G. W. Railway Bridge Burned.

THE TRACK IMPASSABLE FOR THE PRESENT.

OAKVILLE, May 29.

The Great Western Railway bridge here took fire this morning about 8 o'clock, it is believed through a spark from a passing train. The wood-work of the bridge was entirely destroyed, but the buttresses remain standing. The morning train from this city had passed the spot before the accident. It is expected that the damage will be repaired and traffic resumed on Monday. In the meantime passengers and freight will be conveyed past the destroyed portion by stage and trucks. The Company, it appears, has been contemplating the erection of a new bridge at this point, and therefore the accident will not be considered so serious as it otherwise might have been.

LATEST.

HAMILTON, May 26.

Owing to the bridge being burned at Oakville this morning the morning trains leaving here were cancelled. However, at 3:30 this afternoon, the usual train left for Toronto The Great Western Railway have already put upwerds of one hundred men to work at the reconstruction of the bridge, which will be proceeded with night and day until it is finished sufficient for the passage of trains. In the meantime passengers and baggage will be transported across the river from one train to another. The fire appears to have started almost immediately after the passing of No. 1 train, which arrived here at 6 o'clock this morning.

HAMILTON, May 29.—In consequence of the destruction of the Oakville bridge by fire this morning, the passenger trains between Toronto and Hamilton will run as follows for the next five days, by which time it is hoped to have a temporary bridge built. Trains will leave Toronto at 5:45 a.m., and 2 p.m., and will leave Hamilton at 9 a.m., and 3:45 p.m.

Government Reverses.

(From the Hamilton Times.)

During the session just over the Government suffered the following reverses:

1. In its attempt to give the petitioners against Mr. Wilkes, of Centre Toronto, an illegal advantage, it was defeated by a majority of four.

2. It attempted to deprive Mr. Cockburn, the legally elected member for Muskoka, of his seat in the House, but was compelled by the House to submit to the views of the Opposition on the matter, and allow Mr. Cockburn to be sworn in as a member.

3. It was defeated by a majority of 35, when it sought to resist New Brunswick's just claims to have a School Law submitted to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, for a decisive opinion as to its constitutionality.

4. It was defeated in its attempt to give a pet printing contractor 50 per cent, more than he had earned—was forced into a compromise that only gave him 27 per cent. more than he had legally earned, and only carried that by a majority of one.

5. It was unable to agree on a policy as to the continuance of the Insolvency Law, and was forced into action in the matter by the House by an amendment to the motion to go into Committee on Supply. Such a motion is generally considered one of want of confidence, but the Government saved itself by a part of its members voting for the amendment to the Government's own original motion.

6. In 1872, Sir John Macdonald moved and carried the six months' hoist to a bill providing that the elections, at any general election, be held on the same day. In 1873 Sir John was forced to include that provision in his own election bill.

7. In 1872, the Government voted against and defeated Mr. Mill's bill for the abolition of Dual Representation. In 1873 the House made that same bill law, and the Government had to submit.

8. The Government sought to push through a job for the Northern R. R., but, fearing defeat had to withdraw it.

10. The Government was pledged to secure Legislative sanction of the land clause in the Pacific R. R. Charter. Pending any discussion of its Pacific R. R. policy, it had not the courage to bring down an Act for the purpose, and so left its railway charter inoperative.

Past cases a very considerable list of failures for one session and shows that, however resolutely bold the Government has been in throwing away public funds to all sorts of claimants as the price of Parliamentary support, its general policy meets with no favor from either the country or the Parliament.

Terrible Whirlwind in Lanark County.

GREAT DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.

(From the Perth Courier.)

On Friday afternoon last, between 5 and 6 o'clock, a terrible tornado passed through this section of country, exceeding in violence and its destructive effects anything within the memory of even the oldest residents of old Lanark county. Its path is marked by the ruins of houses, barns, stables, fences, and trees; and its debris covers the ground as if the hand of some Titan had scattered in his rage the most enduring works of nature and man, ruthlessly far and wide. Though we have not heard the full extent of its devastations, or been informed of the exact route it followed during its visit here, we have learned sufficient to infer that the cyclone took an almost circular sweep through the county, travelling like a destroying angel, through Elmsley, Montague, Beckwith, Ramsay, Lanark, Darling and Lavant—where it sported with buildings, fences, and woods in a manner almost suggestive of West Indian hurricanes. Its path was between an eighth and a quarter of a mile wide; and on one side of its sweep, the debris was thrown towards the south, on the opposite side to the northward. It was generally accompanied by a heavy fall of rain, and its course was traced overhead by a pitch black cloud, which moved in majestic gyrations peculiar to circular wind-storms. Its stay at each point occupied about two minutes—quite long enough. Strange to say, no lives were lost in the prevalent destruction, though apparently there was terrible room for casualties and fatalities—boards, timbers, and trees were hurled through the air for hundreds of yards, and sometimes driven into the ground and into stumps so forcibly that in many cases they could not be removed by manual power. Buggies and waggons were overturned and smashed to pieces, and people blown over and rolled ludicrously and swiftly along the ground; yet we have not heard of even a limb being broken or a severe wound having been received.

From two points only have we received details of the ruin caused. The Rev. Dr. Chisholm, who passed through Lanark township last week gives the following particulars of the destruction that came under his observation in the north, or rear of that township, between Larocque's and Craig's taverns, 3rd concession:—Roof blown off a large barn belonging to Mr. Bulloch; roof blown away from widow Tim's house; doors of house and all the outbuildings of widow Peter McGuire. Mr. Watchorn's sheds and buildings blown down; Neil McKay's sheds, barns, and stables hurled down and blown away. The tempest passed through Mr. McKay's bush and made a clean sweep a quarter of a mile wide from one end to the other. The tornado touched one corner of the house of his next door neighbor, a Mr. Thomson, and cut it clean off. The storm then passed into Lavant. On its line of march there is no such thing as a fence left, but the rails are scattered—broken and splintered—acres away from their original position.

Mr. Edward Elliott, who visited another locality chastened by the hurricane—North Elmsley—furnished us with a few of the leading particulars. The tempest, after crossing from Burgess, tore down a shed of Mr. George Oliver, at Ottay Lake. Thence moving towards Pike Falls, it hurled to pieces a barn of Mr. Alexander Adams. Then it took a corner off the Port Elmsley grist-mill, and moved the superstructure about six inches off its position on the foundation; the school house, Orange Hall, and the Episcopal Church were next blown down; and the greater part of the roof torn off the large Shaw store-house. Visiting Mr. John Elliott's premises, it wrenched part of the roof off the house, tore the barn nearly to pieces, took the roof off the stables, sheds, and pushed the latter off its foundation about 18 inches. Some of the timbers were carried away a quarter of a mile. Farther on a barn of G. O'Hara's was unroofed, and a house, barn, and stable of Hartford O'Hara were likewise unroofed. The storm next tore down an unoccupied house, and unroofed a stable belonging to Henry Best. A shed and a stable of John Hogg, and Jas. Weekes, respectively, were unroofed, and a house and barn of Thos. Moore. Mr. A. Clark had also a barn unroofed. How the country farther on in Elmsley was used by the storm we have not yet heard; but we are told that Montague suffered severely.

The town of Perth fortunately happened to be off the track of the tornado, but did not escape a heavy shower of rain and a fierce wind that sent many a board-pile flying in all directions. Had the cyclone struck the town, the loss of life and property would inevitably have been large.

Miss Nellie Grant's birthday will be very generally celebrated this year all over the United States. This is a gratifying evidence of a disposition to accept the situation universally displayed by those to whom the Government offers any situation. For the sake of definiteness we may state that the maiden's natal day comes on the 4th day of July.

A humorous correspondent says that now almost every time a young lady passes him his mind rever its to an animal he saw in a traveling menagerie last summer, and which the showman called a camel. The reason for this he says is too conspicuous to require explanation. Apropos of the same we might say that though the demand for them has greatly increased lately, we still have a small quantity of old exchanges and papers which we will supply it slightly advanced prices.
