Birds Build Playhouses

The Strange Bower-Birds of Australia.

A few years ago a gentleman hunting in the wild forests of New Guinea, where no white man had ever before been, made a very surprising discovery. He had just shot at a small animal of some kind that ran up the trunk of a tree near by, when, happening to turn around, he found himself in front of a neatly-built little cabin about a foot and a half high, in the midst of a lovely meadow of rich green mosses studded with many beautiful flowers.

He could not have told, at first, whether he was more pleased, puzzled, or amazed to find this elegant little playhouse in such a remote and deserted place. It looked as if it had been built by woodland fairies. It was, indeed, much prettier and better made than the rude huts of the natives, and its discoverer could scarcely believe any beast or bird capable of executing such a piece of work.

A flat bit of ground, in which grew a small tree about the size of a light walking stick, had been chosen for the purpose, and upon this the cabin was erected with the little tree for its center post. Stems of an air plant, which would live and grow after they had been built into the structure, formed the walls and roof of the cabin, and fluttered their tiny leaves about the doorway that led into the pretty garden, where bright flowers and gaily-colored berries and the wings of beautiful insects lay scattered about. But no one was at home, and not till some time afterwards was the discovery made that the builders of the tiny playhouse and pleasure grounds were little birds. It was found, too, that these clever creatures are not only clever architects, but excellent housekeepers, and that they not only build and decorate their cabins, but keep them in the most perfect order, all faded blossoms being carried away and replaced by fresh ones, all rubbish carefully removed, and no dirt or disorder anywhere to be seen.

First cousin to the garden-birds, as the little cabin builders are well named, are the bower-birds of Australia. These birds, instead of cabins, build arbors or bowers in which they meet to dance and frolic about. The bowers are very handsomely made, the walls are strongly formed of twigs and small branches woven together in such a manner as to bring the ends nicely in contact at the top, and the whole structure is covered with a layer of beautiful grasses, stones being used by the little builders to keep the parts securely fastened in their proper places.

These strange little playhouses are elegantly ornamented inside and out with various kinds of shells, pretty shining pebbles, gay scraps, little bones and skulls of small animals, bleached white, and the green, scarlet, and gold of the feathers of parrots and parroquets. Indeed, so well do the natives know the love the bower-birds have for brilliant and polished objects that, should they lose anything of the kind, they at once try to find the bower that has been beautified at the expense of their property.

After the male birds have performed the heavier labor of constructing the arbors, they leave to their little mates the lighter and pleasanter task of decorating them. This the lady bird proceeds to do with great zest, often flying miles to find pretty little bits of glitter of bright color, or busying themselves about the bower, changing the ornaments, rejecting anything not suited to their taste. To these bowers the birds resort to enjoy themselves, as in a ball-room, bowing and dancing and turning about, playfully chasing each other up and down their gay arbor in an untiring whirl of sportive delight.

HANDEL AND GEORGE I

How the Composer Regained the Favor of His Sovereign.

[Harper's Round Table.]

Handel once offended George I. so seriously that he was afraid to approach the court, but through the friendly interposition of Baron Kilmansegge, who was high in favor, he was restored to favor in the following manner:

Soon after his arrival in England the king was persuaded to make a short excursion on the water. Handel was informed of this intention, and, upon the advice of a friend, he composed some pieces expressly for the occasion, and secretly conducted their performance on a boat that accompanied the royal barge. His majesty, upon hearing these compositions, which have since become famous under title of the "Water Music," was so surprised and pleased by their excellence that he immediately demanded the name of the author. The baron, who was on hand for that purpose, told the king that they were the work of a faithful servant of his majesty, who, conscious of the cause of the displeasure he had given, durst not presume to approach the royal presence until he could be assured that by every demonstration of gratitude and duty in the future he might hope to secure pardon. The intercession was accepted, and Handel was immediately restored to favor. His compositions were honored with the most flattering marks of royal approbation, and the king immediately gave him a pension of £200 a year, in addition to that which had previously been conferred upon him by Queen Anne.

Unclaimed Balances.

Creditors With Long Standing Bank Accounts

With the Various Chartered Banks in London—Interesting Facts From a Financial Statement Prepared by the Dominion Government.

A report of dividends remaining unpaid and of unclaimed balances in chartered banks of the Dominion of Canada for five years and upwards, prior to Dec. 31, 1896, has been compiled by N. S. Garland, F.S.S., F.S.A., clerk of financial statistics, Ottawa. The statement has been issued in conformity with an act respecting banks and banking, 53 Vic., chap. 31, sec. 88, and refers to moneys in respect to which no transactions have taken place or upon which no interest has been paid for five years and upwards. In case of moneys deposited for a fixed period the five years are reckoned from the termination of said period.

Throughout Canada at the close of 1896 the unclaimed balances amounted to $427,108 79 and the unpaid dividends to $6,324 72, while at the close of 1895 the amounts were $392,408 57 and $6,516 10 respectively.

A HAPPY GIRL.

Miss Amina Kelly Tells of Her Illness and Subsequent Cure — A Statement That Should Be Read by Every Girl in Canada.

Miss Amina Kelly, a well known and much esteemed young lady living at Maplewood, N. B., writes: "I consider it my duty to let you know what your wonderful medicine has done for me. In April, 1896, I began to lose flesh and color; my appetite failed and on going upstairs I would be so tired I would have to rest. I continued in this condition for three months, when I was taken suddenly ill and not able to go about. Our family doctor was called in and he pronounced my illness chlorosis (poverty of the blood). At first his treatment appeared to do me good, but only for a time, and I then began to grow worse. I continued taking his medicine for three months, when I was so discouraged at not regaining my health that I declined taking it any longer. I then tried a liquid medicine advertised to cure cases like mine, but did not obtain the slightest benefit. I had become terribly emaciated and weak. There was a constant terrible roaring noise in my head; my feet and ankles were swollen and I was as pale as a corpse. One day while in this condition my father brought home a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and asked me to try them. In less than a week I could sit up, and in a couple of weeks I could walk quite a distance without being tired. My appetite returned, the roaring in my head ceased, I began to gain flesh and color, and before I had used a half-dozen boxes I was as healthy as I had ever been in my life. My friends did not expect me to recover and are now rejoicing at the wonderful change Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have wrought in me. If my statement will be the means of helping some other discouraged sufferer you are at perfect liberty to publish it."

The above statement was sworn before me at Maplewood, York county, N. B., this 14th day of May, 1897.

TIMOTHY W. SMITH, J.P.

Albert, Alice and Victoria Winegarten, now of Brampton, were born triplets. They were named after the royal family, and were granted 100 acres of crown land each in 1860. The father of the children never made an effort to gain possession of the land given them, and Albert Winegarten was in Windsor on Monday for that purpose, having heard that the county held some crown land in the Dominion. If not successful here he will have to seek what he claims belongs to him and his sisters in Quebec or Manitoba.

Rebekah Assembly.

Annual Meeting of the Society at Belleville.

The Membership Now Reaches 3,000—Election of Officers.

Belleville, Aug. 11.—The Rebekah Assembly of Ontario met yesterday morning and the delegates were presented with addresses on behalf of the city, and of the I. O. O. F. There is a large attendance.

The president's report to the Rebekah Assembly showed that seven new lodges were instituted during the year, and that the membership is about 3,000. The receipts during the year were $3,869 76. The officers elected were: President, Mrs. Luscombe, Sarnia; vice-president, Mrs. Brill, Guelph; secretary, Miss Maggie Waddell, St. Thomas; treasurer, Miss Nellie Dobson, Chatham. The nominations for 1898 are: President, Mrs. Luscombe, Sarnia; vice-president, Mrs. Watson, Harriston; Mrs. Miller, Deseronto; Mrs. Dickey, Oshawa; Mrs. Ackland, Brownsville; Mrs. Patterson, Brantford; secretary, Miss Waddell, St. Thomas.

BUILDING UP.

How the System May Be Built Up by the Use of the Proper Medicines.

Mrs. James E. Ellwood, 23 Owaissa street, St. Thomas, Ont., wife of the well-known contractor and builder, gives the following lucid account of her own and her husband's experience in the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. We deem it worthy of publication, because we are aware that many other residents in St. Thomas and vicinity suffer from similar complaints, and could be cured by the prompt use of this remarkable remedy.

Says Mrs. Ellwood: My husband and myself have taken Doan's Kidney Pills, which I got at Harvey's drug store. We used them for kidney and back trouble, and were both cured in a remarkably short time.

"In the case of my husband, the kidney complaint was caused by a fall from the scaffold of a house which he was building. We spent a good deal of money, without receiving any material good. In my own case, despite the treatment which I underwent, my eyes became seriously affected, and I was, in fact, in a miserable condition of health.

"Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me, and I may say that it only took one box to cure my husband. It does seem strange how much money people sometimes spend in the effort to obtain relief, and finally get something that costs only a few cents, and does the work after the other high-priced medicines have failed.

"Doan's Kidney Pills cure quickly, are not expensive, and should be used by all sufferers from kidney trouble. I have good reason to recommend them, and do so unhesitatingly." 39
