BETTER THAN BIG GUNS.

The Defense of the Great Lakes Comparatively Easy and Inexpensive.

[Springfield, Mass., Republican.]

Secretary of War Proctor and Gen. Schofield, it is stated, are about to make a tour of inspection along the American shore of the great lakes to study the question of military defenses. If there were any need of a line of grim and unfriendly fortifications along our Canadian frontier, the trip would be opportune and commendable, but under the circumstances it seems a waste of their valuable time. There is no necessity in defending the great lakes, and the people of Rochester need have no fear because "a strong fort" is wanting at the mouth of the Genesee River. We may view the rehabilitation and strengthening of the navy and the development of a system of fortifications for the defense of the great seaports along the Atlantic coast as a deplorable necessity; but the carrying of the prevalent militant idea into the very door-yards of our Canadian neighbors, with whom in common we are wont to dream of reciprocity and perhaps of annexation, is nothing but a surly menace of hostilities that should never be contemplated. If millions of treasure must be spent in preparations for a war that need not come, there are ample opportunities in Boston or New York harbors for its expenditure. It were possible in a very short time to sink a number of surpluses in rendering those unprotected ports in a measure impregnable to the assaults of foreign fleets. Until such work is accomplished, the fortification of our northern frontier will be the more inexcusable.

But the cry, "Defend the great lakes," becomes wholly uncalled for when the legitimate demands of this great artery of commerce for appropriations are beginning to tax the resources of the national treasury. Were the money available, doubtless millions of dollars could be spent to good purpose in improving navigation at points where natural obstacles are many and almost insuperable. The Sault Ste. Marie Canal, which renders possible navigation between Lakes Huron and Superior, is recognized as a legitimate object of an increasing paternal care; and even the notorious Hennepin Canal, which pleads for an uninterrupted water-way between the lakes and the Gulf of Mexico, would become worthy of serious attention as opposed to fortifying Rouse's Point or Sackett's Harbor.

The proposed ship canal around the Falls of Niagara on the American shore is another scheme of internal improvement that has claims upon the consideration of a government bound to make the dollars fly. Even as a military work this transcends in importance by far proposed fortifications on the St. Lawrence River. Without it the Welland Canal on the Canadian side now affords the only means of communication between Lakes Erie and Ontario, and therefore the commercial results alone accruing to the Canadians from its ownership are of great consequence. Although the "Soo" canal is free of tolls to Canadian vessels, the discrimination made at the Welland Canal against vessels bound for American ports is such as to be almost prohibitory. That the Payne bill, providing for the construction of a Niagara ship canal, probably will not succeed in reaching the President at this session of Congress, may or may not be cause for regret; yet it is certain that the work should be accomplished before approval is asked for any system of frontier fortifications, such as Secretary Proctor or Gen. Schofield may contemplate. The great lakes can better be defended by works of peace than by those of war—by the opening of great arteries of commerce rather than by the planting of earthworks and frowning bastions.

BORDER STATE BRIEFS.

At Lansing on Saturday, Ina Miller, the 6-year-old daughter of S. A. Miller, was accidentally shot and killed by her 14-year-old brother.

The sixth annual encampment of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Association of Antrim county will be held at Bellaire on the 28th and 29th.

Governor Luce, who visited Holzhay, the noted highwayman at Upper Peninsula Branch State Prison, is of the opinion that Holzhay is insane.

The Warren featherbone factory at Three Oaks will move to a field offering better shipping facilities and where labor can be more readily obtained.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Association of Northwestern Michigan and Oakland county will encamp upon Island Park, Orion Lake, Sept. 23 and 25.

Mrs. Annie Demund, of Woodland, is probably the oldest woman in the State. She was born in New York State in 1788, and is consequently 102 years old.

Harmon Hill, of Mt. Pleasant, aged about 60 years, who had for some time lived by himself, was found about noon Thursday, in his bed, dead. The cause of his death is unknown.

Tupper—I hear that the doctor has forbidden you to drink any whisky.

Gulper—No; but he says I must only take a drink after I have been in bathing.

Tupper—Oh, that's not so bad.

Gulper—No-n-no; not so very bad; but when a fellow comes to taking 20 or 30 baths every day it gets tiresome.

WINTER WHEAT.

Interesting Experiments Made During the Present Year in Ontario.

Professor Shaw, of the Ontario Agricultural College, has issued a bulletin (No. 53) on winter wheat experiments of 1890. He shows that it is the natural tendency with all cereal grains to deteriorate when grown long in one locality without change, the full reasons for which have never yet been given to the world. Because of this the necessity arises for a change of seed, and ultimately for the introduction of new varieties. In selecting the most suitable of these for his locality the farmer frequently finds difficulty. This arises in part from the unreliable nature of the information not unfrequently given by those who introduce these new varieties, and in part from the absence of information that would enable the purchaser to compare the merits of these with those of standard varieties. With a view to give such information this bulletin—the first issued on growing winter wheats on this farm—has been prepared and it is hoped that it will reach the farmer in time to serve the intended end.

From the information given in the subjoined table, the farmer who understands the nature of his soil can readily decide as to which of the kinds thus compared are most likely to give satisfactory results when grown on his land. If his soil does not naturally produce a stiff straw, he can reject all varieties that are weak in this respect. If it requires strong growing varieties, he knows which possess the qualities; and if rust is practically unknown in his locality, as is sometimes the case, need not of necessity reject those most inclined to rust, as they may possess other qualities of much value.

Fifty-one varieties in all have been tested on the farm during the present year, of which 21 are Canadian and 30 foreign. The foreign varieties fifteen samples came from England, eight from France, five from Germany, one from Russia and one from Scotland. Some of these varieties stood the winter well and possess much promise for the future. Full particulars will be given regarding them in the next annual report.

Of the eighteen Canadian varieties contained in the subjoined table, some are of standard sorts, grown with the objection of rendering more valuable the comparison of the new varieties. The tests were made on plots of one-hundredth of an acre each, on a soil which may be termed a clay loam but somewhat sandy in its texture, and possessed a decided slope to the south, and was therefore fully exposed to the sweep of cold winds while the ground was bare so much of the time last winter.

The following is a list of the Canadian varieties, with the most important particulars regarding their growth and behavior:
