THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

At the meeting of the Historical Society last evening Mr. J. W. Lawrence read an interesting paper on the early newspapers of St. John, prefacing the same with a sketch of various New York publications. The first weekly newspaper published in St. John was the St. John Gazette, the initial number of which was issued by John and Christopher Sower, Oct. 11, 1785. Of this paper several copies a e in existence. In 1806 it was published at the sign of the Bible and Crown, No. 16, Prince William street, by Jacob S. Mott. In 1807 the Royal Gazette was started by Jacob S. Mott, who was then King's printer. Mr. Mott died in 1814, and the office of King's printer passed into the hands of Geo. K. Lugrin. Mr. Lawrence's readings from some of the old newspapers in his possession with regard to the customs and events of their time were highly interesting. Leaving the King's printers, Mr. Lawrence gave an account of some of the parties concerned in the publication of the Courier. Among the graduates of this office was Robert Sears, subsequently of Toronto, who was responsible for the cost of the first presses purchased by the originators of the New York Herald.

Mr. Gilbert's Views on Agriculture.

HAMPTON, Jan. 8.

To the Editor of THE GAZETTE.

SIR:—Those of us who have had opportunities of seeing "the world" recognize that as a class, we New Brunswick farmers do not practice the most economic and advanced methods. But considerable experience in the New England states convinces me that we are not so far behind them in the application of advanced ideas or practical economy as may be supposed.

Mr. Gilbert, of Maine, was at Hampton on Monday and attempted to educate us on these all important subjects, but to use his own words "there still lingers a prejudice against agricultural literature and lecturers" and no wonder. We find Mr. Gilbert advocating feeding stock twice a day as preferable to three or four times and this based on "many years' experience. This sounds as if he fed by "rule of thumb," because actual experiment proves that there is more economy and profit in frequent feedings.

Again he differs from Prof. W. E. Stewart as to the advantage of cutting fodder and mixing the grain on it in preference to feeding the fodder and grain separately. Here again the best experience and most carefully conducted experiments prove him to be astray. Any man having a general knowledge of the cows digestive apparatus will favor cutting and mixing and practical feeding will bear him out. Mr. Gilbert's opinion of roots that "there is not much nutriment in them" is not calculated to dispel the "prejudice" that "still lingers" against "agricultural lecturers." He does not approve of warming the drinking water for cows in winter, bnt I take issue with him on that point, as I have proved it to be very beneficial and have seen it a success in all the daries in which I have seen it practiced, with the exception of one instance, and that was where the animals were not properly housed and protected during the cold weather. Mr. Gilbert seems to be a strong advocate of cotton seed meal to balance fodder. But we have learned to go slow on cotton seed first, because we know it to be a badly balanced feed and, secondly, because we have more economical and healthier feed available.

Mr. Gilbert's knowledge of ensilage is evidently very limited. There is no longer a question of its economy, practicability and adaptability to our soil and climate.

We do want to raise corn if it is practical to do so and we know it is. We know further that it has been demonstrated that clover, rye, vetches, peas and all the grasses can be successfully ensiloed and when so treated stock can be more cheaply raised and kept, and that the best butter and milk can be more cheaply produced. We look forward to the silo as our future method of curing fodder.

In conclusion I would say that I for one deprecate very much the publication of such statements as Mr. Gilbert made among our farmers. He is put forward as a practical farmer and to find him propounding and advocating theories diametrically opposed to the best experience is it any wonder that "There still lingers a prejudice against agricultural literature and lecturers."

Yours, etc.,

K. C. B.
