POOR DOCUMENT

ON SOAP,

IN RELATION TO THE COMPLEXION.

FROM AN ARTICLE BY

Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E.,

Lecturer on Physiology and Health under the "Combe Trust;" Editor of "Health."

"One important caution should be given, and that is concerning the use of soaps. I would strongly advise all who care for their skin to eschew the use of common soap, which simply roughens and injures the skin, and, if you will be advised by me, I would say never buy those artificially coloured and odoriferous abominations commonly sold under the name of 'Scented' or 'Fancy Soaps' which are the frequent causes of skin eruptions. If I am prepared to recommend any one soap to you, as a satisfactory and scientifically prepared article, I would certainly advise you to buy and use 'Pears' Soap.' Not merely from personal use can I recommend this soap, but I am well content to shelter myself under the names and authority of the late Sir Erasmus Wilson, F.R.S., President of the Royal College of Surgeons; of Doctor Stevenson Macadam, or of Professors Redwood and Attfield, the eminent analytical and chemical lecturers at the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, who testify to its entire purity. Furthermore, I believe it to be very economical, for it contains no free water, and in this respect differs from all other soaps; hence a cake of 'Pears' is really all soap and not soap and water. I know cases of irritable skin which the whole tribe of much-vaunted 'Fancy Soaps' failed to allay, but which disappeared under the use of Pears' Soap, and for the nursery and for the delicate skin of infancy no better or more soothing soap can possibly be used. There can be no doubt that in respect of the care of children, attention to the skin is specially required. If common soaps are irritating to the skin of the adult, (as they unquestionably are), they are doubly and trebly injurious to the delicate skin of the infant and young child. I can vouch that the soap I am recommending is not merely a safe but an advantageous one. It does not irritate the skin; but, while serving as a detergent and cleanser, also acts as an emollient."

JUST BEFORE

you commence your next washing, send over to your grocer and get some "SUNLIGHT" SOAP, and follow the printed directions on the wrapper. You will find that at the washtub is deprived of all its terrors where this soap is used, and you will never think of using any other soap afterwards. It is equally good for every article of wear that will wash, whether worn by father,

THE BATTLE

CHAPTER X.

MR. TRENT'S EXTRAVAGANCE.

It was on her way home that Ruthanna called at the chemist's; and she was not a little astonished to see her father seated on one of the two Austrian bent-wood chairs which were supplied for customers. Mr. Honeymoon' junior, was behind the counter, talking with him.

"Me and my family are re-spectable and re-spected," Mr. Trent was observing as she entered. He must have come himself for the poppy-heads for her mother's toothache, Ruthanna concluded, and was about to withdraw, believing herself to have been unobserved.

"Ruthanna come in!" shouted the ironworker as the door swung to. She obeyed.

Mr. Honeymoon, who was a young man of some ability and at least the usual amount of penetration, wore a look of bored amusement on his face, if one can use such a combination of words. He was amused, and he was certainly bored.

"Her's getting quite a woman, isn't her?" said Mr. Trent jocosely of his daughter; and then he added, with an air of unequalled generosity, "Thee shalt have some new things, and be turned into long frocks."

The girl stood silent, her eyes fixed on a glass case of toilet requisites. She felt hurt, she could not have explained why, at being discussed before this man.

"Ha! ejaculated young Honeyman, "they do grow up, don't they! I suppose, now, one of these rising young iron-workers will be marrying your daughter after a bit?

Mr. Trent rose from his chair and pushed up the unstarched corners of his collar before he replied, "Me and my family has got money for a holiday,—or for a marriage potion. My wench mun look above an iron-worker."

"But don't you think," laughed the chemist, "that if you teach her to look down on an iron-worker for a husband she may end by looking down on an iron-worker for a father?"

Mr. Trent looked uneasy, and abstractedly squeezed a scent-vaporizer, covering himself with essence of white rose. He was about to reply, when a customer entered.

"Have thee got the poppy-heads?" Ruthanna inquired of her father.

"Poppy-heads?" repeated Mr. Trent, abstractedly: 'I know about no poppy-heads: I came in about a little circuit business."

Ruthanna purchased the poppy-heads, and then withdrew with her father. "She really is an uncommonly pretty girl," thought the chemist to himself as they left the shop.

"Now, Ruthanna," said her father, as they strode along the green, "we're going to Johnson's shop, and I'm a-going to buy you a frock made of velvet, and things for a hat, and thee shalt have a new jacket."

Ruthanna was to much surprised to say anything. It was clear that her father meant just what he had said, for as soon as they reached the shop he entered it and of course she followed. "I want some velvet for a dress for my little wench," he said to the shopman,—"not vetlevina, but regular velvet. I've money in my pocket to pay down. We'as money, me and my family."

"What color would you like?" asked the shopman.

"Her looks nice in blue," responded Mr. Trent, promptly.

"We have a good piece of navy blue velvet," said the shopman. "It is new in, and very good: it came by mistake."

"We'll have it," said Mr. Trent. "the price don't matter. How much will it take for a dress made fashionable and long?"

"Are you going to give our new dressmaker the making of it?" inquired the shopman; "for I'll have her in to help us if you are."

"Oh, yes' we will have her, said Mr. Trent, boisterously.

Then followed a consultation, which ended in Ruthanna's being in prospective possession of a new dress and jacket of blue velvet, the latter to be trimmed with gray fur, and a Gainsborough hat of the same material, which was to be decorated with gray feathers.

As Ruthanna walked home at her father's side, her heart was beating wildly. What could it mean, this sudden generosity on the part of her father? Could it be that he suspected Mr. Calverley's love for her and approved? She almost felt it must be so; yet she had often heard him express strong opinions against a girl of the people marrying a gentleman. If he had changed his views, what had brought it about? Just a few good-natured and meaningless words from old Mr. Honeyman, the circuit steward; that was all. Only Ruthanna could never have guessed this.

Mr. Honeyman was looked up to by the Methodists of this neighborhood as being in a most superior station. For one thing, he "did nothing," which to the popular mind is synonymous with being a gentleman. He had made money in the colonies, and had returned to his native village and built himself a fine house, His son Howard had been educated at King Edward's grammar-school at Walsall. Then his father had set him up as a chemist,—just as the stationer, who also kept the post-office, was the only stationer.

But no thought of young Honeyman troubled Ruthanna. She knew all about him, of course,—i.e., what the rest of the village knew: for instance, that in his school-boy days (and these were not so long ago) and while he was learning his business at Southall's at Birmingham he had played the usual number of pranks, and sown perhaps a trifle less than the usual percentage of wild oats. One other thing Ruthanna knew which every one did not, and that was that the late vicar's daughter—the one that played the organ in church— had gone into a convent owing to this Mr. Honeyman's coldness. Haydn Blackhouse had told Ruthanna this one day, and had stated that only he and another knew it.

We don't ourselves vouch for the reason, but that the girl did go into a convent is a fact. Let it be granted, then (as Euclid says), that Howard Honeyman was a young man not unlikely to inspire the tender passion in the fair sex. But, though his father was circuit steward, the young chemist did not attend the Methodist chapel, but the church on the green; so he did not see so much of the iron-worker's pretty daughter as he might otherwise have done. He thought of her a good deal on this evening, however, for he had really looked at her, and she had a lovely face.

When she reached home with her father, and he told Mrs. Trent of his purchases, there was such an outburst as may easily be imagined. No woman likes her particular province to be invaded by men,—or scarcely any. Ruthanna's wardrobe was undoubtedly her affair,

"A nice sight her'll look," exclaimed Mrs. Trent, after a somewhat vague outburst of ten minutes, duration, "with a long frock on on Sundays and short of a week-day!"

"Can't thee splice a piece on to her day-frock?" inquired the iron-worker, anxiously,

"Splice a piece on to thee!" cried the mother, derisively. "Thee'll just have to buy her a long frock for days too, now!"

Mrs. Trent thought this remark a "clincher," for, as a rule, her husband was not particularly anxious to part with his money. To her surprise, however, he took out some gold and flung it on the table, saying, "If that be all, missus, it's soon settled."

That did not settle it, however, and nothing did till Mrs. Trent had obtained the price of a black silk gown for herself. The peace reigned.

As they were all departing for their bedrooms, Abraham whispered to his sister, "I'm so glad thee will have a pretty frock, Ruthanna; and thy little short curls do become thee rarely!"

It was after all the household was asleep that a peculiar wail broke upon the night. It woke Joseph, who sat up and listened. It came from outside, and appeared to be right under his window. Slowly and carefully he lifted the blind, and in the dim starlight could discern a figure in a curious attitude. He listened again. Yes, there could be no doubt about it,—that figure was performing upon a flute!

Joseph cautiously raised the sash of his window. Then the strains of "My Lodging is on the Cold Ground" unmistakably greeted him. Joseph was, as we have said, not naturally kind-hearted and what he did on this occasion was in keeping with his character. He selected one of the geranium-pots which adorned his window-sill,—the one immediately over the unfortunate flutist,—and gave it a push.

There was a crash; then silence. Joseph listened for a few moments, then put down the window quietly and retired once more to his couch, chuckling as he did so.

There was no more music that night, and on the following Sunday Hayden's flute was not heard at the Brooktown chapel. He had accidentally broken it, he explained. He also wore a piece of plaster on one of his hands.

On both Friday and Saturday Ruthanna met Cecil on the heath, and he fed her pretty little unsuspicious soul with loving words and caresses. And on both occasions John Ford passed them like a shadow, and they saw him not.

Telephonic Suggestions.

A "telephone girl" who knows suggests these rules for people who use the telephone: If you have a telephone in your office or store, ring up "Central" and then go and wait on a customer. Always speak in an undertone. Be careful to make "Central" ask you over what you want. If she does not hear you, tell her to "wake up" or "take the cotton out of her ears." Put your "ping" in before a storm, and be sure not to take it out again, but go around to the central office and offer to lick the whole telephone company for neglect of duty. Take your time in answering your bell, or, what is better, do not answer it at all, but in about half an hour ring up and ask who called you, and get mad if "Central" has forgotten who it was. She has nothing else to do but remember. Allow everybody who wants to, to use your telephone. Hang the receiver big end up, as in this way it gets full of dust, which makes another cause for complaint, bang on the transmitter with a lead pencil, as thought you intend to knock it through the wall. This invariably makes it talk better. Refuse to pay toll messages, and if you are on a line with some one, always listen to their conversation, and be sure to want to use the line while they are doing so. Whenever you see the manager tell him that if he cannot give you a better telephone or get that one fixed you will throw the whole thing out of the window. When the inspector comes, deny that you have ever complained of the telephone, and say that it works like a charm. Paste this on your telephone for future reference.

Rest Cometh After All.

Though friends desert you in the race for fame,
Though fortune leaves you for some other goal;
Though you are blameless, yet receive much blame
Though sorrow dwelleth deep within your soul,
Though life has been a failure, and you plod
Footsore and weary o'er this earthly ball,
Still if you have a faith, a trust in God,
Rest cometh after all.

Rest cometh after all, then higher climb;
Rest cometh after all, though wealth depart;
The world may blame you, yet rest sublime
Shall drive the sorrow from your heart of hearts;
Though life's sad failures make you onward plod,
Sin-sick and weary till you reach the pall,
Still if you have a faith, a trust in God,
Rest cometh after all.

Rest cometh after all, then let us go
Forth to the duties of this fleeting life,
Bearing our Master's burdens, for we know
In Him is comfort and a rest from strife
And worldly sorrow; let our faith be shod
With love and mercy, while we ever call
Our friends to an eternal, mighty God.
Rest cometh after all.

Rest cometh after all, then as we seek
A higher life a better, grander road,
Let us of Jesus as a Saviour speak,
For he will help us bear life's load
Of cares and sin, of doubt and unbelief,
Of earthly struggles, be they great or small.
We thank Thee, God, that life and trials are brief,
Rest cometh after all.

Home Without a Mother.

The room's in disorder,
The cats on the table,
The flower-stand upset, and the mischief to pay;
And Johnny is screaming
Afraid of his able,
For nothing goes right when mamma's away.

What a scene of discomfort and confusion home would be if mamma did not return. If your wife is slowly breaking down, from a combination of domestic cares and female disorders, make it your first business to restore her health. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription is without a peer as a remedy for feeble and debilitated women, and is the only medicine for the cure of maladies known as female diseases which is sold under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers that it will give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. It is a positive cure for the most complicated cases of womb troubles.

An English Train Derailed.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Another collision occurred at Taunton to-day, near the scene of the recent fatal accident on the Great Western Railroad. A number of carriages were derailed but no one was injured.

There is comfort for the man with a prematurely gray beard in Buckingham's Dye, because it never fails to color an even brown or black as may be desired.

A Call Accepted.

DANVERS, Mass., Nov. 14.—The Rev. Cephas B. Lynn has been called to the position of assistant secretary of the general convention of Universalists of the United States and has accepted.

The combination of ingredients found in Ayer's Pills render them peculiarly active as well as cathartic. For this reason they are the best medicine for people of costive habit, as they restore the natural action of the bowels, without debilitating.

Raising the Cynthia.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—It has been decided that the Dominion Line steamer sank by collision with the Polynesian, will be raised as soon as possible.

Both air and water abound in microbes, or germs of disease, ready to infect the debilitated system. To impart that strength and vigor necessary to resist the effect of these pernicious atoms, no tonic blood-purifier equals Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fatal Railway Collision.

PITTSBURG Nov, 14.—A collision occurred on the Pennsylvania road near Florence, Pa. this morning between the first and second section of the western express, killing two passengers and injuring eleven others.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 14.—The first and second sections of the Western express on the Pennsylvanian road collided near Florence, Penn., at 7 o'clock this morning killing two passengers, Henry D. Minot of 39 Court street, Boston, and Mrs, S. N. Angell of Washington, D. C. Eleven other passengers were injured. The accident was caused by a heavy fog which prevented the engineer from seeing the first section in time to stop his train.

"How to Cure All Skin Diseases."

Simply apply "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. LYMAN SONS & CO., Montreal, wholesale agents.

A lady yesterday purchased from an old colored woman in the market some parsley and then asked the vender to bring her some roots of the herb.

"Parsley root!" exclaimed the old woman. "Parsley root!" Why ma'am, I wouldn't give you a piece of parsley root for $5."

"Why not? Is it as dear as all that?"

"No ma'am," was the answer, "but you can't get me to sell or give you any parsley root. Dont you know if I brought you a piece there would be a death in one of our families in less than a month?"

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging, most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. LYMAN SONS & CO., Montreal, wholesale agents.

Fully three-fourths of the babies of the world go naked until they get to be five or six years old. The Canadian Indians keep their babies naked up to that point, and as for the little Coreans, they wear nothing but a short shirt until they are as old as our schoolboys. Little Egyptians of both sexes trot around without any clothes on, and the poorer section of the Chinese children are often without clothes. I have seen quite large boys and girls naked in Havana, Cuba and Southern California, or rather on the Californian Peninsula.

If your house is on fire, you put water on the burning timbers, not on the smoke. And if you have catarrh you should attack the disease in the blood, not in your nose. To do this, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, which permanently cures catarrh.

The strike of employes of the Concord & Montreal railway came to an end today. The strikers were paid and discharged and new men engaged to fill their places. The action of the men last night was condemned by citizens. No further trouble is anticipated. Work is going on as heretofore.

A FAVOURABLE VERDICT.

Mr. J. S. George, Tottenham, Ont. writes:—I have been troubled with catarrh for five years, being the last claim advertised I procured a bottle, and although I have only used part of it, I do not hesitate to pronounce it the best remedy in the world for catarrh. It is easy and pleasant to use, instantly giving relief, stops the dropping from the head into the throat and removes all the symptoms of catarrh and cold in the head. In fact if the directions are faithfully followed, nothing but a sure and permanent cure can be the result.

The statement of the Bank of Montreal for the half year ending 31st October, shows the profits to have been sufficient to pay a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, and an increase to the profit and loss balance, to be carried forward, by $72,000.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Lord George Hamilton, first lord of the English admiralty, authorized the navy comptroller to flatly deny Admiral Elliot's statement that the Serpent's engines were altogether too powerful for the frame. Lord George declares the Serpent was amply strong enough to bear the strain of her engines.

Women Flirt with Their Arms.

"There is no man in town knows so much about the arms of New York ladies as I do." The speaker was the tall policeman on one of the crowded diagonal crossings of Broadway. It is his daily business to help femininity over the pavement. "I have been here for many years now," said the fortunate copper, "and between you and me the women are getting finer every day. It's a fact, that they are putting up big muscle lately. I don't know whether it's the gymnasium or beefsteaks, but where a big and hard arm on a girl was a rarity ten years ago it is not a scarce thing now. Did you ever know that an arm can say a good deal? I believe there's as much eloquence in a girl's arm as in her eyes. Perhaps every one couldn't tell a girl's character by catching hold of her arm, not being used to so many kinds of 'em; but being in the business so long, I can size 'em up right off. I can tell when a woman is timid, when she's nervy, when she's hard or tender hearted, and when her circulation is good. The timid girl kind of grips your hand by pressing her arm close against her body, and when anything startles her a spasmodic shock goes all through her and ascends into you as far as the shoulder. On the contrary, if a woman is plucky and independent she keeps her elbow well thrust out, and seldom gives any indications that she appreciates your efforts to protect her. I can't say that I admire plucky women. Some of them also flirt with their arms. Now I'm pretty well-behaved and old chap, but darn me if there ain't a lot of giddy things flutter across here every day that send all sorts of telegraphic signs through their arms at me whenever I help them over the street."

A Sudden Move.

Stranger (in town)—Does a man named Stackhouse live here?

Resident—No, he moved into the next State.

A Bull's Eye Shot.

The latest piece of local slang is to describe a man who is cranky with having "fly-wheels in his head."

Oh, the Horrors of Slavery.

"I would not have a slave to till my ground—
To carry me and fan me while I sleep,
And tremble when I wake, for all the wealth
That sinews bought, or soul have ever earned."

Such were the sentiments and feelings of one of England's greatest poets, regarding the slave trade which existed in America during the poet's time.

Few people imagine that there exists to-day a state of slavery in many respects more terrible than that for which the United States shed so much precious blood, and expended hundreds of millions of dollars.

This species of slavery existing today, is felt by the individual, the family, the community, and the nation; and the emancipation of the slaves must entirely upon the efforts of individuals and families.

The men and women held in bondage, are those who daily suffer from disordered brain, unstrung nerves, sleeplessness, irritability, headache, rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, and imperfect circulation. Many of these sufferers are weary of life, and in their apparent hopeless condition are calling on death to give them relief.

That great emancipator and liberator, Paine's Celery Compound, offers release from woes, and gives sound health and strength, new aspirations, new joys, and length of years.

Paine's Celery Compound, points with pride to the wonders accomplished in the past in Canada, the United States, as well as in Europe. The victims it has rescued cannot be numbered, and many thousands could willingly bear testimony to their miraculous deliverance. Paine's Celery Compound is used by rich and poor, old and young; and medical men everywhere have given it their sanction, known to science to build up the human body with strong nerves and a sound healthy mind.
