WORK OF BARON HIRSCH

Flourishing Settlements Established in North and South America.

London, Aug. 26.—The Jewish Colonization Society has just issued a report on the administration of the trust left by the late Baron Maurice de Hirsch—$8,000,000—for the relief of Russian and other suffering Jews. Of the agricultural work of the association, the colonies in the Argentine constitute the central piece, but settlements have also been established in Canada and Brazil.

The Argentine colonies comprise about 730,000 acres, of which 100,000 were sown with grain last year, yielding a net profit of 1,000,000 francs. In addition, they own great quantities of cattle and poultry, and possess 22 schools.

From Roumania alone the society helped 7,000 Jews to cross the Atlantic to find new homes, and applications for emigration continue to pour in from all parts of Russia.

IF ATTACKED with cholera or summer complaint of any kind, send at once for a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, and use it according to directions. It acts with wonderful rapidity in subduing that dreadful disease that weakens the strongest man, and that destroys the young and delicate. Those who have used this cholera medicine say it acts promptly, and never fails to effect a thorough cure.

A LADY WRITES: "I was enabled to remove the corns, roots and branch, by the use of Holloway's Corn Cure." Others who have tried it have the same experience.

A new fuel successfully tested at Muncie, Ind., has been invented by Jacob Smith, a glassblower. It is said to possess more heat units per pound than either coal or wood; it can be manufactured and sold at a profit for half the cost of coal, and it does not smoke except when a strong draft is used. The fuel is made largely from the refuse of pulp mills.

Best ice cream and soda water are served at the Olympia. 91c

SAILOR TALK ABOUT SHARKS

THE MAN-EATING TIGER OF THE SEA IS AN ARRANT COWARD AFTER ALL

But It Is Best to Keep Away From the Finny Glutton Who Is No Respecter of Class, Creed or Color.

"A poor little flabby two-foot shark that I saw cast up on one of the Jersey beaches the other day brought a lot of shark memories back to me," said a youngish middle-aged man who put in a number of cruises, boy and man, in the navy. "I had quite a few shark experiences when I was on the old line of Government packets, and I found them out. I'm just as much afraid of a sea tiger now as you'd be of a ship's kitten lapping condensed milk out of a wardroom saucer on the galley deck, only, of course, I'd do a lot more moving when a shark was around and looking me over than I would in the presence of the kitten.

"The first time a shark ever got gay with me was when I was a tike of a 'prentice on the old Swatara, down in the harbor of Mazatlan, Mexico. I was a starboard side cleaner, and one afternoon was cocked in a swing, swabbing paint, and with my bare feet hanging not above a twelfth of a fathom from the water.

"All of a sudden I noticed a little glittering, goggle-eyed and snout-nosed fish a-rubbering around a lot in the little space of water directly below where my feet were swinging. He looked so perky and impudent that I was for throwing a cake of salt-water soap at him, but then I got to figuring that the cat could look at the king and it wasn't doing me any harm to have this little fish watch me polish off my cleaning station, and so I let him look, and presently I became so busy in trying to light a furtive cigarette about the officer of the deck spotting me that I forget about the little snout-nosed fish.

"Presently an old bo-sun's mate walked over to the starboard rail and looked down at me.

"'Hey, you cub,' he called down to me a minute after he had taken his position at the starboard rail, 'you'd better be gittin' them tootsies o' your'n some few away from th' water's edge if you don't want to go shy a pair o' feet for the balance o' the cruise. See that pilot fish a lookin' at you an' beckonin' his big shark mate down below?'

"This o'd bo-sun's mate was a great stringer to the 'prentices, and I was so sure that he was stringing me then that I barely looked up at him. It was a good thing that I didn't look up just then—I'd probably be in Snug Harbor, with two wooden legs now, if I had looked up at him just at that instant.

"For, continuing to look down as I worked, I saw something whitey-gray swishing to the surface of the blue water—something about 20 feet long, and the for'ard ten foot of it, as it seemed to me, all teeth, rows and rows of them—and then I got busy!

"'Shin up, you whelp!' the old bo-sun's mate bawled at me through the funnel that he made of his hands, and just as I grabbed the port rope swinging the bo-sun's chair and started to go hand over hand up to the rail, there was a shower of salt water that sounded like the breaking of a waterspout just below me—and I had my first close view of a belly-up maneater.

"He shot up above half a fathom above the water for me, but I already had a hold on the rail, and he missed me by quite a stretch. But as long as I was a side-cleaner I never swabbed paint from a bo-sun's chair after that with bare feet. My bare feet had been the bait for that big shark, guided by his little pal the pilot fish.

"About three years after that I got some more shark education at Papeete, Tahiti. A gang of seamen gunners—I was just out of my apprenticeship then—one day got permission of the officer of the deck to take a beach swim. So we lowered away the long boat, sped her to the coral beach, stripped and went in the buff, about eighteen of us.

"It was very hot and gummy weather, and so we were not thinking about sharks, although a thousand of them assembled about the ship every time the cook dumped a bucket of galley refuse through the swill tube. Anyhow, we were all pretty young. In addition to being young, I was chestier than I've ever been since, particularly because there wasn't a man or boy on board the old hooker that could teach me anything about swimming. That's how it came that, as soon as we jumped into the water on the Papeete beach that day, I proceeded to outswim all the rest, just to show 'em.

"I didn't turn to look back until I was about 300 yards from the beach. The only reason why I turned around then was because I heard a lot of noise from the beach.

"When I turned, I saw about a hundred naked natives and all of the young fellows from our ship lined up on the beach at the edge of the water, jumping up and down and waving their arms at me and yelling with all their might. But something else that I saw was a lot more important to me than all that. There were, as it seemed to me, about a million huge, wet and shiny fins between me and the beach. Some of them weren't more than ten yards from me. The fins were moving slowly on the surface of the water.

"I could see my pipe out in plain view then. I stopped and tread water and nervously slapped the surface of the water with my hands. I noticed that when I slapped the water particularly hard the sharks that were nearest to me sort of edged back and circled at a greater distance from me. So I kept on slapping the water.

"The sharks were waiting for me to get tired, that's all. They knew that I wouldn't start back right through them, and they knew, too, that I couldn't swim right ahead a few thousand knots to the Carolines or the Marquesas or the Fijis, and so they were content to take it easy, each figuring on getting what was coming to him when the moment arrived.

"Forty natives put out after me in one of those 60-foot long and 2-foot wide canoes with the outrigger arrangement familiar in the South seas, and, in the bow of the canoe, and directing them, was an old lime-juicer of a quartermaster from a British trading schooner in the harbor.

"'Splash, han' keep a-splashing', blast y'r blazing' heye-balls f'r a Yankee pup-heejit!' bawled the old lime-juicer at me as the canoe approached where I was in the middle of the semi-circle of waiting sharks, and with that I began to slap and kick the water like a sea skate fouled in the mud-hook chains.

"I was a lot rattled, but as the canoe approached I noticed that all of the natives that weren't helping to pull the canoe were leaning over the side and slapping and churning the water with all their might and main, and making all of the noise out of their countenances that they knew how to. That settled it. The sharks dispersed like a bunch of stampeded mountain goats, and I was hauled into the canoe and bawled at by the old lime-juicer for my bloomink Yankee heejiocy until we pulled up on the beach.

"That was when I first found out by actual experience what every deep-going sailor in the south seas knows, that the shark is the worst coward that swims, and that he is 20 times more afraid of a splashing human being in the water than a water moccasin is of a howling small boy in an inland creek."
