THE husbands are masters in Germany, servants in England, companions in France, jailors in Italy, and tyrants in Spain. When they wish to take information about some one they ask, in Spain, "Is he a grandee of the first class?" in Germany, "Can he enter into the chapters?" in France, "Is he well at the Court?" in Holland, "How much gold has he?" and in England, "What man is he?" The proverb says: "To write in Italian, to boast in Spanish, to deceive in Greek, and to spend as a Frenchman."

TYCHO-BRAHE had the color of his face altered, and felt his legs fail whenever he encountered a hare or a fox.
