ENGLISH STRIKERS REFUSE TO WORK

Engineers Still Remain Idle in Many Centres, Tho Much Taunted.

STILL DISOBEY UNION

Husky, Able-Bodied Men Hope to Evade Military Service.

London, May 14.—The strike of engineers in various parts of England continues. The Amalgamated Society of Engineers, the great trades union which the strikers are disobeying, is urging the men to resume work today, and the indications are that the strikers will return to work at some places, for instance, in Derby, where they balloted in favor of a resumption of work. It is also said the men out in Manchester will return to their posts, tho some reports from Manchester indicate that doubt is felt that they will do so.

At some important centres, such as Barrow and Birkenhead, the men are reported to be determined to continue the strike. One feature of the movement is the vehemence with which the strikers are being condemned by other workmen. A great number of the strikers are young, husky fellows, from 25 to 30 years of age, who, except for exemption for special work, would all be in the army. Their critics say the strike is nothing more than an attempt to dodge military services by hundreds of eligibles, who fear their exemption is in danger thru the abolition of the card system, which is their chief grievance. This view is being rubbed into the idlers by taunts from uniformed soldiers and workers in other trades. The munition girls have particularly scored them with sharp comment, and in many instances the strikers fled from their ire.

FOE TO SALVE SHIPS SUNK BY SUBMARINES

German Naval Engineers Invent Device for Raising Vessels.

Amsterdam, via London, May 13.—The problem of salving ships sunk by submarines is solved, according to The Hamburger Fremdenblatt, which says that German naval engineers have perfected a process of raising ships from the bottom of the sea. Details are withheld, except that specially equipped salvage vessels will be employed, and that they will be able to operate even in stormy weather.

The Fremdenblatt, which, as an example, puts the value of the ships sunk in February alone at what it calls the moderate figure of $130,000,000, says that the number of ships sunk and their favorable position in most cases for raising guarantee for many years after the war plenty of work and a rich profit.

Omnibus Strike in London Bitterly Resented By Public

London, May 13.—Omnibus traffic thruout London, was practically at a standstill today owing to the strike of the drivers, their grievance being non-recognition of their union.

A meeting of the motor bus employes was held tonight (Sunday) when a ballot was taken on the question of the strike. The vote showed 1152 in favor of a walkout and 695 agianst it.

The strike is extremely unpopular with the public, thousands of whom on Sundays use the buses for their outings.

Ex-Premier Viviani of France Reaches Boston From Ottawa

Boston, May 13.—Rene Viviani, former premier of France, arrived here from Ottawa at 9 o'clock this morning and was accorded a rousing reception by the citizens of Boston. M. Viviani spoke feelingly of his reception by the people of Canada, "whose sons have fought and heroically died in defence of civilization on the battlefields of France."

WAR SUMMARY

THE DAY'S EVENTS REVIEWED

TWO days of heavy fighting southeast of Arras, in France, have won the British a considerable amount of ground in the Hindenburg line, the Arras-Cambrai road and the Scarpe Valley. The British have captured most of Bullecourt Village, the cemetery chemical works and the western section of Roeux, another part of Greenland Hill, and 1200 yards of trenches, including Cavaly farm, astride the Arras-Cambrai road, and southeast of Monchy. They made their advance against Roeux, which is north of the Scarpe, on a front of one and a half miles. The engagements, tho heavy, were local and not general, as when the Canadians captured Vimy ridge.

* * * * * *

The main line of advance is down the Scarpe Valley and road towards Douai. Progress by this route turns, that is, gets British forces behind the Hindenburg line and so renders it useless for the enemy. The enemy has constructed this new rampart of defence during the winter to permit either the making of a permanent stand, or at least the halting of his retreat long enough to allow the methodical evacuation of northern France. The Drocourt switch line, towards which the British are advancing down the Scarpe Valley, in the view of experts, can only enable the enemy to make a temporary stand, for when he falls back on it he exposes Douai Junction to British artillery fire; he must evacuate Lens; and he makes the present strong position at La Bassee a dangerous one for him to hold. In fact, retirement much further east exposes Lille to the British attack, and if Lille should go the enemy's position in Belgium becomes precarious.

* * * * * *

The fighting, which is ending with the shoving back of the Germans from the disputed ground, has lasted nearly a month, and the engagement has been one of the most strongly contested in the annals of the British army and of the war. The defeat of the enemy in this stand-up fight under open-field conditions settles another matter in which the enemy counted that he would have the advantage. Von Hindenburg, in interviews recently, insisted that when the fighting developed into open-field warfare again his soldiers, trained with the experience of the past 47 years, and moreover of the Polish campaign of two summers ago, would have the advantage over the new British armies. After sacrificing great numbers of men, in charging in the open, under the British cannon and infantry fire, he has received his lesson. When the news of the reverse spreads thru the German army it will certainly weaken the morale of the men, for the recent fighting has given the rival systems of tactics and of training, as well as the stamina of the two armies, a full test, and the result has again been against the German army.

* * * * * *

While the heavy fighting was proceeding north and south of the Scarpe the Canadians, remaining in their trenches, turned their long-range artillery on Lens in the process of making the city untenable. Lens and its outskirts have an entire German division as their garrison, and ever since the loss of Vimy ridge these Germans, despite appalling losses, have clung tenaciously to the town. The British guns are keeping all lines of communication from Lens under constant fire.

* * * * * *

The French infantry, while continuing its preparations for the offensive, in the past two days stood firm against counter-attacks from the army of the German crown prince in the Champagne, the plateau south of Craonne, and the area of Maisons de Champagne. French artillery and rifle fire smashed all these attacks, making them cost the enemy dearly in men.

* * * * * *

A fleet of British monitors and other craft appeared off the port of Zeebrugge, in Belgium, on Saturday morning and plastered that town and its precincts with high explosive shells. The royal naval air service gave excellent aid to the warships. Seaplanes flew above the town and directed the fire of the guns, and they engaged in combat with the German airmen who rose to drive them off. The British machines fought over 15 aerial combats, they destroyed four German machines, they damaged and drove down five others out of control and they remained masters of the air above the harbor. One British machine alighted in nearby Dutch territory and the Dutch authorities interned it. Another British machine is missing. Dutch correspondents report that the bombardment heavily damaged the harbor works and blew up two submarine sheds. The casualties numbered 63 killed and more than 100 hospital cases.

* * * * * *

In the Balkan theatre, where the allies are keeping up the offensive, the Serbians have just won a notable success by the capture of Hill 1024 and the making of further progress towards Droboplove. They are endeavoring to turn the Bulgarian positions by making an advance over the mountains instead of over the level ground, for in this warfare the mountains are dominating the plain and the defence cannot consolidate its positions and make powerful lines so well on them as where the ground permits the digging of trenches. Greek troops fighting beside the French have captured a Bulgarian field work near Lymnitsa. The French repulsed violent Bulgarian attacks in the Vardar Valley, but the enemy managed to gain a footing in trenches taken by the French on Srka-di-Legen.

* * * * * *

The German report of the destruction of a Russian motorboat and the damaging of another at the entrance to Riga Bay, where these craft appeared yesterday, shows the presence of German naval units, tho perhaps only submarines, off this entrance. The Russian army has still to contend against a sea of mud, so its operations must remain local and ineffectual until the ground dries. The Russian official communication records exchanges of fire, scouting reconnaissances and aerial engagements on the western and Rumanian fronts.

* * * * * *

On the Italian front the big offensive towards Trieste has not yet materialized. The Italian artillery fire on the Isonzo between Tolmino and the sea has greatly increased. Aerial activity has also become exceedingly lively. The Italians managed on several occasions to drop bombs on important points in Austrian territory, while they frustrated many attempts of Austrian machines to raid their territory.

BOMB IN KAISER'S PALACE.

Paris, May 13.—An infernal machine was discovered recently in the Bellevue Palace, in the Tiergarten in Berlin, where the imperial German family is now residing, according to a correspondent, who sends German news to L'Humanite. The machine, he says, contained enough dynamite to completely wreck the palace and the adjoining buildings.

"It is probable the German Government will declare this news a pure invention," says the correspondent; "nevertheless I can affirm that my information is accurate."

Four Respond to Appeals at Earlscourt Recruiting Meeting

Under the auspices of the 255th Battalion Q. O. R. a recruiting meeting was held last night in the Royal George Theatre, Earlscourt. The large building was packed with a capacity audience.

John Walshe, president of the Earlscourt Business Men's Association, occupied the chair, and as a result of the forceful appeal of the speakers four recruits were enrolled.

"If conscription had been put in force at the commencement of the war there would not be a widow in Earlscourt or Canada today," said T. G. Matheson. "The men who should have gone have not gone and in consequence we have the widows mourning the loss of their husbands in such large numbers in Earlscourt.

"Premier Borden judged the men of Canada by the men of Earlscourt and in this he made a mistake. This may be the last appeal we shall make for recruits, as the goverhent is now going to make it its business to see that young eligible men enlist. There are a lot of able-bodied men in munition plants at the present time who should be in khaki and my appeal is also directed to them to join the colors and help their brothers in the trenches."

A musical program was rendered and war pictures shown by courtesy of the theatre management.

COL. ROOSEVELT HAS BALFOUR AS VISITOR

British Statesman Goes to Oyster Bay After Service at Cathedral.

New York, May 12.—Foreign Minister Arthur James Balfour, of Great Britain, head of the war mission to the United States, spent a somewhat militant Sunday, altho it was supposed to be a day of rest for the weary envoys.

In the morning the British statesman went to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, where he listened to a war sermon by Rev. Dr. Charles H. Brent, Episcopal Bishop of the Philippines. In the afternoon he went for a visit to Col. Theodore Roosevelt to Oyster Bay, who wants to head a regiment of volunteers to fight in France. There were no formal entertainments for the members of the mission, and Mr. Balfour's associates spent the day as they pleased.

There was rather a distinguished congregation at the cathedral. Mr. Balfour occupied a pew with Joseph H. Choate and Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador. The cathedral was crowded, altho admission was by card only.

At the close of the service the British and the American anthems were sung. Mr. Balfour left the city tonight with most of his associates, altho several members remained in New York or went to other places to visit friends. Lieut.-Gen. Bridges, it was announced, will stay in New York two or three days longer.

Price of Bread Going Up.

With the price of bread and other commodities continually going up, can you tell us how it is that the Electric Wiring and Fixture Co., of 261 College street, can maintain the old schedule of prices for wiring occupied houses for electric light and electric fixtures. Only by extensive purchases of materials over a year ago can they keep this up. Fancy having your house wired and fixtured for electric light in these days without breaking the plaster or marking the decorations and all lines concealed, at the prices of old.
