HOME RULE WITH THE LORDS

BRILLIANT SPEECHES AND BRILLIANT SCENES.

What Will Be the Result of the Rejection of the Measure?—Graphic Summary of the Course of the Debate — All the Eloquence, Like the Votes, Apparently on One Side — Mr. Gladstone's Program and the Radicals.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—A special cablegram to The Tribune says:

Value of the Lords.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—After a full-dress debate, extending over four days, the House of Lords last night threw out Mr. Gladstone's cherished measure by a majority of ten to one. It is not often that the House of Peers is called upon seriously to debate any measure of leading importance. Whenever this necessity arises the country is treated to a spectacle very different from what is usually seen in the Lower Chamber. The latter is a popular body, influenced by the ever-changing fancies and necessities of public opinion and, though much of its labor is devoted to answering popular demands, there is running through all its work the indelible strain of party warfare. In the Lords it is not so. The peers have not to answer to any constituents, and herein lies the chief recommendation of the hereditary system. Whenever a big legislative proposal comes before the Lords, though we may reckon upon a distinct bias in favor of the interests of property, it is always a matter of certainty that the discussion will be of a higher class than afforded by the Lower Chamber. In the latter one man, Mr. Gladstone, stands head and shoulders above every other. Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour are fine debaters, but every other name lags far behind. In the House of Lords there are a dozen speakers who are, perhaps, not comparable with Mr. Gladstone, but who are in all respects the equal, in some the superior, of either Mr. Chamberlain or Mr. Balfour.

A Fine Oratorical Display.

The high quality of the Lord's debating power has been once more illustrated in this week's discussions. Nothing has been finer in oratorical, dialectical display than the speeches of the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke of Argyle, Lord Selborne, Lord Rosebery and Lord Salisbury. It was un fortunate for the Government party that for every one who could support the Home Rule bill the Opposition had three speakers against it. Nor can it be denied that the weight of argument is entirely on the side of the Opposition. In truth there is some ground for complaint that the case for the bill has been indifferently put in the Upper Chamber. Earl Spencer, who introduced it, had the merit of earnestness, sincerity and courtesy; but his grounds for opposing the changes involved in Home Rule were simply feeble. His speech abounded with declarations of "I believe this," "I believe that, "I believe the other," but Earl Spencer's beliefs count for no more than the beliefs of other people who oppose him, and when he admitted that the Irish leaders were guilty of discreditable acts, but expressed as a sort of crowning faith the belief that the Irish nation would at once choose the right men to serve them. The Duke of Devonshire had no difficulty in showing up the folly of this simple faith as contrary to all past experience. The Duke of Devonshire's case was very strong in this aspect, that the Home Rule bill was not the bill of a legislature or of a political party, but proceeded from the brain of one man who never dared to make it known to the electorate, consequently it was a primary necessity that Mr. Gladstone should go to the country upon the measure. This is, of course, the watchword of the Opposition warfare.

His Grace of Argyle's Onslaught.

It is impossible to go through the entire course of this remarkable debate, but in addition to the speech already named, there are two or three others which stand out as of the first importance. The Duke of Argyel's will compare with anything ever expressed by Lord Salisbury, Mr. Balfour or Mr. Chamberlain as a contribution of the highest value on this subject. It was a terrific onslaught upon Mr. Gladstone personally, although he gave the latter credit for sincerity, yet it was the sincerity of a fanatic. Mr. Gladstone was a Mahdi, a grand panjandrum, a medicine man whose party followed him with servility. The words will stick far more than anything that can be found in the dull figures of Lord Playfair or the hapsodical utterances of Lord Ripon.

Remarkable Lord Rosebery.

But from certain points of view, Lord Rosebery's speech was the most remarkable of the whole debate. It was a singular deliverance, more an after-dinner speech than a defence or explanation of a state proposal. He was absolutely without enthusiasm for the bill, which it described as an experiment. The whole tone of his speech seemed to suggest that, as something had to be done for Ireland, they might as well read the bill a second time, and having amended it give Home Rule a trial. His best point was the asking the Opposition what other remedy they had to propose, what they meant to do with Ireland. He evidently did not like the famous ninth clause, which Lord Selborne had made the burden of his judicial analysis, and condemnation. Even the speech of the Lord Chancellor, which was the best on the Government side, was distinctly apologetic.

The ex-Premier, Brilliant and Temperate

Lord Salisbury, gave a more temperate address than might have been expected. Upon one point he gave emphatic answer to Lord Rosebery's enquiries. He revived his old declaration that the true remedy for Ireland was twenty years of resolute government. He repudiated the oft-told fiction that he and his colleagues ever contemplated creating a parliament in Dublin, and denounced the cowardice of surrender to men branded with crime.

The Partisan Press.

The verdict of the Lords is treated by the newspapers this morning according to their party color, but no one can deny the high quality of their debate, their full knowledge of details and the probable consequences of this ill-fated measure. It is probable that any effort to raise the cry "Down with the Upper Chamber!" will prove a miserable failure.

In the House of Commons.

The course of business in the Lower House has been pretty much as I indicated. The chamber accepted the resolution of Mr. Gladstone, giving him large control over members' time till the prorogation at Christmas. As originally proposed, Mr. Gladstone's resolution would have made him absolute master of every hour between now and December, but the Opposition showed such determination to fight this arbitrary assumption that the Government came to terms. It was a part of the arrangement that the Appropriation bill be taken at the end of supply before the House adjourns, instead of at the end of December, and further that no contentious legislation be attempted outside of the Employers' Liability and the Parish Council bills. The compromise has given great offence to several of the Liberal factions. The London Radicals are indignant that equalization of rates has been thrown over to next year. Many Radicals are angry that the Registration Bill, which is intended to gerrymander the electorate, is also deferred. But both these schemes will certainly be attempted at the next session.

Employers' Liability Bill.

In regard to the Employers' Liability Bill, there is a certain amount of difference of opinion between Mr. Balfour and the Tories and Mr. Chamberlain. The former would have allowed the measure to pass without serious change, but Mr. Chamberlain holds strong views, more advanced that his colleagues or than the Government. He has his eye on the next general election, and workingmen's constituencies like Birmingham would make employers liable for accidents as a matter of right to the workman, provided the latter is not guilty of contributory negligence. The parish councils measure is of the highest importance to the party wire-pullers, and it is highly probable that if this and the employers' liability bill be not carried before the prorogation at Christmas Mr. Gladstone will adopt the expedient once suggested by the Lords Committee to resume these measures next at the point where he left off this session.

Zelma Wins the Prince of Wales' Cup.

The races of the R.C.Y.C. Saturday for the Prince of Wales' Cup, was excellent in every respect. Wind and water were all that could be desired, and the competition was close. The entries were: Vreda, Commodore Boswell; Zelma, Rear-Commander N. B. Dick; Vedette, Frank M. Gray; Erma, S. V. Percival. At 12 the race commenced from the bell buoy, Vreda leading with a good start, closely followed by Vedette and Zelma in the order named. Erma did not start. The course lay to and around a buoy five miles to windward (being due east). The time at the first rounding of the lake buoy was as follows: Vreda, 1 hr. 13 min. 30 sec.; Zelma, 1 hr. 17 min.; Vedette, 1 hr. 49 min. 4 sec.

This buoy being rounded spinnakers were set, and the run back to the buoy commenced. The first round at the bell buoy was completed in the following order: Verda, 2 hrs. 0 mins. 28 secs.; Zelma, 2 hrs. 3 mins. 20 secs.; Vidette. 2 hrs, 39 mins. 25 secs.

At the second round of the lake buoy, the boats stood thus: Verda. 3 hrs. 20 mins. 25 secs.; Zelma, 3 hrs. 25 mins. 50 secs. Virdette then dropped out.

The home stretch was now commenced and the finishing line was crossed with Vreda ahead in 4h. 2m. 20s., and Zelma second in 4h. 7m. 5s. The respective times are as follows:

	Start.	Time.	Elapsed.	Corrected.
Vreda	12	4h.02m.2s.	4h.02m.20s	4h.02m.20
Zelma	12	4h.07m.58.	4h.07m.58	3h.59m.59

Thus Zelma won by 2 min. 21 secs.

Monroe, Miller & Co. of New York send the following despatch over their private wire to their Toronto office, No. 20 King-street east:

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The stock market was uniformly strong. Sugar, Reading, Chicago Gas and C.B. & Q. were the features. All the room traders were arrayed on the long side. Sugar was favorably affected by the announcement that surplus stocks of refined had been disposed of to good advantage. A satisfactory plan to all interests for the re-organization of Reading is under consideration and the manipulation of St. Paul by a room trader attracted attention. The outstanding issue of loan certificates now amounts to $37,440,000 and no heavy cancellations will be made until the extent of the enquiry from the south for currency to move the cotton crop has been more closely estimated. It is believed, however, that six down-town banks stand ready to withdraw 10,000,000 certificates the moment the Wilson Silver bill or an acceptable substitute passes the Senate. Free relization to secure profits in the final dealings carried down prices to the lowest point of the day. Money plenty at 3½, highest 2, lowest 3, last 3.

GOSSIP FROM CHICAGO.

R. Cochran received the following despatch from Kennett, Hopkins & Co.:

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Wheat—Beyond covering by shorts on apprehension of bullish Government report, there has been nothing of interest in market. Receipts continue liberal, also exports, notwithstanding weak and congested foreign market. There are indications of general rains, which will be of immediate and immense benefit in seeding. A considerable increase in the visible is expected.

Corn and oats steady to strong; holders have seemed not anxious to press their advantage, confident that next week they will be reinforced with buying orders from the country, in consequence of a Government report which nearly everybody admits will be bullish. It is possible a considerable reaction may follow heavy realizing on such a report.

Provisions strong on an active demand for cash properties and exportation of smaller lots of hogs.
