LOCAL MARKET.

London, Thursday, Aug. 30.

Today's market was similar to that of Tuesday, the same kind of farm produce, garden truck and fruits being offered. Sales were moderately brisk and prices were steady, except for oats, which were a couple of cents lower.

Grain—The small supply of oats so far this week sent prices up today; sales were made at $1 17 to $1 21 per cwt; new oats sold at 90c to 93c per cwt; most of the horse owners prefer to feed old oats, hence the big difference in prices. Wheat sold at 70c per bu.

Hay and Straw—There were 15 loads of hay offered; sales were a trifle slow, at $9 50 to $10 per ton; as Monday will be a holiday, and there is no hay offered on Saturday, there should be a good demand at tomorrow's market. Although there were only three or four loads of straw, sales were slow at $5 50 per ton.

Butter and Eggs—Butter was very scarce, at 22c per lb for crocks and 23c for pound rolls by the basket. Eggs sold well at 15c to 17c per dozen wholesale.

Vegetables and Roots—There was quite a large quantity of potatoes offered; sales were fair, at 50c per bu for most of them; cauliflowers were in demand, at $1 per dozen, tomatoes were dull, at 6 baskets for $1, green corn, 6c to 7c per dozen; other vegetables were unchanged in price.

Fruits—Apples sold well at 40c to 50c per bu; crab apples, 10c per peck; plums are scarce, at 50c to 75c per basket; pears sold slowly at 75c to $1 per bu; peaches were a slow sale at 35c to 60c, the latter price for so-called early Crawfords; musk melons were plentiful, and sales were fair at $1 per dozen for the ordinary run, home-grown water melons were offered and sold at 25c each; a few boxes of thimbleberries sold at 10c per box.

Poultry—Spring chickens sold all the way from 40c to 60c per pair alive, mostly 50c; for dressed chickens 65c to 90c were the figures paid; old fowl were dull, at 60c to 75c alive and 70c to 90c per pair dressed; ducks were not numerous, and sold at 75c to $1 per pair dressed.

Butchers' Meats—Beef was in fair demand, at $5 50 to $7 per cwt; veal, $7 50 to $9; lamb, 13c to 15c per lb.

Dressed Hogs—The few offered sold at $9 per cwt.

CAUGHT BY ANCHOR

Woman Whirled 500 Feet Above Heads of Spectators.

Kingston, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Caught by the anchor of a balloon and whirled 500 feet in the air over the heads of 5,000 spectators, Mrs. Roper, of Brooklyn, was serious, but not fatally injured today at the Ulster County Fair at Ellenville.

Maggie Daley, of Middletown, who has been making daily ascensions at the fair grounds in a balloon, had just entered the car, and was about to give the order to cast off when the balloon broke loose and sailed upwards with the anchor trailing. Before the bystanders could scatter the anchor fluke caught in Mrs. Roper's dress and she was whipped up into the air screaming. The weight of the anchor rope caused the balloon to tip over, and Miss Daley, looking out of the car to ascertain the cause of the trouble, caught sight of her involuntary fellow-voyager swinging far below at the end of the rope, and at once pulled the safety cord. The balloon, which by that time had reached an altitude of 500 feet, quickly descended, and reached the ground a quarter of a mile from the point of ascension. Mrs. Roper struck the ground heavily, and when picked up was found to be unconscious, and to have sustained fractures of the shoulder, ankle and several fingers.

SEE LONG DEAD IN CHURCH PARADE

The Amazing Ceremonial Vision of Three Men During Daylight Hours.

London, Aug. 30.—Three friends staying in Whitby have had an extraordinary experience. They saw, in broad daylight, a long procession of mediaeval monks and nuns, headed by a bishop in full canonicals, wind slowly through the ruins of Whitby Abbey.

One of the party recently received from India a packet of powder said to have mysterious psychical powers. He experimented with it and saw visions of the dead. The Whitby vision also followed after taking some of this powder.

The three friends each took some of it, and almost immediately one of them heard the words: "Go to the south transept;" another receiving the instructions: "At the abbey tomorrow as soon as possible."

The following extract from a letter written by one of the experimentes describes what they saw at the abbey:

"We entered the abbey just at midday, and went into the ruined south transept and stood facing the east. One of my friends at once saw a long procession of brown-clad and cowled monks, and smelt incense very distinctly.

Following these monks I saw several white-robed priests, followed by the bishop in full canonicals and wearing his mitre. He was conducted to a sort of throne, placed for the time being with its back to the altar.

"When he was seated, several nuns in white habits appeared from the south transept, one of whom was taken before the bishop, knelt at his feet, when he laid his hands upon her head, and I heard the words, 'The consecration of the prioress at the midday mass.'

"During the ceremony there knelt in prayer an old lady, dressed in dull red-brown, and wearing a very peculiar white head-dress; her hands were crossed on her breast. I could not remember the date, but the word 'Agincourt' was whispered to me from the unseen. I felt as if she had nothing to do with the ceremony, but was there merely to fix the approximate date—by her head-dress.

"As we left the abbey my other friend saw, dotted about in the grounds—where several very material cows were feeding—more monks in brown cowls and robes who were wandering about, evidently engaged in contemplation or prayer.

"We none of us heard any names, but I should know that bishop again anywhere if he ever saw fit to reappear."

Miss Annie Sansome, of Nottingham, a well-known psychic, has also experimented with the powder. In the following letter she describes its effect on her:

"I seemed to go into a dazed condition, and the room and articles around me went dim. Then I found myself in a large city, in a great crowd of people, and the thought came to me. 'This is London.' Then the vision changed, and I saw the spirit forms of a little boy and girl, urchins of the street; firstly, in rags and tatters, then in beautiful spirit robes, showing that, though poor on the earth, they were rich in the spirit world; that was the impression I received.

"Then I saw my brother's wife, who had died some time ago and heard her name, 'Lizzie,' breathed quite audibly.

"I got the picture of a coffin and of a death to occur in the future, particulars of which I shall send you later if it happens as I saw it in vision.

"My mother also tried the powder, but did not get any results. It only appears to act on those who have some psychic development. I did not feel any injurious effects from it, but a nice, soothing feeling that seems very much like the trance state."

KAISER FOR DIVINING ROD

Convinced of Its Success by Experiment He Recommends Its Use.

Berlin, Aug. 30. — The Kaiser's latest advice to his fellow-men is to use a divining-rod. He has been persuaded of its value by Prince von Carolath, who experimented with one at Wilhelmshohe during his recent residence with the imperial family. Prince von Carolath found articles of jewelry, which had been concealed by the Empress and Princess Victoria Louise. They were in a spring in the park where the presence of water was not suspected.

Following a subterranean course for some distance at the Kaiser's request, Prince von Carolath informed the Emperor that he found several mineral springs in the neighborhood of the park, whereupon the Kaiser immediately ordered that a boring test be made. The Kaiser, the Empress, and other members of the royal family tried to discover water, but failed. Prince von Carolath, however, discovered water deep in the sand where the Kaiser had been experimenting.

The Emperor, after thanking the prince, said he trusted the mysterious powers of the divining-rod would be made generally known, as much public benefit might accrue.

GIVES PALS AWAY MEANS BIG ARREST

A Sensational Outcome of the Famous Chatham Fur Steal Case.

Chatham, Aug. 29. — What purports to be the true story of the inside facts in the famous fur robbery has just leaked out. The Gebritskis, father and two sons, were, it will be remembered, connected with a steal of some $16,000 worth of furs from the tanning house of Seifter & Bros., of New York city. They were arrested at Wallaceburg, tried in Chatham, and then sent down for long terms, the father, Jacob, for seven years, the son Simon for five years. The other son was returned to New York in charge of metropolitan detectives—and thereby hangs the tale.

It appears that there is in the city of New York a notorious burglar named Feinburg. His photo is in the various rogues' galleries in the States. He is well known as a daring robber and has had on more than one occasion to answer for his crimes. There is in the same city a Mr. Blatt, who is reputed wealthy; how the wealth was obtained is another matter.

When the furs were first missing Feinburg was suspected and was put through a course in the sweat box, but in spite of the best efforts of the police in the eastern metropolis, they were unable to get anything out of him, though they tried harder than usual, if possible, believing that if they could get him to commit himself they would soon have within their clutches the most daring band of rascals in the city, some of the people for whom they have been looking for years.

As they could not get any information from Feinburg they let him go and omitted arresting Blatt and others and set about following up the stolen furs. These were at last found and then they got busy again. The authorities in Manhattan sent representatives to Chatham, and these wishing to get the greaer criminals, offered the two Gebritski boys their freedom if they would turn state's evidence. That, of course, applied to New York. For the Canadian authorities Crown Attorney Smith promised that, if they pleaded guilty and were sentenced, they would be allowed to return to New York. The sentence was to be allowed to hang over their heads so that they would never return to Canada. The old man was excluded from this offer, on the ground that he deserved all that was coming to him.

The two boys refused to plead guilty, however, desiring to be tried here. This resulted in the elder, Sim, taking his trial with his father and getting five year. The younger was not tried, and when the detectives saw that they were likely to be altogether baffled in their attempt to get evidence from the older lad, they made an offer to the counsel of the younger to the effect that if he would tell all he knew to the officers of the law at New York, they would not take action against him. Crown Attorney Smith agreed to dismiss the charges against him here, as it was hardly likely that they would amount to anything anyway, on condition that he allow himself to be extradited. This was accordingly done last Saturday, and after Sim was free, so far as Canadian justice was concerned, he was taken to the office of the crown attorney, where he made a statement that is said to have involved persons after whom the New York detectives have been for years without result so far. They were rejoiced and took him to the Garner House, where he was made much of by them and allowed to communicate with his mother. He was later removed to New York. He is now practically free in Manhattan, but his mother has expressed herself as being of the opinion that, were he to incriminate others, they would, on being freed, kill him for betraying them.

This is conceded to be probable by those who know; but that concerns Sim, they state, not them.

A CLEVER SWINDLE.

London, Aug. 29. — A well-dressed young American, posing as a member of the Harvard crew, victimized west end tradesmen out of several hundred pounds sterling during the last week.

Registering at the large hotels under the name of one of the Harvard crew, he would go to stores and order clothes and other articles to be sent to the hotel where he was stopping, asking that the bill be forwarded the next day.

In every case the tradesmen fell into the trap and the articles were sent. But when the collectors went for the money they were informed that the man had left soon after the arrival of the parcel.

All our yesterdays were once todays and all our todays were once tomorrows.

The Daily Grind Ruins the Nerves

In factories and workshops, offices and stores—yes, and in the homes, too—people are being worn out by the monotonous wear and tear of unceasing toil.

In the hot summer time especially the burden is heavy to bear, and without the opportunity for rest or recreation many a victim falls by the way, overcome by nervous exhaustion, heart failure or physical decline.

The world's work must be done. The toiler must toil on. But there is a method of replacing wasted nerve cells and building up the wornout system, and that is by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after each meal.

It gives vigor and tone to the system and prevents exhaustion and prostration. It is the friend of the worker, for it makes him strong and well and fills him with new hope, new confidence and new vigor and energy.

BRYAN AS STAR IN OWN DRAMA

Manager and Critic of Theatrical Homecoming Recalls Gen. Grant's Return.

New York, Aug. 29.—There was another man who returned from a trip around the world. He, too, had his eyes set toward the White House in Washington. He, too, was welcomed by thousands and tens of thousands and had a compact phalanx who stood by him in a historic convention. He was really great. He had commanded armies. He had fought to a finish the greatest war the world has ever seen. He had even been president of the United States for eight years and had been welcomed abroad as an uncrowned king. One of the greatest generals in the world, a retired president, a splendid citizen whom the people delighted to honor the claptrap of a guady return from a European trip availed him nothing.

Shall it do more for William Jennings Bryan than for Ulysses S. Grant? Is not the third term idea as strong against one who has been rejected of the people as one who has been honored of them? Grant was defeated for the presidency because he had twice held that splendid office. Shall not Bryan be equally out of the running because the people twice have decided he was not the fittest man for the presidency?

One cannot help putting such things into the foreground when the similarity of the home coming of Grant and Bryan is borne in mind. It is probable neither the great dead nor his vastly junior living has realized the extent to which the small politicians seize upon foreign absence to make capital with the people.

I remember when Grant came home—the cheers, the enthusiasm, the wild welcome, and the gradual subsidence of the wave when it was apparent that Conkling, Cameron, Platt, Quay, Logan and others of the old guard were ready to make political capital out of the stolid soldier
