BANQUETTING MEDICALS.

THE EIGHTH ANNUAL DINNER OF THE TORONTO SCHOOL.

A Splendid Gathering of Representative Men, Graduates, and Students—The Toasts and Speeches—Principal Caven on Higher Education.

The eighth dinner of the Toronto school of medicine, which took place last night in the Queen's hotel, was a splendid success, as well from the representative character of the guests, the number of graduates who attended, many of them from long distances, the number of students, as the good management under which everything was conducted. Covers had been laid for 160, but over 200 sat down. Messrs McGaw and Winnett, the hosts were, however, equal to the occasion, and furnished a recherche repast for all.

The speech of the evening was that of Principal Caven, in which he threw out the idea that all our churches should confine their energy to theological education and send their students to one general university, where they would have their views broadened and learn to respect one another from association.

As was customary with late years, the banquet was conducted on temperance principles, and certainly the absence of the flowing bowl interferred in no way with the prevailance of good feeling. The chairs were all filled with students who were equal to the occasion in the way of speech-making.

The enjoyablenes s of the affair was greatly enhanced by the singing of the college glee club under the leadership of Mr. St. John.

The chair was occupied by E. G. Knill (Stouffville); first vice, R. M. Coulter (Richmond Hill); second vice, Jos. S. Draper (Listowel); secretary, F. P. Drake (Kingsmill).

Among the guests were Hon. E Blake (chancellor of the university of Toronto), Prof. Reynar (Victoria college, Cobourg), Professor Caven (Knox college), Dr. Temple and Dr. Kennedy (Trinity medical school), Dr. Potts, Dr. Wild, Dalton McCarthy, M.P., James Beaty, M.P., Rev. Septimus Jones (Protestant Episcopal divinity college), Principal Buchan (Upper Canada college), Dr. Macdonald (Hamilton), Dr. O'Reilly (Toronto hospital), Profs. Pike, Loudon (University college), Dr. Clarke (Toronto asylum.)

Among the graduates present were Doctors McConnell, G. F. Smith, Charlton, Sweetman, Bryce, Farewell, Jones, Armstrong, J. H. Cameron, J. S. King, Watt, Kitchen.

THE SPEECHES.

After the dinner Mr. Knill thanked his co-students for the honor they had conferred on him in placing him in the chair; defended them from the aspersions that had been cast for the squabbles that had occurred in the matter of the council examinations; hoped that they would not again occur; paid a high tribute to the Toronto school of medicine and the faculty thereof; and expressed the hope that the young men who were now about starting out as doctors would be an honor to their profession and earn the tribute, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Mr. Beaty, in replying for the legislatures, said he had no sympathy with independence, and especially with annexation. Without the necessity of army and navy, and under the protection of the greatest empire, we ought to be content with our present relations. He was sorry, however, to see that the only Canadian in the Kingston military school was getting the worst of it.

Mr. Badgerow to the same toast claimed that they had eight doctors in the Ontario legislature, and if the same proportion was maintained at Ottawa, the federal parliament would be of higher merit. (Langhter.) The former speaker had referred to independence. The independence they wished in Ontio was independence of the powers at Ottawa.

Mr. Coulter, in proposing the health of the corporation of Toronto, delivered a very humorous and racy speech, and made a number of good hits.

Mayor McMurrich thought the least said about the streets the better. Cedar block pavement would settle the problem. Toronto was favorable to annexation—annexation of the suburbs surrounding it.

Hon. E. Blake on rising to reply was received with loud and continued applause. He thanked them on behalf of the university of Toronto of which he was the official head. He humorously sketched his view of what a medical dinner was—formed as it had been from reading a book—and he was glad to notice that it had not been realized. He referred to the need there was for a chair in the provincial university which would be devoted to the principles of jurisprudence and constitutional law. Their medical graduates were a source of strength to the university. He also referred to the many advantages Toronto offered the students and facetitiously eulogised the city water and city drainage.

Prof. Reynar replied for Victoria university. It gave him great pleasure to see the entente cordiale that existed between the different schools and colleges—between professional and liberal training. A general training he thought was very useful to professional men. As the arch and buttress gave beauty as well as strength, so did a liberal training to a professional man. He expressed to all engaged in liberal and professional education on behalf of his university a cordial good wish and hearty godspeed.

Principal Caven, for Knox college, returned thanks. Knox college ranked now in the catagory of universities—now conferred degrss in theology. His great desire was to see the several churches of this country dispose their whole revenues and energy to the advancement of theological education and missionary work, (applause) and leave the cultivation of general education to one great national body. (Applause.) He was glad to see this sentiment so well received by the highly intelligent company present. They could look with admiration to the work the churches had done for the cause of higher education, yet he would like to humbly suggest that it would be to the advancement of all our churches if they would dispose all their money to missionary and theological work, and unite in building up a great central system of higher education. (Applause.) They had now the Baptist college and the Protestant Episcopal college sending their students to the provincial university. He was glad also to say that St. Michael's college had sought and had obtained affiliation with that university, more would come in time and he was sure a great deal was to be gained by the youth of Canada going together for their university training. (Cheers.) It was said that theologians were extremely narrow—by going to the same university, meeting under the same distinguished professors—they would learn to be charitable—nay more, to love one another. (Applause.) It was said that ministers should not work for money, but that doctors were entitled to make all they could. They should all remember that making money was not the highest object in any of the professions.

Rev. S. Jones (Protestant Episcopal divinity school) said the young man who tried to secure a good liberal education as well as a professional one would make the greatest success. He cordially agreed with the sentiments of Principal Caven. He hoped all our young men, whatever their theological views, would meet together in a great national university and there learn to measure the powers of their fellows and learn to know and respect one another. (applause).

Dr. Kennedy replied for Trinity Medical school and Mr. Wallace for the students of that school.

The following song appropriate to the occasion was sung by the glee club:

OUR FACULTY.

The men who manage the T. S. M.,
We think it proper to parody them.
With Dr. T. Aikens we'll head the list,
A knife in one hand and a 'log in his fist.
Next Dr. H. Wright, who is so energetic
That he lectures at daylight on Chylo-poietic.
That dear old man, Dr. Richardson, he
Does faithfully teach us anatomy.
Dr. Ogden draws mountains and vales on a map,
And warns us when travelling beware of mishap.
Then Dr. James Thorburn who Headland's division
Imparts unto us with the greatest precision.
Dr. Barrett comes in and the boys are all present,
But when he starts grinding they're suddenly absent.
Dr. W. Ogden now takes the floor,
And Gussie she listens behind the door.
Dr. Moses Aikens so far from home,
Grows eloquent over an old dry bone.
When Dr. Oldright gets on his feet,
He soon has sewers and traps complete.
Then Dr. McFarlane, without much palaver,
Gets excellent work from us on the cadaver.
But Dr. George Wright, with his large tender heart
Will carefully certify every one's part.
And now Dr. Graham, with very much vim,
Describes the affections and ills of the skin.
If anything happens your eye or your ear,
To Dr. R. Reeve you may go without fear.
Now comes Mr. Keys, who as fast as we like,
Will teach us to catch University pike.
Mr. Henry Montgomery, scholarly man,
Can show you distinctly the head of a clam.
Dr. Adam H. Wright, after taking our fees,
Don't leave us enough to get on a breeze.
Then Christmas times we hail with joy,
When Pickering sings us the Butcher Boy.
And now if our parody hasn't made rhyme,
We'll promise to do it much better next time.

Dr. Richardson said it was the duty of the province to endow a chair of phisiology with all the necessary appliances in the university of Toronto (hear hear). The schools of medicine could not do that thoroughly on their own part.

In response to the toast of the graduating class, Mr. W. H. Montague replied as follows:

Gentlemen,—As the representative of the graduating class of this session, I have the pleasure of expressing our appreciation of the hearty reception you have given this toast. More especially do we value it coming as it does from the honored guests of the evening, the respected faculty of our Toronto school, and this numerous assembly of our fellow students. I trust that those of us who hope to graduate in the coming spring have tried to merit the esteem of all, and from your manifest good feeling I cannot but think that we have admirably succeeded. I have used the term "hope to graduate." May we not be disappointed, for the pleasure of being a graduating man is certainly one which does not grow greater with advancing years. Many of us look forward with unutterable satisfaction to the prospect of a not far distant termination to the years of our pupilage, but we feel no little regret at the thoughts of fast approaching farewells to the instructors and personal friendships of a noble faculty and the associations and sympathies of a true and genial school. I need offer no tribute to men whose long years of professional skill and records of eminent success have placed them at the very head of the medical profession in this Dominion. But as those who have been under their instructions for a number of years we are in a position to know of their qualities as men. The history of the school is good evidence on the one point; the universal satisfaction and deep respect which is felt for them among all classes of our students is good evidence on the other. The Toronto school of medicine has abundant reason to be proud of the history of its past. Since 1870 there have been offered for competition in Toronto university twenty four gold medals in medicine. The students of the Toronto school have secured twenty of these in competition with the students of the other affiliated schools. This is a fair test, for all meet there on equal grounds. Of the many silver medals the Toronto school students have secured even a larger percentage than of the gold medals. Last year out of six scholarships awarded in the university our students secured no less than five, and we have every confidence in those who are at present in the race for like honors that they will nobly sustain the reputation which the school has ever borne of being the prime feeder of the medical department of Toronto university. (Applause.) The host of our graduates, widely spread as they are through our own and other lands, now reaches an exceeding large number, and among these are to be found some of the ablest physicians and most distinguished surgeons which the country has yet seen. The older members of the faculty continually learn of some fresh honor conferred upon the former members of their classes. Some of our graduates are at the head of important hospitals in the motherland and in the colonies, whilst not a few are respected members of our own faculty, or occupy important chairs in other Canadian schools of medicine. The chairman has referred to the more than ordinary ability of the graduating class. We have indeed some men of magnificent parts, and I trust that none of us will be found to be so lacking of skill in the healing art as to be deserving of so severe a criticism as that made by the dignified editor of Chronicles when he says:

"And the King Asa became violently ill with disease in his feet, and he sought not the Lord, but called upon his physicians, and the King Asa slept with his fathers."

The man who wrote that was certainly in good health, and when he did get old and was afflicted with the gout, I have no hesitation in saying that he despatched a messenger to the nearest doctor preparatory to making his supplications unto the Lord. (Applause.) The public are becoming alarmed at the rapid increase of the medical professional. Our schools, indeed, not only supply a demand but they demand a supply, and they get it. Though this will in all likelihood be our last session in Toronto, I should be sorry to think this the last annual dinner we should be privileged to attend. In going out from the circles of the school we feel that we leave many firm friends behind, not only among our students, but also among our preceptors, who standing with one hand outstretched to receive the registration fees of the freshmen, extend the other to us in token of a fond farewell. Pope must have anticipated the occasion when he wrote:

True friendship's laws are by this rule expressed,
Welcome the coming—speed the parting guest.

Allow me, gentlemen, to repeat my thanks on behalf of those whom I represent, for the hearty manner in which you have received our toast. (Applause.)

Dr. Burns for the college of physicians and surgeons hoped that our legislators would not rest till Canadian licentiates were placed on the same footing in England as English graduates were accorded in Canada.

Dr. Wild on behalf of the learned professions returned thanks. He thought the great duty of all professional men should be to learn to teach mankind to do without them (the professional men). He thought a mistake had been made in the creation of the Ontario college of physicians and surgeons. The province should accept the graduates of the university and not compel them to pass a second ordeal.

A number of other toasts brought this most successful gathering to a close.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

An Old Man Eighty Years Old Fires a Barn and Tries to End His Life.

JARVIS, Ont., Nov. 10.—Andrew Ward, an old man 80 years of age, has been living for a year past with James Ross, his nephew, a farmer, residing two miles from this village. At a division court, held here yesterday, the old man sued Ross for wages which he claimed for work during the past year. His claim was not sustained. About 10 o'clock last night one of Ross's barns was destroyed by fire, together with the contents. After the fire Ross in company with two young men while passing the stables heard a strange noise, and upon opening the doors a horrible sight presented itself. The old man stood near one of the stalls with a strap around his neck, the end of which he had fastened to his cane and with this he was twisting and tightening the strap evidently endeavouring to take his own life. His throat was cut and his face fearfully swollen. Ross and the two young men who found him took the strap from his neck when he staggered to the ground in an almost helpless condition. A jackknife covered with blood was found in one of his pockets, and no doubt this was the instrument with which he had attempted to cut his throat. The wound is about two inches in length but not deep. He is generally suspected of having set fire to the barn, but makes a positive denial of having done so. He admits having been in the burn that evening, and says he drove some cows out, fastened the doors, and came away. Ross had no insurance on the burn nor contents. It contained nearly his whole crop of grain. The loss is estimated at about $1000.

TWO MEN DROWNED.

Caught in a Gale and Swamped on Lake Ontario—Natives of Buffalo.

BERTIE, Ont., Nov. 10.—Early this morning the bodies of two young men were found on the beach at Wind Mill point. An investigation showed them to be bodies of Barnard McMannis and Joseph Isaac, who left Buffalo yesterday morning to have a day's sport at duck shooting at Point Albino. It is supposed they started for home in the boat at four o'clock in the evening, and when but a short time out on the lake they were caught in a gale and swamped. In the pockets of Isaac was found a heavy gold band ring and a watch, and in McMannis' pockets a watch and chain and a revolver. Isaac was cashier in a shoe store in Buffalo, and McMannis was a caulker in a ship-yard.

THE OCEAN CANAL.

Locking Through the Welland of a Big Steamship

THOROLD, Nov. 10.—The ocean steamship Campana of London, England, has just passed the head locks of the new Welland canal at this place on her way to Collingwood, to engage in the Lake Superior trade. The Campana is an iron vessel 255 feet long and 38 feet beam. She carries fourteen hundred tons, when drawing about thirteen feet of water. The last vessel which went down the new canal was the propeller Enterprise, which passed through four locks and the connecting reaches in fifty minutes. This will give an idea of what can be accomplished when the new gate apparatus is in full working order.

MEAFORD, Nov. 10.—An old man named William Fleming died suddenly in McGirr's hotel this morning. His appearance was little better than a beggar. In three separate parts of his clothing, however, were sewed about $1000. The greater portion of this was a cheque for $926, which was sewed in his coat.
