OLD WORLD NEWS OF INTEREST IN TELEGRAPH'S CONTINENTAL LETTER.

The Sentence of Lieut. Thieme for Duelling—Chamberlain-Von Buelow Incident—Drank Bottle Brandy and Died—The Hero of a Mine—A Medical Criminal.

Jena, Thuringia, Jan. 19.

Lieber M,—Lieut. Thieme has been sentenced to two years and three months imprisonment in a fortress for shooting the student Held in the recent duel at Jena. It is a great blow to his relatives, who consider the sentence most severe in view of past events. They are hoping that the kaiser will pardon him and permit his re-entry in the army.

Prince Henry's visit will of course interest you but your American papers will probably be filled with all the news on the question and it is unnecessary to deal with it here. The visit is formal in a way but has some diplomatic interest.

Chamberlain-Buelow.

The Chamberlain-Buelow controversy is closed and for good reasons.

There is an evident desire in the German press to close the Chamberlain-Buelow incident, in the belief that the continuance of a wordy feud would bring no advantage to either side, and would be more than likely to result in the fomentation of serious ill-feeling.

In commenting on Mr. Chamberlain's retort to the German chancellor, the newspapers show that the British colonial minister carefully avoided the point at issue, and again reproduced the statement in his Edinburgh speech, which caused all the trobule.

The Neueste Nachrichten says: "It cannot be the duty of foreign governments to open a campaign against the dissemination of false statements regarding occurrences in South Africa. It is the part of the English government to counteract them by allowing the truth to be known."

The Vossische Zeitung contradicts Mr. Chamberlain's assertion that the present movements are not directed against him, but are rather the outcome of a hatred of England cherished by the Germans for a century.

The Liberal organ continues: "There has always been parties in Prussia which felt little sympathy towards England, but with equal truth the same can be said of a portion of the English people towards Germans. But the mass, or, indeed, the majority of the German people has in the last century been anything but hostile towards England, and what value Germany placed on the maintenance of friendly relations with the island kingdom is well enough known from the utterances of Prince Bismarck."

Several papers interpret the attitude of a portion of the English press as being inspired by the necessity of wooing Germany's friendship. The Deutsche Tages Zeitung, for instance, says that the English are seeking to retain by threats at least a remnant of German friendship, and even adopting the method of flattering the kaiser, and pitting him against the wicked Von Buelow.

The agrarian organ adds: "We can show the English a much simpler and an absolutely sure way. Renounce all insults and attacks on Germany. Do not ask us to burn our fingers for English interests, and German friendship can be had at any moment."

The military critic of the Nationalist Taegliche Rundschau denounces Herr Liebermann von Sonnenberg's unworthy attack on the British army. Never, he says, should those difficult times be forgotten when the Prussian army fought with the English shoulder to shoulder.

The final debate in the reichstag on the first reading of the budget did not pass without a few references to the Chamberlain incident.

Herr Dr. Gradnaer, the Socialist deputy, said the indignation in Germany against the English methods of conducting the war in South Africa were based on information supplied by English reports.

Herr Lenzmann, Liberal, said the matter was completely settled by the chancellor's statement.

Herr Liebermann von Sonnenberg deprecated the manner in which the German press has dealt with his criticism in the reichstag of Mr. Chamberlain and the English war methods. Were the monarch with his chancellor, he said, but to emulate Haroun Alraschid, they would soon learn what people really thought of England.

What the reichstag thinks of the famous anti-Semite and Anglophobe it did not hesitate to show. A deep groan greeted him as he rose to speak, whereupon he looked proudly around on his fellow-members and said, "Oh, yes. I know quite well what a thorn I have been in your side for the last 12 years."

Officers' Wine Party.

A number of officers in the guards had sat long over their wine after a dinner party among themselves at Potsdam last week, when one of them for a wager drank a tumbler of cognac in 10 minutes. Lieut. Streiber, of the Lancers, son of a Thuringian millionaire, thought he could go one better by offering to drink a whole bottle of brandy.

He accomplished his object, but his comrades had to carry him home, and laid him on a bed. They forgot, however, to unfasten the high and tight-fitting collar of his military coat, and when the natural effects of imbibing such a quantity of alcohol ensued, Lieut. Streiber was literally choked to death.

His body was taken to the station on Friday with military honors, and a deputation of the officers of his regiment were present at the funeral yesterday.

German Trade.

Statistics published by the Germanischer Lloyd (Germany's "Lloyd's") show that the German shipbuilding trade has not been affected by the prevailing industrial depression. During the year 1901 the steamers in course of construction for Germany's mercantile marine had 624,000 aggregate tonnage, as compared with 584,000 in 1900, and 543,000 in 1899.

The German shipbuilding yards were so busy with home orders that not only had many foreign orders to be refused, but more German orders were given to foreign shipbuilding yards than has been the case for many years past.

The following example has been set at Gera: Prince Reuss has cancelled all his court festivities owing to so many persons being out of employment in the principality. His highness recommends that the money that would have been spent in festivities be given to the suffering poor.

At a Nuremberg assembly of 2,000 persons out of work they severely censured the unheeding attitude of the state and the municipal authorities towards the prevalent distress, and drew up a petition begging the town council immediately to start relief works.

Crushing the Poles.

Commenting on the imperial chancellor's recent announcement of policy towards the Poles, the Socialist Vorwaerts writes: "To judge from the chancellor's resounding words we are on the brink of an internal Boer war, and the districts inhabited by the Poles are to be transformed into concentration camps.

"No reasoning person believes in the Polish danger, but a Germanising danger exists which will expose German civilization to scorn and hatred.

"Nobody, least of all the Poles, trifles with national matters—that is, the right to retain national characteristics. Count von Buelow will soon learn that all he will attain with his policy will be to harden Polism to granite."

A court martial at Erfurt has sentenced to five and a half years' imprisonment a soldier who had plundered in the China war.

When two different persons do the same thing it is evidently not always considered, the same thing, for preparations are being made to set up at Potsdam the famous astronomical instruments which so long stood on the walls of Pekin. In spite of the fact that the Germans said they went to fight the Boxers, these instruments were claimed as legal plunder taken in war time.

Mining Disaster.

A fearful mining disaster occurred at Bruex in Bohemia on Tuesday. It appears that the excessive moisture of the soil was the cause of the catastrophe. First, the sides of the shaft gave way, then the water came pouring into the mine with fearful rapidity, and the 43 men who are missing were cut off in a part of the mine where there is no alternative way out.

They must have been drowned almost instantaneously. It was only a lucky chance that enabled the remaining 80 miners who were at work at the time to escape by another shaft.

Within a few minutes not only was the whole mine flooded, but the water was a hundred feet deep in the shaft.

There were electric contrivances all over the mine which gave alarm signals when the water got above a certain level These rang, and Engineer-in-Charge Binder, who was in the offices, rushed into the mine.

Nine miners were waiting at the bottom. He ordered them all into a cage, which could not bear another pound weight.

Giving the signal for the cage to be hoisted, he himself remained below, though the sound of the rushing waters must have warned him of his certain fate. Two minutes later he was caught by the rising flood. He was a young man, with a promising career before him.

The Prague correspondent of the Fermdenblatt sends a telegraphic message which constitutes a grave indictment against the mine owners. He states that signs of danger have been perceptible in the mine for some time past. This is evident from the fact that special precautions were taken, though they were insufficient. In the circumstances work ought to have been suspended altogether.

Austria's Parnell.

An exciting by-election took place on Wednesday in Trautenau, a division of Bohemia. It will be remembered that the Pan-German leader, Wolff, announced his retirement from politics six weeks ago owing to an indiscretion in private life. His constituents, however, determined to re-elect him.

Wolff promised to accept re-election if they returned him without his taking any part in the contest.

Seeing his re-election probable, Wolff's enemies began circulating slanders which if true, would have rendered him utterly unfit to represent any constituency. Wolff came out of his retirement, went down to the constituency, and delivered a series of fighting speeches in reply to his traducers.

Polling closed at 3 o'clock Wednesday afernoon, and Wolff was re-elected by an absolute majority of 85 over his two opponents.

Medical Burglar.

A remarkable crime committed by Dr. Tomka, a celebrated ear specialist, now occupies public attention both at Vienna and at Buda Pesth, where he lived.

Dr. Tomka, besides an enormous income, had a fortune of $75,000, which he kept at home in a safe, insuring it against burglary for the full amount. Recently Dr. Tomka dismissed all his servants, locked up the house, and came to Vienna for a week's visit.

During his absence the house was entered, the safe broken, and the whole fortune stolen. Dr. Tomka claimed the insurance, but an investigation conducted by the company led to curious discoveries.

Dr. Tomka foreseeing exposure, threw himself from the sixth floor window, and was killed on the spot. He left a letter confessing that he himself had committed the burglary, hoping thereby to obtain the insurance money and double his fortune by one bold stroke.

"My uncontrollable greed of gold," wrote Dr. Tomka, "has been my curse."

On Thursday it was officially announced that the Russian and Austrian governments had been conferring with a view to taking protective measures against the new German tariff.

Friday's Extrablatt, of Vienna, asserts that the official announcement contained only half the truth, and that Austria and Russia had agreed on a definite scheme to counteract the German tariff. This scheme includes a combination of all countries likely to suffer from the German tariff. The difficulties of the scheme are great, but not insuperable.

Italy.

Eusapia Paladino, the famous Neapolitan medium, is exciting keen interest by her spiritist seances at Genoa.

Scientists and men of letters flock round her, among them being Prof. Cesare Lombroso, who has come from Turin expressely, and who during the seance admitted to hearing his dead mother's voice calling the name "Cesare," and adding, "my son."

The learned mathematician is said to have exclaimed, "Now the Universities grant doctorates of physical and natural sciences. Before the end of the century they will grant them in psychical and supernatural sciences."

According to the revised census returns, the population of Italy is stated to be 32,968,307. This means an increase of four and a half millions since 1881, the year of the last census.

An attempt has been made to estimate approximately the number of persons in the kingdom who cannot read or write. The exact c(vgcafkdeaqibanddfifisaat The exact calculation has yet to be made, but taking the county towns it has been found that out of 3,673,290 inhabitants above the age of 15, 1,132,257, or 31.6 per cent., are illiterates.

If this proportion is found to hold good for the remainder of the population, then illiterates in Italy have decreased from 17 millions to 10½ millions.

Water Famine in Gold Camp Averted.

Denver, Col., Jan. 31.—The water famine in the Cripple Creek district which seriously threatened operations has been averted by the city of Colorado Springs giving 70,000,000 gallo ns of water to the gold camp. The city's storage reservoirs near the summit of Pike's Peak are so situated that by digging a very short ditch water could be diverted to the western slope. This was done, and several large mines, that had already shut down, started again.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne

—DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY, to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and as the composition of CHLORODYNE cannot possibly be discovered by analysis (organic substances defying elimination) and since his formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

Owing to the variations of the Canadian climate, considerable allowance must be made in all fences for contraction and expansion, which makes an ordinary wire fence unserviceable, as when it expands it becomes so loose as to prove of little value. Note the continuous coil in this Page Wire Fence is made of "Page" wire, which is twice as strong as ordinary wire. This makes it elastic and self-regulating. The Page Wire Fence is made of "Page" wire, which is twice as strong as ordinary wire. Prices are particularly low this season. 50,000 miles of Page fences now in use. We also make Gates, Ornamental Fences and Poultry Netting. The Page Wire Fence Co., Limited, Walkerville, Ont. 2
