waiting for, you and I?
A pleading look—a stifled cry,
Good bye, forever! Good-bye!
Good-bye!

The Duke of Argyll.

The New York Sun, in a short sketch of the arrival of the Duke of Argyll's party in New York, says:—

Until the last week we have never yet had a duke visiting New York, though two royal dukes, those of Kent and Clarence, have favored our Canadian and Nova Scotian neighbors, and the Duke of Kent once touched at Norfolk, Va., in a British man-of-war.

The Duke's eldest daughter, Lady Elizabeth Campbell, is a tall, delicate complexioned blonde, with light auburn hair and pale face.

Lady Mary Campbell is a pretty young woman of eighteen, with wavy auburn hair.

Lord Walter Campbell is a younger son of the Duke, who is well known in society here, having resided for three years in this city acquiring a knowledge of business, and who left a very pleasant remembrance behind him. He bears a marked resemblance to his father, as indeed does the Marquis of Lorne; but the bright orange colored hair which feathers from the Duke's forehead like a Scottish plume, and his high cheek bones of the Highlandman, are in them softened down by the less fiery hair and fairer, gentler character of feature derived from their Saxon mother, half a Howard, the daughter of the Duchess of Sutherland. In appearance the Mac Callum More is intensely Scotch and looks to the life from the land of brown heath and shaggy wood. His small but lithe figure is firmly knit, the head erect and thrown back, and his arms when he rises in the House of Lords are generally folded across his breast, with a game-cock, pugnacious air. The forehead is very fine and the look from the eye straight, bold and truthful. As a speaker he is voluble and vigorous, but rather monotonous, and his tongue has too much of the shrill, rough Doric of Scotia to make pleasant music to the ear. Still his style, clear and polished and his strong views and earnest delivery of them, always command attention. He had not the advantage of a University education, and of trying his intellectual thews in those great wrestling grounds of the youth of England, which might have rubbed off much of the ruggedness of his character. He was brought up entirely under private tuition and educated not as a young man, but as a young marquis. This has given him an air of self-consciousness and pride of intellect which he in reality does not possess, and has made him personally unpopular with those who do not thoroughly understand his sterling worth and his many fine qualities, which must and do command respect and admiration in this country as in his own. He has ever shown sympathy with his countrymen, and his heart has always warmed to the tartan, as did that of his ancestor to Jeannie Deans', as beautifully told by Sir Walter Scott. Neither will it be forgotten that he has ever been the manly, outspoken friend of this country, and not less in her darkest hour when the rebellion looked its brightest, than now when it has won and fixed its unity, did he never despair of the Republic, but by speech and act was unflinchingly true in his faith in her future. The Duke is not only an able speaker and statesman, he is also a cultivated literary man. His career of authorship commenced when, at the age of nineteen, he published a "Letter to the Peers by a Peer's Son," which was followed by many valuable works on the ecclesiastical condition and controversies of Scotland. His later scientific works, "The Reign of Law" and "Primeval Man," are more ambitious and have won him fame.

He is regarded as a man great among the great ones of his time. He had not the advantage which most of the men who have attained eminence in the British House of Lords possessed, of a previous training in the House of Commons, like Lord Russell and Granville, leaders on the Liberal, and Lords Beaconfield and Salisbury on the Conservative side. When only twenty three years of age he succeeded to the long and magnificent array of titles which decorate the dukedom of Argyll, and include eight titles as baron, two as viscount, three as earl, two as marquis, and the dukedom. The oldest barony, that of Campbell, dates back to 1445; the oldest earldom to 1557; but the most extraordinary creation in the British peerage was that of 1701, when the first to wear the strawberry leaf was created at one and the same time Duke of Argyll, Marquis of Lorne and Kintyre, Earl of Campbell and Cowell, Viscount Lockow and Glenisla, and Baron Inverary, Mull, Movern and Tiry. These titles were all, however, Scotch. It was not until 1776 that a Duke of Argyll was permitted to take his seat as Baron Sandridge and Hamilton in the British House of Peers. While yet designated by the courtesy title of Marquis of Lorne—now held by his son, the Governor General of Canada—he married, in 1844, the daughter of the second Duke of Sutherland, the favorite companion of Queen Victoria previous to her marriage, who died in June, 1878. In politics the Duke is by family feeling and by conviction a Liberal of the Liberals. In 1852 he held the office of Lord of the Privy Seal under Lord Aberdeen's Administration, with a seat in the Cabinet, was Postmaster General under Lord Palmerston and Secretary of State for India in Mr Gladstone's Administration. The marriage of the Princess Louise to his son is the first instance in English history of the marriage of the daughter of a reigning sovereign to a subject. This fact, with the independence shown in placing one of his sons in a counting-house in New York and another in an English warehouse, has attracted much attention to his domestic affairs. The Castle of Inverary, the family seat of the Campbells, is a splendid structure, situated at the head of one of the most picturesque of Scotia's lakes, and was, it may be remembered, partly destroyed by fire a short time since.

THE TYNE BOAT RACE.

THE CANADIAN BOY THE HERO OF THE HOUR.

The weather was good, though dull, and the water was exceeding smooth.—The tide was running well, and the wind was in favor of the rowers. Indeed it was long since everything was in such good condition to ensure a fair race. The attendance far exceeded that at any previous championship race. A large number of Canadians and Americans were on board the twenty steamers, which followed the race. Prior to the start any amount of money was forthcoming on Hanlan at 7 to 4. The race has certainly been a great gambling one, and the Canadians will carry away a very large amount of money. Both men rowed about the river for a quarter of an hour before the taking up of their positions at

THE STARTING POINT.

Elliott stripped to the skin, retaining only his rowing drawers, while Hanlan wore a flannel vest. Both appeared to be in splendid condition. All the spectators remarked the great physical strength of Elliott. Elliott won the toss, and chose the northern shore.

A CAPITAL START

was effected at 12.15 p. m. Hanlan got away at a very fast rate, with a lead of nearly a quarter of a length, but English hopes rose when they saw Elliott, with half a dozen wonderful strokes, draw up level. This was, however, the only advantage Elliott had during the race. It was remarked that Hanlan, at starting did not display the same non-chalance as when opposed to Hawdon; but as soon as he noticed that Elliott was ready he with hearty good will. Nothing could be cleaner and more workmanlike than the way in which he obtained a firm preliminary grip of the water, and pulled his stroke right through. Elliott also was immediately at work with all his might, but buried his sculls too deeply, and was consequently unable to recover neatly and promptly, so, in the course of twenty yards, Hanlan had obtained a distinct advantage. But a short distance was traversed when it became evident that Hanlan was destined to have matters pretty well his own way.

STYLES OF THE MEN.

Hanlan sculled with grace and finish, recovering like lightning, keeping his boat on an even keel and managing to almost lift her out of the water at every stroke. Elliott rocked slightly, splashed frequently, and seemed to be exerting his enormous strength to the fullest to little purpose. He persistently demonstrated that he was not master of the new style of using the sculls. Soon after starting Hanlan deviated somewhat, but, recovering himself with a clear stroke of the right, dashed forward with 42 strokes per minute, Elliott meanwhile doing 38. Hanlan was fully half a length ahead by the time a hundred yards had been traversed. Opposite the end of Skinner's Burn Hanlan was clear. Elliott here settled down into a better style. Hanlan slackened for a moment but immediately resumed his stroke.—He had drawn three lengths ahead at Grindstone quay. After passing Redheugh bridge,

ELLIOTT SPURTED WITH ALL HIS POWER.

It was evident he had a tendency to break into his old short, vigorous stroke, and was hampered by the new style, and the spurt was unavailing. Hanlan had now fallen into a long telling one of 36, and Elliott once more began to splash as he did at the commencement of the race. He passed briefly off the Lead Works quay to discover his opponent's position, then pulled manfully, evidently relying on his noted staying powers; but the effort was unavailing, Hanlan having, off Cooper's Stairs, rather increased his lead. At Quay Corner Hanlan was rowing at the rate of 34 strokes to the minute, and looking around with great sang froid.

AFTER THE FIRST MILE WAS PASSED, off Waterson's Works, Hanlan, seeing he had the race in hand, slowed down to 32. Elliott, observing this, by a vigorous effort, drew up to within three yards, amidst enthusiastic applause.—Hanlan slightly increased his pace and kept just ahead, but again eased at Armstrong's Shear Legs, when Elliott came within two lengths of him. Hanlan here almost stopped rowing and turned around to look ahead, although Elliott was still pulling gamely at the rate of 34. The Island of King's Meadows was covered by an excited crowd, who, seeing the scullers pass in close proximity, and not being aware of the previous phases of the race, enthusiastically encouraged Elliott. At the head of the Meadows

HANLAN PASSED TO THE FRONT

and treated Elliott to the back wash of his boat, but Elliott worked away to avoid this annoyance. Hanlan reached the head of the Meadows, two miles from the start, in twelve minutes and eight seconds, and was five lengths ahead of Elliott, who was still spurting pluckily. The immense crowd along Scotswood Hongks, watched the race in silence, but, on Hanlan passing Scotswood Bridge, eleven lengths ahead, there was which lasted some minutes. The time of the race was 21 minutes 1 second, which is 55 seconds less than the time of the Elliott-Higgins match.

A BURST OF CHEERING

A tremendous concourse surrounded the boat house to welcome Hanlan, but he returned aboard the umpires' boat, where he collected twenty-five pounds for Elliott, and received presents to £58.

☞ AFTER THE CONTEST.

After the race Hanlan returned to Newcastle, where he was cordially welcomed by a large concourse. In response to repeated calls, Hanlan appeared at the window, and thanked the people warmly. He highly complimented Elliott. He was loudly cheered.

In the evening, at a concert, a splendid diamond ring was presented to Hanlan, on behalf of a number of the ladies and gentlemen of Newcastle.—Hanlan was received with cheers. He said he had encountered one of the best scullers he ever met. Elliott said he was satisfied that no man in England could beat Hanlan. He (Elliott), would row any man in the world, barring Hanlan, for 200 pounds a side.

Persons under the operation of Fellows' Hypophosphites should examine their blood under the microscope from time to time. Mark the increase of red and active particles and diminution of the white or dead ones; these observations are interesting and instructive.

COMMERCIAL CONDITION.—At the commencement of a cold, take a teaspoonful of Perry Davis' Pain Killer in a little milk and sugar, and the cold is more sudden than the cold.

The Ontario Government has during the past few days let a number of contracts for Provincial work, among them are:—Fences for the London Asylum, $2,200. Model School at Ottawa, $24,000. Addition to the School of Agriculture, Guelph, $2,950.

Father Dominic or Father Clementine—either will do—is the name of one fraud who is travelling about Western Ontario imposing upon unwary and charitable Catholics. He shuns the regular clergy, and frequently says mass in private houses, sometimes twice a day, something unknown to the Church.

The Catholic Church in Montreal was surprised yesterday morning by the announcement that owing to the financial difficulties of the church during the period of depression through which it is passing, the Catholic Bishop has determined to abandon this Episcopal palace and rent it or sell it, and accept a curacy in St. Henrie, thus saving the body ten thousand dollars per annum.

FIFTY THOUSAND POUNDS OF BEEF.—The Listowell Standard says:—On Wednesday Messrs. J. M. & A. Climie, of this town, shipped a drove of fat cattle 32 head in all, on board the G. W. R. They were undoubtedly the finest drove of animals that ever left this section. The condition of the animals may be inferred from the average weight of each which was 1,622 lbs., the gross weight amounting to upwards of 26 tons. The price paid was five cents per pound, live weight.

COMMERCIAL FAILURES.—From a report issued by the Mercantile Agency of Dun, Wiman & Co., we gather a comparative statement of the failures throughout Canada for the quarter ending on the 1st of March in the past three years, together with the amount of liabilities, as follows:—

	Failures	Liabilities
1877	572	$7,576,511
1878	555	9,100,929
1879	634	11,648,697

A short time ago a quarrel arose between the wife of Geo. Kilgore, and the wife of Alex. Kilgore, both residents on the 11th con., Dereham, about a matter of some horses of the former trespassing on the fields of the latter. In a battle that followed one of the women was beaten in a most brutal manner about the head and face with a stick, and she now lies in a very precarious condition. Her recovery is uncertain. Her assailant was taken prisoner on Sunday last, and on Monday was committed for trial at Woodstock.

MOTHERS.—Have you delicate, weakly children, who are always taking cold and subject to croup? Remember, there never was a case of Croup which did not originate in a cold. Aromatic Lung Balsam is your remedy.

She is not in love with that man whom she fondly praises, and of whom she offenses speaks. But if she talks to whom she never praises, and of whom she blushes when others mention his name, she can find no reason to suspect common-place question.

A Human Electric Battery.

A STRANGE STORY FROM THE TOWNSHIP OF RODNEY, ONT.

(From London Advertiser.)

We have been favored with the details of one of the strangest cases of which we ever heard, and one which is sure to excite a good deal of interest among medical men. The particulars of the case are given below:

It seem that about two years since a daughter of Mr. Richard Clare, Caroline by name, and then seventeen years of age living on lot 23, on the 2nd concession, of Rodney, was taken ill. Her disease could not be correctly diagnosed and had many peculiar features. Her appetite fell off, and she lost flesh till from a strapping girl of 130 pounds weight she barely weighed 87 pounds. There did not seem to be any organic complaint. The bodily functions were not impaired, and although she also less than formerly, the falling off in this respect was not such as in itself would alarm her friends. After the lapse of a few months she took to her bed. Then it was that a change occurred in her mental condition. Formerly she was noted rather for lack of conversational powers, but now fits or spasms would come over her, on the passing away of which her eyes would become set and glazed, her body almost rigid, and while in that state she would discourse eloquently, and give vivid descriptions of far-off scenes, far exceeding in their beauty anything which she had ever seen or presumably ever read of. On the passing away of this state she exhibited a great degree of hastitude and indisposition to move, and was taciturn and surly in reply to any questions. This continued till about a month since, when an extraordinary change occurred. The girl, although still not gaining flesh, appeared to rally. She became light-hearted and gay, and her friends anticipated an early release for her from the room to which she had been confined so long. Their expectations were not vain, for she is now about the house apparently as well bodily as ever. But a most remarkable development has taken place. She is constantly giving off electrical discharges, and seems to be a perfect battery. A person, unless possessed of the very strongest nerves cannot shake hands with her, nor can anyone place his hand in a pail of water with hers. By joining hands she can send a sharp shock through fifteen or twenty people in a room, and she possesses all the attraction of a magnet. If she attempts to pick up a knife the blade will jump into her hand, and a paper of needles will hang suspended from one of her fingers. So strongly developed is this electrical power that she cannot release from her touch any article of steel which she may have taken up. The only method yet found is for a second party to take hold of the article and pull while the girl strokes her own arm vigorously from the wrist upwards. On her entering a room a perceptible influence seizes hold of all others, and while some are affected to sleepiness, others are ill and fidgety till they leave, and even for a considerable time afterwards. A sleeping babe will wake up with a start at her approach, but with a stroke of her hand she can at once coax it to slumber again. Animals also are subject to her influence, and a pet dog of the household will be for hours at her feet as motionless as in death. A curious part of the phenomena is the fact that the electricity can be imparted by her to any article with which she habitually comes in contact. The other day a younger sister, while doing the house work, took up a pair of corsets belonging to Caroline, and on her hand touching the steel she was compelled to drop them with a loud cry and an exclamation to the effect that she had run a needle into her finger. Wooden spoons have had to be made for her, as she cannot touch metal. Altogether, the case is a most remarkable one, and attracts scores of visitors to the house of Mr. Clare. Medical men are especially interesting themselves, and it has been stated that Dr. Tye, of Thamesville, will read a paper on the subject at the meeting of the Provincial Medical Association which is to be held in London in the course of this summer. Mr Clare is the father of a family of seven children, none of whom except Caroline show any abnormal qualities.

A drunken Congressman said to Horace Greeley one day, 'I am a self-made man.' Then, sir, replied the philosophical Horace, 'the fact relieves the Almighty of a great responsibility.'

A negro preacher described hell as ice cold, where the wicked freeze to all eternity. Asked why, he said, 'Cause I don't care tell dem people nuffin else. Why, if I say hell is warm, some of dem old rheumatic niggers he want to start down dere to very first cross.'

Gentlemen of the jury, said Mr. Phelps to the twelve men of Worthington, Minn., who had convicted his daughter of selling cider without a license, "all I've got to say is, you're a set of scbistors, and you may wave your wings over that salmon-tinted maiden to her entire satisfaction, but that's the man!"
