EXTRAORDINARY FIDELITY IN A DOG—On Monday last a man, a stranger, accompanied by a dog, walking into Mr. James McDonald's hat store, on Thames Street, and purchased a hat. On leaving his store, he threw his hat in the street, and went away. The faithful dog which accompanied him, took up his position beside the hat, and remained there, it is believed, all night, and until Thursday afternoon, when the circumstance of the dog being in the same spot became one of general remark by Mr. McDonald and others who had observed the dog guarding the hat. In order to ascertain whether or not the old tile was truly the cause of the dog's solicitude and watchfulness, the hat was removed to another spot, whither the dog proceeded, and at the hour we write sits on the guard. That dog is worth its weight in silver. The owner is unknown, but this paragraph may reach his eye, and be the means of restoring the faithful animal to its master.—Ingersoll Chronicle.

The Saturday 'Review' does not seem to look with much complacency upon Northern professions of regard for negroes. A recent number of it says: "We hear great nonsense talked in England about the American war and the anti slavery sentiments of the Federal leaders. The whole thing is a gross fraud. Not one in a hundred of the Northerners—perhaps not one in ten hundred—cares, or ever has cared, for the negro in the 'man or brother' sense of the word. Put aside some Massachusetts men—to whom he has out of sheer perverseness, become an object of intense anxious solicitude—the rest of the Federal soldiers regard him with indifference, contempt, or dislike. If this were not the general feeling towards him, he would not be the pitiable creature that he is in their towns and cities."

A BRUTAL OUTRAGE.—An altercation occurred last Wednesday morning in a tavern at the village of Victoria, township of Innisfil, between a man and a boy, whose names we have not learned, which resulted in a scuffle. The man did not apparently look upon the fracas as serious, and endeavored to escape from the boy, but the latter pounced upon him with the agility of a monkey, and bit off the whole cartilage of his nose below the bone. The beastly proceeding was witnessed by a number of spectators, who thought not of interfering till the sickening and repulsive assault had been committed.—[Barrie Examiner.

MIDGE IN THE WHEAT.—The Galt Reporter regrets to learn that the wheat fly has made its appearance in great numbers in Beverly and South Dumfries, and in some places in our own neighborhood. In the vicinity of the village of Troy, Beverly, we are informed that the fields are literally covered with this destructive insect, and of course the wheat is suffering in proportion. We are most sadly in want of rain just now in this section. It is now several weeks since we had even of any account, and the ground is baked into the consistency of bricks. The consequence is that the crops are suffering severely, and we hardly know what to say about them at all.
