AN IRREPARABLE LOSS

Such Is Death of Mr. A. B. Cox to Young Men of the City

At a special meeting of the directors of the Young Men's Christian Association, held yesterday afternoon, the following resolution in reference to the death of the late Mr. A. B. Cox was passed:

"The board of directors of the Young Men's Christian Association learn with great sorrow of the death of Mr. Alfred Beverley Cox, ex-president of this association. In all his touch and contact with men, he transmitted the virtue and impress of that ideal manliness which has its base upon Christianity and principle and honor. His character and life have given inspiration to better living on the part of multitudes of men in this city, in whose hearts and lives his influence and virtue still live, and will forever live, an imperishable monument. His loss to the young men of our city is an irreparable one, and to our sister association, the St. John's Athletic Club, whose founder and president he was, and especially to his bereaved relatives, this board extends its heartfelt sympathy for the loss of this good man."

A QUIET WEDDING

Miss Minnie Gordier, Becomes the Wife of Mr. M. J. Phalin.

A quiet marriage was solemnized this morning at St. Peter's Cathedral by Father Aylward, when Miss Minnie Gordier, eldest daughter of Mr. M. S. Gordier, of Waterloo street, became the wife of Mr. M. J. Phalin, formerly of this city, now of Detroit. The bridesmaid was Miss Marie Strenberg, and the groomsman, Mr. George Wagner, of Detroit. The bride was the recipient of a large number handsome presents. A luncheon was served immediately after the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Phalin left for Detroit on the 11:15 a.m. train, where they will reside. They will have the best wishes of their many friends in this city.

STRUCK BY STREET CAR

Little Boy Had a Very Close Call For His Life.

A small boy, who was playing on Horton street this morning, had a narrow escape for his life. As a car approached, the child walked out into the road, apparently oblivious to everything but his playing. The motorman thought that he would be able to get past the child, but was unable to do so, and the boy ran directly into the middle of the car. It happened that the car was going sufficiently fast to throw the child out of danger from the wheels. As it was, he received a nasty cut in the mouth and was badly bruised. So close was the escape that his clothes were torn by the gearing.

The street car men state that every day children have narrow escapes from being run over, and they wish that parents would keep a more watchful eye over the little ones.

FOR FLOWER LOVERS

London Horticultural Society is Giving Out Premiums.

The annual distribution of premiums to the members of the London Horticultural Society is being made this week from the store of Gammage & Sons, Dundas street. The distribution is being conducted by the directors of the society, and each member receives eleven varieties of asters and two of perennial phlox.

The selection of the seeds to be distributed is agreed upon by the directors of the society, and the object in giving out such a large variety of asters is explained in a circular sent out to the members of the society. It states that at the Wesern Fair in September the directors wish to make a fine display of asters, and would like to receive at least 100 blooms from each member. The directors are not confining their work to the members of the society alone. They are anxious to interest others, and in order to do so they have sent with each premium an extra packet of seed to be handed to some friend.

MUTILATED MONEY

Much Damaged Silver Circulating—What To Do With It.

There is an unusually large number of damaged five-cent pieces in circulation at present.

A business man said today that nearly every coin of that denomination had a hole punched in it, and that many of the ten and twenty-five-cent pieces had been damaged in the same way.

In a package containing $2 50 in five-cent pieces, which he got at the bank the other day, the business man in question found that there was scarcely one that was in good order. Asked as to the cause of the mutilation of the coins, he said, it must be the practice of some to cut holes in them and then sell the metal. This is a punishable offense, a term in Kingston being the maximum, and it may be that some day, not far off, some person who has been eager to add to his riches in this way may find himself doing time.

One way of putting a stop to the practice was suggested by the business man, and that was to refuse to accept the coins unless they were in good condition.

A common hare skin can be made to represent a valuable dark brown fox, and to such perfection that only an expert may discover the difference. A common Arctic fox skin, original cost only $2.50, transported to Leipzig, is deftly turned into a first-class dark brown fox worth $30 to $50. A marmot skin, after treatment, successfully represents a sable skin; a rabbit is made to imitate a fur seal skin.

RESEARCH REGARDING THE FISHER FAMILY

CONNECTIONS OF ALFRED THE GREAT—CHANGES IN NAME.

The name of Fish or Fisher, being that one of the employments of men, is found in nearly all nations, Hooker, Pitchers (Percheurs), Langelier, Poissonier and Cabôt, at first sight do not seem to be names belonging to this family, yet they all claim the same origin. Chabot is a name in some parts of France used to designate a fisherman, hence came Cabot. Sebastian Cabot, therefore, may be claimed as an ancestor by the Fisher family.

Fysher is an old spelling of the name, and "Flisher" is another form. In a will dated 1674, Joshua Flisher, of Medfield, Mass., leaves to "John flisher son of my son John flisher £5." To Vigilance flisher, my grandchild son of my son Joshua flisher, 40 sh." The executors of this will are "my beloved cosen Daniel flisher and Joshua Fisher, my grande child"—so curiously free and easy was the mode of spelling in those primitive days!

The Fishers claim descent from royalty, their genealogical tree tracing pedigree back to Alfred the Great. Descent from Eustace de Monte Alto, the "great Norman Hunter," also traced. He was a follower of William the Conqueror, who gave him the manors of Montault where descendants still reside. The great castle is called Montalt, the Mold or Mould Castle. Maud is another corruption of the original name of Monte Alto, and has often been bestowed, as a Christian name, upon masculine members of the Fisher family.

For example, there was Jabez Maud Fisher, whose appearance at a certain coffee house in London was awaited nightly with great impatience, because he could repeat all the speeches of the preceding night in parliament on the all-absorbing topic of American affairs. This was during the war of the revolution, when both houses of parliament forbade the printing of speeches in the newspapers.

One distinguishing ancestor of the Fisher family was John Fisher, bishop of Rochester, who was chancellor of the University of Cambridge from 1501 to 1547, and helped to found the colleges of Christ and St. John. He procured for Erasmus the chair of Greek at the university. Bishop Fisher and Sir Thomas More were beheaded at the same time and for the same cause.

Minister, author, artist and poet was Rev. Jonathan Fisher of Blue Hills, Maine. He was called in 1796 to the Presbyterian church of that town, where he remained forty-one years, or until retired on account of age. It is recorded of him that besides being a faithful minister, "he was a good farmer, carpenter, clock-maker, portrait and landscape painter, wood engraver, poet and author. He was well versed in Hebrew, wrote 3,000 sermons was an early riser, a great walker and a faithful Christian.

One of his books, "Scripture Animals," was illustrated with pictures of every animal, bird and insect mentioned in the Bible, these were engraved on wood by himself. When preaching at a salary of less than $300 a year, he brought up a family of seven children, giving them all good educations. In round numbers, his yearly income was $200 and thirty cords of wood.

One of the ancestors of the Fisher line in this country was John Fisher, who accompanied William Penn on his first voyage in the good ship Welcome. It is supposed that John Fisher came from Lancashire. Another progenitor of the American line was Joseph Fisher, born in Saxony in 1734. He came to this country when young, and settled in New Jersey. During the revolution he enlisted in the militia of that State.

Thomas Fisher was also a volunteer. He was a native of Delaware. At the breaking out of the war of 1812 he had the rank of brigadier-general. His stirring career commenced at an early age. When a mere boy he was seized by a pressgang and carried on board the British frigate Roebuck. Word was sent to his father by the gang that the youth and a negro boy could be ransomed only by the delivery of 100 bullocks brought to the ship. These, from his own herd and from contributions made by friends, were taken on the ice some two or three miles from shore and delivered on board ship, and Thomas and the slave liberated.

One of the belles of the revolution was Mary Vining, great-granddaughter of the John Fisher who came over with William Penn. The fame of her charms was carried to Marie Antoinette, who inquired eagerly of Jefferson, minister to France, whether the extravagant compliments of French officers in America had been exaggerated. On being assured that the young American girl was as lovely as she had been painted, the Queen replied that she would be glad to see her at the Tuileries. Lafayette and his officers were much charmed with Mary Vining, not only on account of her beauty, but because she spoke French fluently.
