Defender and Vigilant To-Day.

New York, Aug. 19.—The final preparations have been made for the first of the trial races to determine what yacht shall meet the Challenger for the America's Cup. The Defender and Vigilant will meet off Sandy Hook to-morrow for a battle royal. Both yachts are in better trim than ever before, and both will be sailed to the limit of their abilities.

The race will be one of two which are set by the America's Cup Committee to determine which is the better yacht to meet Lord Dunraven's Challenger. Gen. Paine's Jubilee will not take part in the trials, and the contest will be between the Defender and the Vigilant.

GREAT GAME OF LACROSSE

CAPS AND SHAMROCKS SCORE THREE GOALS EACH.

Eight Thousand People See the Eastern Cracks at Play—Ottawa's Twelve Showed the Superior Combination, But the Montreal Irishmen Showed a Wonderful Defence.

1—Shamrocks, Tucker	13 1-2 min.
2—Capitals, Murphy	30 secs.
3—Capitals, Ketchum	6 1-2 min.
4—Shamrocks, Wall	18 min.
5—Capitals, G. Carson	4 1-2 min.
6—Shamrocks, O'Meara	6 min.

The lacrosse match proved to be the greatest attraction of the season, and over 8000 saw the game on the Island oval yesterday afternoon. The Capitals were looked upon as prime favorites, and were expected to win in a walk, but the Shamrocks, although they presented a weak home, fought bravely in the stretch, and succeeded in making it a tie. They scored the first game after a 13 1-2-minute struggle, but the Caps were not long in drawing ahead, tallying one in 30 seconds and another in 6 1-2 minutes. Then the Shamrocks got another, when the slugging began, and two men retired. There was more scrapping in the fifth, and this fell to the Ottawa twelve, after Carlton's nose was broken, Tucker going off with him to even up. Kelly was a mark for the Capitals, and Sparow set in to thump him in earnest at the south end, with the result that he went to the club house, and the game continued, 10 men to 11. With this advantage, the Shamrocks scored the sixth, and what proved the tying game. Near the close there were miniature scraps all over the field. Quinn and Murray had a lively tussle over at the grand stand, and it all appeared to amuse the big crowd.

The game was started at 3.42, the four stands and amphitheatre seats being overflowing. The Shamrocks had won the toss and put the Capitals at the north end, with the sun in their eyes. Kelly beat Carson in the face-off, and Moore threw to the Capitals' flags, giving the green-shirted Shamrocks the first advantage. Smith made the first shot, that Sparrow stopped and Quinn threw to the other end. Murray relieved by a long throw, and Hugh Carson was cheered for a sprint and throw. Finally Tucker got the ball at one side and sent in a shot that fairly beat Tommy Crown.

The next game was of short duration. Carson secured from the face, and sent down to Murphy, who scored in half a minute.

The Caps had all the best of the next game, and McKenna was repeatedly cheered for stopping several shots. Ketchum sent in a liner from about 20 yards, and the Caps were ahead, 2 to 1.

The Shamrocks seemed to lack the combination displayed by the Ottawa lacrosslists in the fourth, and resorted to considerable body-checking. The result was that George Carson and Kelly got into a row, and Wall scored for the Shamrocks when there were only 22 men on the field.

The miscreants returned for the fifth, when Carlton's nose was accidentally broken, and Tucker went off with him. This game went to the Caps in 4 1-2 minutes. With a one-man advantage, the Shamrocks succeeded in scoring the sixth, and in drawing even by their best combination of the day, when Kelly passed to Wall, and Wall sent on to Murray, who sent in a shot that could not be stopped.

All the lacrosse cranks in Toronto and vicinity were at the game, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the exhibition. It had every stamp of a championship match, and the men played for blood. The combination exhibited by the Capitals was magnificent, and far outshone any play of the Montreal Irishmen. If was the stone-wall defence of McKenna, Stinson, Dwyer, Murray and the O'Briens that saved the Shamrocks from a veritable Waterloo. Their home was somewhat disorganized, and they even surprised their supporters by scoring the three games they did. They were playing for the seventh five minutes when the whistle blew for time, and the great lacrosse contets was over, with honors even between the greatest teams of the era.

Tommy Crown, the old Ontario boy, played a perfect game between the sticks, his throwing out being marvelously accurate. The teams:

A Fast Swim

London, Aug. 19.—J. H. Tyers of the Osborne Club, Manchester, to-day again won the all-England 440-yard swimming championship, going the distance in 6 min. 8 4-5 sec. This beats all tidal records. The race took place off the Island of Jersey.

GAUDAUR WON THE RACE.

Durnan Beaten By Less Than Two Lengths Over the Island Course—The Time Was 20.56.

The boatrace started at 6.35, with the water a little rough. The course was the Torontos' 3-4-mile, starting and finishing near their pretty Island club, making three turns for the three miles. Upwards of 10,000 persons were ensconced in every coign of vantage. The Athletic ground grand stands, the many piers, and the long neck of land west of the course, and numerous boats and canoes, were crowded to their utmost. However, little enthusiasm was manifested, as it was generally conceded that Gaudaur would win. As it was, Durnan was only beaten by less than two lengths, but the champion apparently did not overexert himself after the mile and a half.

Durnan won the toss, and took the very slight advantage of the deeper eastern water. Referee Good got the men away well and quickly. The big Orillian took an early lead, starting at about 38 strokes to the minute, with Durnan pulling at 40. Jake steered a perfect course, while his rival went wide. Both came well to their turning buoys, with Gaudaur four lengths to the good. Both seemed to row easy at 30 strokes, and Durnan gaining slightly. At the second turn Gaudaur had a three-lengths' lead.

On turning home for the finish there was barely a length between the scullers. Gaudaur put on a little spurt and won by 1 3-4 lengths. Time: 3-4 mile, 4.50; 1 1-2 miles, 9.55; 2 1-4 miles, 15.01; 3 miles, 20.56. The officials were aboard the Carlew. Referee—H. J. P. Good. Judges—N. J. Clarke, Bush Thompson—Timer—James Carruthers. The judge at the finish was P. J. Mulqueen.

ONLY SURPRISE OF THE DAY.

Chapman's Aggregation Trounced Syracuse Twice—Galt and Crescents Win One Each.

The Torontos took an early lead in the game over the Don yesterday morning with Syracuse. They scored steadily up till the fifth innings, in which they made eight runs after two men were out. Then Kilroy went in the box and kept the hits well scattered, and only allowed one run. Grey pitched a good game, but his support was of the very rankest order. In fact, he wished to retire in the ninth innings, as his fielders appeared to be unable to stop anything that went their way, and it looked in the ninth as if the Stars were going to win. They got up to 14 with two hands out, but fortunately for the Indians the next two men were easily retired. There was plenty of hitting on both sides, the visitors having three home runs and a two-base hit, while the local aggregation had three triples and as many two-baggers. There was a crowd of about 1500. Score:

The Afternoon Game.

In the afternoon Toronto again took the lead at the start, and, as Payne was in pretty good form Syracuse ran one-two all the game. There was again some heavy hitting, three home runs being made, one by Payne, who was the good thing in this contest, fielding his position to perfection. The attendance was 900. Score:

The Crescents Win and Lose.

Large crowds visited the old U.C.C. yesterday and saw two great games between Galt and the Crescent Athletic Club. The home team lost the morning game through costly errors at critical times, but their batting was good. In the afternoon the Crescents knocked Burnett out of the box in the fourth. Thompson pitched a good game, and his support throughout was good. Elliott made a home run for Galt and Fitzgerald drove the ball for four bags with the bases full. Scores:

Galt	2 0 0 1 2 3 1 0 0—9 12 5
Crescents	1 0 2 0 5 0 0 0 0—8 13 8

Mike Dwyer's Remnant.

New York, Aug. 19.—The American 3-year-old racehorse Harry Reed, the property of Mr. Michael F. Dwyer, arrived here to-day from Liverpool. Seven months ago the horse, with other American thoroughbreds, were taken to England to contest in races on the English turf. Reed is the only one to come back, the others having been properly bought up by English turfmen out of selling races. Mr. Dwyers' trainer, Hardy Campbell, returned with the horse.

JOHNSON WON BOTH HEATS

FRED YOUNG BEATEN IN THE MATCH BICYCLE RACE.

The Riders Finished Wheels Apart—Pat O'Connor Won the Open Half and Steenson the Mile Handicap—E. Gardiner of the Wanderers Captured the Amateur Handicap.

The match race between Champion J. S. Johnson of Minneapolis and Fred W. Young of Toronto for a purse and the professional championship of the world, at the Island Bicycle track last night, drew 2500 spectators, who were doomed to the disappointment of seeing the Toronto rider twice defeated in close finishes by the champion.

In the first half Young won the toss and chose the pole. The riders were paced by Pat O'Connor, the Irish champion, and H. R. Stevenson of Minneapolis. Young kept the inside until on the back stretch of the last lap, when Johnson shot out from the rear, and the riders came down the home-stretch abreast, the champion gaining slightly. At the finish Young was right on his opponent's hind wheel.

McCall and Gratz, the local class B men, paced the second mile, Johnson having the inside. When nearing the home stretch Young came up from behind Johnson, and in an exciting finish Johnson won a grand race by less than half a wheel, in 2.07 3-5.

The one-mile professional handicap went to H. R. Steenson (80 yards). Young was a competitor in this race, and at the third lap looked like a winner, but the riders took to loafing, and O'Connor, who was the scratch man, caught up to the bunch. Weinig then went out ahead, but was overhauled by Steenson and O'Connor on the stretch, and Weinig finished third, with Young last.

In a close race R. Gardner, a young rider of the Wanderers, pulled out the one-mile handicap, class A. The riders were bunched at the finish. Summaries:

1-mile handicap, class A—First heat—R. Gordon (40 yds.), 1, R. Thompson (135 yds.) 2, R. O. Blayney (scr.) 3. Time 2.23 1-5. Also started: A. Davidson (65 yds.), P. Humphrey (65 yds.) and H. Boake (90 yds.).

Second heat—Cecil Elliott (scr.) 1, R. Gardner (65 yds.) 2, George Doherty (65 yds.) 3. Time 2.25 2-5. Also started: J. Tucker (90 yds.), D. Craig (90 yds.), and S. Young (40 yds.).

Final—R. Gardner (65 yds.) 1, R. Gordon (40 yds.) 2, S. Young (40 yds.) 3. Time 2.17 4-5. Also started: Cecil Elliott (scr.), H. Humphreys (65 yds.), R. O. Blayney (scr.), G. Doherty (65 yds.).

Match race, 1 mile, paced—First heat—J. S. Johnson 1, F. W. Young 2. Time 2.17 2-5.

Second heat—J. S. Johnson 1, F.W. Young 2. Time 2.07 3-5.

1-2-mile, open, professional—P. O'Connor, Dublin, 1; A. E. Weinig, Buffalo, 2; H. R. Steenson, Minneapolis, 3. Time 1.10 3-5.

1-mile handicap, professional—H. B. Steenson, Minneapolis (80 yds.), 1; P. O'Connor, Dublin (scr.), 2; A. E. Weinig, Buffalo (70 yds.), 3. Time 2.26. Also started: F. W. Young, Toronto (50 yds.).

Sandwiched in between the races were Amusement Director oCnner's specialties, which surpass anything in their line that he has placed before the Toronto public in the past. Dorothy Drew, the Queen of the Dudes, goes through evolutions relative to the terpsichorean art to the satisfaction of the spectators, especially those of the male persuasion. The four Gardiners are clever musical artists, and received rounds of well-deserved applause. Mlle. Eugenie Petrescu is Conner's star artiste, and she is certainly a wonder. Her feats of contortion and balancing on her hands are something never seen here before, and the show throughout is far above the average.

CLUE FOR DETECTIVE GEYER.

House Located in Indianapolis Where Howard Pitezel's Body May Be.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 19.—Detective Geyer is on a still hunt for the body of Howard Pitezel in Indianapolis, and claims to have a clue which may result in the finding of the missing boy. The clue is furnished by a woman living in Prospect-street, Indianapolis, who saw the picture of Holmes in the newspapers, and recognized it as that of a man who rented a house from her in October. It is the belief of some that the boy may have been disposed of in this house.

Bought No Ticket For the Boy.

An important discovery made to-day is the fact that the day Holmes and the two Pitezel girls left Indianapolis for Detroit he purchased two half fare tickets only. He told Landlord Acklelow that morning that the boy had preceded him to the train, but Geyer is confident that no ticket was purchased for the lad, because he did not leave the city with Holmes and his two sisters. This is proved by the fact that but two half-fare tickets were sold to Chicago that day and these were used for the two girls.

Marching on Madagascar's Capital.

London, Aug. 19.—A despatch from Port Louis under date of Aug. 17 says that the French expedition that is marching on Antananarivo, the capital of Madagascar, has reached Mevatanana. The natives have secured a number of Maxim guns which have arrived at Antananarivo.

An Alabama Village Wiped Out.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 19.—Fire yesterday practically wiped out the business portion of this village. Loss $35,000; insurance $15,000.

Holmes' Castle in Ashes

Chicago, Aug. 19.—The big flat building at the corner of 63rd and Wallace-streets, Englewood, in which is located the notorious Holmes "Castle," was destroyed by fire early Monday morning.

Rochester Box Factory Burned.

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 19.—The large box factory of Atwater, Armstrong & Clark and Allen and Platt-streets was practically destroyed by fire. Loss about $12,000.

THE SOUBRETTE.

When Mary White married the young lawyer, Vincent Allison, she promised him she would leave the stage and never return to it. And it was no sort of release from her pledge that he had kept secretly any of the many vows he had made to her at the same time.

Of course her name was not Mary White on the play bills. The profession knew her as Antoinette Le Blanc, The leading lady said she was sacrificing enough when she married. It was absolute madness to give up the stage. But there must have been sedate qualities in her, for she turned from the theatre where she had been applauded nightly and retired so happily into her pretty home that the whole period of her stage life began to seem like a dream.

Vincent Allison undoubtedly had a future. If he had paid as much court to the deity of home as his once feted wife was doing daily, the marriage might have proved the wisest step in his life. But after a month he returned to his old companions and treated his home much as he had formerly treated his bachelor apartments—as a convenient place to visit when all other places were closed.

One day he came home and found the rent man waiting for him. Mary said he had been waiting three hours. She wondered why he didn't wait at the office.

"I'll pay you when I get ready," said Vincent Allison, angrily. "I won't be hounded by your petty bills. If you don't like that you know what you can do."

The agent did. And the next day there was a "dispossess notice" in the house.

While the truckman was moving the furniture to the more modest flat Mary had selected, she, riding on an open street car, saw a great tally-ho go by; and Vincent Allison, bordering on the hilarious, was of the party.

Instead of tossing her checks, as he had done formerly when she mentioned domestic needs, he presently gave her in cash rather less than she asked for, and said he would hant her the rest "by and by." Later, still, he sent her with notes to this man and that man in downtown offices. She supposed he was calling in loans he had made them. Time and again she recognized in these business men, these hurried, exacting, folly despising fellows, former habitues of the theatres where she had danced and sung. Of course they did not know her.

Presently she realized she was not collecting old loans, but making new ones. Vincent Allison was borrowing money.

One day a lawyer to whom she went—a man who had tossed her bouquets in the old days, and written her notes offering carriage rides and suppers—threw her husband's letter back to her with the exclamation:

"I will not do it. I will not be a party to it. He is borrowing money from every one he ever knew. Why don't he go to work? He had a better chance than any of us; if he hadn't married that Le Blanc woman. But it is always the way. It is inevitable. Their extravagance would break a man with the income of a—"

"Wait a minute," said Mary; and the calm strength of her address compelled him to pause. You have yourself paid a good deal of court to those same women in the past. What you say now makes your motives then appear in a not altogether creditable light."

"What court have I ever paid to them?" he demanded.

"I think I have some of your notes—though none of them was ever answered."

"Who are you?"

"Marie Antoinette Le Blanc, and I'm not extravagant. I know how to save, and I'm saving. But I don't think it's fair—"

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Allison. I really beg your pardon. Don't say another word. I was a brute."

He was nervously opening his pocket-book. He offered her twice the sum Allison had asked for. But she would not take it. When she got home a messenger boy was waiting for her at the head of the stairs, with a formal note from the lawyer, inclosing the money her husband had asked for. She returned it without a word of explanation.

Vincent Allison did not come home that night, but about noon next day he appeared. With a woman's dread of debt, she had refrained from buying anything; and the scant luncheon she provided him was by no means equal to the demands of his pampered appetite.

"Why don't you send out and get something to eat?" he demanded.

"I have no money."

"What became of the roll you got from Littleton?"

"He didn't—I didn't get any."

But the lie half chocked her, and she told him all the truth, and begged him to live differently.

"You have a future," she said, unconsciously repeating the general estimate which his youth had earned.

"Oh, we all have futures," he said. "The trouble is, some of us have pasts as well."

But he gave her a little money, and she went to the market. Awaiting her at the house was Bessie Worrall, desolate and weeping—Bessie Worrall, who used to be the gayest dancer at the Arcade, the lightest of laughter, and the sauciest of speech. Maybe the pace had been too fast for her. Anyway, she was penniless now, and friendless and hungry. A former stage hand at the Arcade, now manager at Stout's, the big, cheap, East Side Concert Hall, had offered her a chance.

"And I'm so hungry and weak I can't dance. What will I do, Marie? Oh, what shall I do?"

Mary's heart went out to her in a motherly pity. Indeed, the girl was not able to sit up. Her hostess put her in bed, juggled with her kitchen utensils for a few minutes, and came in with what looked very like a supper. She was quite a magician in such affairs. Often she had to be.

Bessie Worrall grew quiet presently and fell into a deep sleep. Manifestly she had not been so comfortable in a long time. Mary looked at her, and then at the clock. It was nearly time for reporting at the concert hall. Failure there meant a good deal to Bessie. Yes, losing this s
