Winter Care of Cattle.

How many farmers there are who, towards the close of winter, complained of being short of fodder, and are compelled to purchase hay at high prices to carry their stock through until pasture time. I know from experience what this is and find it does not pay.

There are two causes and also two remedies for this state of things, manual, too heavy a stock, and too wasteful feeding. For the former, the remedy is obvious; for the latter, a great many farmers have yet discovered a preventive, but go on in the old way of feeding, in common racks made in the yard, either corn fodder, straw or hay. Here is where the loss occurs; and do every farmer know the great gain there is to be in cutting up everything he feeds, instead of feeding it whole, there would be no more complaints of short fodder. I have tried it, and find that I can winter the same number of cattle, on cut fodder, now, where I only wintered five head last year, and, what is more, keep them in better order. I use a fodder cutter (worked by hand or horse as the case may be) and feed in the yard in troughs six feet long, eighteen inches deep and two feet wide at the top, sloping to six inches at the bottom. My cattle eat it up clean—hard buts, stalks and all; and one morning's bundle of fodder—such as would be usually given to a steer at one time—lasts me a whole day.

Another advantage is, that my manure is all short, easily handled in the spring, when I heap it up under the sheds, and I am not bothered by the long, coarse stuff through it. Cattle prefer their fodder cut, and will eat it more quietly.

The same saving may be accomplished in the stable by cutting the hay fed to the horses, cows, &c. They soon learn to like it better than long hay, and then they can waste none.

Let every farmer who has not tried it, and who has been worried to know how to get his cattle rightly through the winter, not buying hay, try this plan, and, if he does it right, he will never regret the outlay for the cutter. My saving of fodder, in one winter, will, I think, pay for my cutter.—Cor. Germanton Telegraph.

How to Cut and Trim Pork.

The following directions, says the Baltimore Sun, may be found useful at the killing season:—

Have the hog laid on his back on a great table. Clean the carcase of the leaf fat.—Take off the feet at the ankle joints. Cut the head off close to the shoulders, separating the jowl from the skull, and open the skull lengthwise on the under side, so as to remove the brains fully. Remove the backbone in its whole length, and with a sharp knife cut off the skin—then the fat, leaving only about one inch of fat on the spinal column. The middlings or sides are now cut from between the quarters, leaving the shoulders square shaped, and the ham pointed; it may be rounded to a fancy or taney. The ribs are next removed, partially or entirely from the sides. The hams are cut for the hams, and fancy pieces of the sides are rendered up with the backbone stuff for lard. The sausage meat is cut from the legs and ribs; and other lean pieces are used in the same way. The thick part of the backbone that lies between the shoulders is called the chine; it is cut from the tapering bony end, and the other part called the chine bone by way of distinction. This barbecue should be used while fresh; the chine is better after being smoked.

Best Method of Keeping Beef.

The American Agriculturist says: Cut up the meat in pieces as large as you desire, pack it in a barrel or cask; then make a brine as follows: 4½ pounds of salt to 1 gallon of water, 1 oz. saltpetre to 100 pounds beef, 1 tablespoonful of ground pepper to 4 pounds of beef. Put in the salt and the saltpeter, and heat it boiling hot, skim it, then add the pepper. Pour it on the beef boiling hot and cover closely. Your meat will be good at any time. The philosophy is, the hot brine closes the pores on the surface, preventing decay and the meat from getting too salt. Try it. If necessary, scald the brine over in the spring, or put on a new brine. Farmers can in this way have fresh meat nearly all the time. The meat should be taken as soon as it gets cold, before it has acquired any odd taste by exposure to the atmosphere.

Going Through the Motions.

There was a fellow, who, unfortunately for himself and family, from being a pretty husband, took to tippling, and soon became an idle, trifling vagabond. Coming home one night after having as usual, been on a debauch, he began to cry bitterly—

"Wife! wife! I say, give me some supper."

The poor wife, who, while she could still provide food for the family by her own industry, informed him, with tears in her eyes, that there was nothing to get supper out of.

"What," said he, "haven't you a piece of cold meat?"

"No!"

"Give me a crust of bread, then."

He was told there was none.

"What! have you nothing—nothing."

"Nothing at all," replied the poor wife, "not even a crumb."

After a pause—"Very well, very well; give me a clean plate, knife and fork.—I'll go through the motions, any how if I starve afterwards!"

DESERTION.—BODY OF A CHILD FOUND IN A CARPET BAG.—Yesterday afternoon, about one o'clock, a glazed carpet bag was discovered on the door step of the residence of Mr. Page, John R. street, near Wellington avenue, which on being opened was found to contain the dead body of a female child, about 6 months old. How, when, or by whom the bag was left is yet shrouded in mystery. It is probable, however, that some unfortunate mother, to veil detection, or secure a home for her unfortunate child, deposited it there in the hope that it would be cared for, or perhaps decently buried, having died in indigent circumstances. An inquest was held by Coroner Daly, and a verdict rendered in accordance with the facts.—[Toronto Free Press, 21st.

A few days ago a young school mistress in this country was taking down the names and ages of her scholars, at the commencement of the term. She asked a little shock-headed boy, "Bub, how old are you?" He said, "My name ain't Bub, it's John." "Well," said the school mistress, "what's the rest of your name?" "Why, that's all the name I've got,—just John." "Well, what is your father's name?" "You needn't put pa's name down, he ain't coming to school, he's too big to school." "Well, how old are you?" "I ain't old at all, I am young."

☞ An advertisement lately appeared headed iron bedsteads and bedding. We suppose the linen must be sheet iron.

FENIAN UNIFORM.—According to the Tribune the "time honored uniform" of this body is a "sprig of shamrock in the buttonhole, and the golden sunburst on the seat of the breeches."

STUCK!—Half a million barrels of flour have been accumulated in New York by fancy prices, and prices have given way nearly a dollar a barrel; wheat has fallen five to ten cents, and all other grains are lower.

A CANADIAN ROBBED.—On Tuesday night a man named Anderson was robbed of about $60 in Canada money, by some persons to him unknown. He was attacked by the ruffians at a place about three miles above Windsor, where the money was stolen. The victim made a complaint to our police force yesterday, but there is little probability that the parties will be detected even if they crossed the river.—[Detroit Press, 21st.

LABEL SUIT.—An action is threatened against the Herald for damages laid at £5,000, for asserting in a communication, under the signature of "A Medical Merchant," that Mr. W. Scott, who has been appointed to a confidential position in the department of the Attorney General East, is a defaulter to the bar, and that Mr. M. Macdonald, who has been appointed reason [illegible] Toronto, is not a defaulter. I have made inquiries, and find that there is no truth in the information.

EXTRAORDINARY YIELD OF CORN.—The Santa Cruz Sentinel has been informed of a remarkable crop raised [illegible] this season, the field in question [illegible] bushels; [illegible] half, and [illegible] of wheat, not yet threshed, which [illegible] bushels to the acre. The land is allowed [illegible] the crop was raised from common Spanish farming.—California paper.

The wife of John Kuyers, living in Wolverhampton, Eng., recently gave birth to a dead child with two heads, two arms, and three legs. On one side the heads were two thirds [illegible] which were face to face, and joined at the lower part of the back. The child was the mother of several children.
