NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

A young married woman in Chicago attempted to commit suicide because her husband refused to take her to Saratoga.

A Tennessee youth has drowned himself because a wealthy woman, many years older than he, would not accept his heart and hand.

A young fool at Terre Haute put a pistol to his head and pulled the trigger to prove that it was not loaded. The head was not but the pistol was, and the youth was gathered to his fathers.

Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, was at Saratoga last week making arrangements for the meeting of the National Temperance Convention, which will take place on the 26th of August.

The hero of Clay County, Ky., just now, is a man who has committed thirteen murders. One murder is enough to make a hero in the East; but out West they do things on a larger scale.

A Detroit boy stole a rocket to celebrate the Fourth, and discharged the firework while it was lying on the ground. It flew around a few seconds, and then went over the street and hit a man, then tore along after a cow, and finally jumped into a house and blew up the family until they shouted for the police.

A Western farmer, it is reported, refused to look at a simple sewing machine recently, as he always "sowed wheat by hand." He is said to be related to the man who did not want a threshing machine on his farm; "for," said he, "give me a harness tug or a barrel stave, and I can make my family toe the mark according to law and Scripter."

There may have been nothing remarkable in the fact that, recently, at Greenville, Ill., W. H. Thompson shot and killed Peter Reybolt. The peculiarity of the affair is that Mr. Thompson is a justice of the peace. Who shall keep the keepers? As Mr. Thompson was bailed in a comparatively small sum it may be inferred that he was brought before himself, that he arraigned himself, and then with noble magnanimity, instead of discharging himself held himself to bail.

There are two astonishing young brothers in a Massachusetts town, aged respectively 22 and 21, who are intelligent, who comprehend all that is said to them, but who cannot and never could speak the English language. They seem to be incapable of learning it. They talk to each other in a strange and outlandish tongue which they alone understand, and which no other person has ever been heard to use except, it is said, a so-called "medium," who speaks in it only when under the mysterious "influence." There is a briny odor as of fish about this strange story.

There is a nice old gentleman in Maine who believes in getting the good of things while he is alive. He has just erected a large and gorgeous monument to the memory of himself and wife, though neither of them shows the least sign of departing this life for many years yet. Moved at once by artistic and sentimental considerations, that old gentleman spends his happy days in gloating over that monument, and when the simple villagers assemble to gaze upon it, he is said to stand proudly upon the schoolhouse steps and superintend the exhibition with condescending and benevolent smiles.

Citizens of California, instead of going to fashionable watering-places, occasionally spend their summers in camping out among the hills. Here, beside the delicious air and the charms of nature, they are sometimes regaled by the select society of bears. This was the case not long ago, at the mouth of the Matilaha Canon, where a gentleman, his invalid wife, and little daughter were quietly sleeping in a tent. The growling of a real grizzly was the tocsin which awoke them. Mr. McCarty, Mrs. McCarty, and the little McCartys all immediately skipped up a tree without waiting to make their visitor's personal acquaintance. In this pleasant haven they stayed for three hours, when the bear, naturally displeased at such an inhospitable reception, retired in dudgeon.

GENERAL.

Everything will be named after the "Shah" next winter, from needles up to goose yokes. Already the "Shah" dressing-gown can be purchased; also, "Shah" buttons, scarfs, cuffs and rosettes.

A young lady recently married is spoken of as a remarkable elocutionist. This accomplishment gives her such an advantage that we sincerely commiserate the husband on his prospects in life, especially if he is a lover of quietude.

An old gentleman went one day with his gun to shoot partridges, accompanied by his son. Before they approached the ground where they expected to find the game, the gun was charged with a severe load; and when at last the old gentleman discovered one of the birds, he took a rest and blazed away, expecting to see the game fall, of course; but not so did it happen, for the gun kicked with so much force as to knock him over. The old gentleman got up, and while rubbing the sparks out of his eyes, inquired of his son, "Alphy, did I point the right end of the gun at the birds?"

The coinage of the British Mint during the year 1872 was very large, as appears by the official report, a printed copy of which has just been received. It was over seventy-three million dollars in gold and six million dollars in silver. Referring to this large coinage, and to nearly forty million dollars coined during the last six months of 1871, the report states that it is the more remarkable, as, with the exception of the sum of about ten million dollars, transmitted to the German mints, the whole coinage appears to have been legitimately employed for home and foreign circulation in the usual manner.

A curious incident in the life of the late Mrs. Somerville, is related in an English magazine. She passed her last twenty-three years in Italy. It was truly pathetic that she of all the people in the world should have been debarred a sight of the singular comet of 1843. The only Italian observatory which afforded the necessary implements was a Jesuit establishment, where no woman was allowed to enter; so she was compelled "to look up at the sky with mortifying knowledge of what was to be seen there but for the impediment which barred her access to the great telescope at hand."

One of the constantly recurring features of the literature of England, as it is of the life of England, is shooting. Novels and newspapers and magazines have ever been so full of pictures and suggestions of the moors that outsiders have come to consider the use of the gun the chief occupation of the English gentleman. Yet one is not quite prepared to have Mr. Ruskin say as he does that he believes "solemnly and without jest the English aristocracy's idea of their caste is that its life should be, distinctively from inferior human lives, spent in shooting. Have English gentlemen," he asks in the Story of the Halcyon, "as a class, any other real object in their whole existence than killing birds."
