The Coronation

OFFICIAL SERVICE.

The Church of England Cathedral was filled Thursday morning last on the occasion of the Coronation Service. All denominations were represented. There were members of the Executive, Legislative Council and House of Assembly, Judges, City Councillors, officers of the warship, deputations from the city brigades, societies and churches. His Excellency the Governor and suite arrived at the church at 9.30 a.m. and the service began shortly afterwards. The music under the direction of Mr. Allen was appropriate and inspiring. The church choir was assisted by members of other denominations. The clergymen who took part and assisted His Lordship Bishop Jones were Rev. Canons Pilot, Temple, Smith and White; Revs. John Hewitt, G. R. Godden, H. Uphill, C. H. Barton, J. Bell, J. Brinton, G. H. Hewitt and F. T. Law.

PROCESSIONAL HYMN.

Lo, the King in state and splendour
Then the priest said:

BRETHREN, I desire you to pray for our Sovereign Lord King GEORGE, and for the people of this realm wherein God has called him to bear rule; remembering especially the King's great need of God's most gracious favour and continual help.

Then all the people kneeling, the Priest said:

Let us pray.
Lord, have mercy upon us.
Christ, have mercy upon us.
Lord, have mercy upon us.
Our Father, &c.

O LORD our God, who upholdest and governest all things by the word of Thy power: Receive our humble prayers for our Sovereign Lord, King GEORGE; and as thou dost this day set a crown of pure gold upon his head, so let Thy wisdom be his guide and let Thine arm strengthen him; let truth and justice, holiness and righteousness, peace and charity, abound in his days; direct all his counsels and endeavours to Thy glory, and the welfare of his subjects; give us grace to obey him cheerfully for conscience sake, and let him always possess the hearts of his people; let his reign be long and prosperous, and crown him with everlasting life in the world to come: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ALMIGHTY God the fountain of all goodness: Give ear, we beseech thee, to our prayers, and multiply thy blessings upon thy servant MARY, consecrated in thy Name this day to be our Queen; defend her evermore from all dangers, ghostly and bodily; make her a great example of virtue and piety, and a blessing to this kingdom; through Jesus Christ our Lord who liveth and reigneth with thee, O Father, in the unity of the Holy Spirit, world without end. Amen.

O GOD, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, our only Saviour, the Prince of Peace: Give us grace seriously to lay to heart the great dangers we are in by our unhappy divisions. Take away all hatred and prejudice, and whatsoever else may hinder us from godly union and concord; that as there is but one Body, and one Spirit, and one hope of our calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all; so we may henceforth be all of one heart, and of one soul, united in one holy bond of truth and peace, of faith and charity, and may with one mind and one mouth glorify thee; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost, be with us all evermore. Amen.

TE DEUM LAUDMUS.

SERMON BY THE BISHOP.

"Give the King Thy judgments, O God, and Thy righteousness unto the King's son."—Psalm LXXII., 1.

To-day the Christian people of every land over which the British flag is floating have the privilege of taking a very real part in the Coronation of our King. All the British people, be they Christian, Mohammedan, Buddhists, may take a part in the outward rejoicing which the pomp and pageantry of the event inspires, but the privilege of having a share in the thing which matters belongs to the Christian alone. It should never be forgotten that the Coronation is a great religious solemnity. Its original name was "The Sacring," or "Hallowing of the King." Its great end and purpose is to consecrate by the highest sanctions of the Christian religions the temporal Sovereignty and Kingship of him who has been called to occupy the highest and most responsible position in our great nation. Every act in the Coronation service is invested with religious meaning.

The Recognition of the Sovereign by the people. The Oblation. The Oath. The Anointing. The Investiture. The putting on of the Crown and presenting the Holy Bible. The Benediction. The Enthronization. The Holy Communion.

The limits of this sermon make it impossible for me to enlarge upon these several features. I will only ask you to read at your leisure the summary of these Acts given in the Preface to the Service Book, which has been placed in your hands, and I will at once pass to a lesson which seems to be suggested by the great event of to-day, and which it will be well for us all to lay to heart.

The Coronation of our King is not only a solemn religious ceremony; it is the response in every English heart to the sense of the Union which binds the people of England to their Monarchy, and the Monarchy to the people. The Psalmist of old drew a picture of what such a Monarchy should be. "Give the King Thy judgments, O God, and Thy righteousness unto the King's Son. He shall judge Thy people with righteousness, and Thy poor with judgment. He shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper. In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth."

Such was the ideal of a just and beneficent Monarchy three thousand years ago. Such, to all who can feel or think, it still is, amidst whatever admixture of personal and national infirmity, and whatever changes have been wrought by differences of times and race and country, in our modern existence.

Look for a moment at the serious philosophic, Christian aspect of such a Monarchy, at that which alone renders possible the feelings which animate us to-day. It is the one name and place among us which unites in almost unbroken succession the whole range of our island story, which is the common property of the whole British people, we might almost say of the whole Anglo-Saxon race. No other existing throne in Europe reaches back to the same antiquity, none other combines with such an undivided charm the associations of the past, the interests of the present. It is the one name and place which, being raised high above all party struggles, all local jealousies, over all cases, ecclesiastical as well as civil is the supreme controlling spring which bids together, in their widest sense, all the forces of the State and all the forces of the Church. It is the one name and place which, being beyond the reach of personal ambition, beyond the need of private gain, has the inestimable chance of guiding, moulding, elevating the tastes, the customs, the morals of the whole community. It is the one institution which, by the very nature of its existence, unites the abstract idea of country and of duty with the personal endearments of family life, of domestic love, of individual character. This is the bright side of that ancient and august possession which has steadied the course of our onward progress, and given us peace in the midst of tumults, and freedom in the midst of disorder. It is because of the greatness of this possession that we so reverently pray and hope that he who enters upon it to-day shall be worthy of his noble inheritance. He knows, and we know, that on him henceforth devolves the glorious task of devoting to his country's service that life which is, in a special sense, no longer his, but ours, for which his country's prayers are being so earnestly offered. Hardly ever, in the long course of our history, has so heart-stirring a prospect been opened, of taking the lead in all that is true and holy, just and good; of finding in the hundred calls of duty a hundred openings for the best and purest enjoyment, of strengthening the relaxed fibre, if so be, of English morals, of raising and purifying the homes of the poor and the tone of every grade of English society, of becoming by the sheer force of a stainless and guileless life, a terror, not to good works, but to the evil.

But if this be what we expect from the throne, let us ask ourselves about the Monarchy, what the Empire, what the world expects from us. It is the glory of England that if the welfare of the Prince is the welfare of the people, not less is the well-being of the people the only safeguard of the well-being of the Prince. It is not with us, as in some Eastern or despotic States, where the Royal House dwells apart, withdraws from all the surrounding influences of the country or the age in which their lot is cast. The breath of public opinion, of good or evil example, in our mixed and varied society, rises upward as much as it descends downward.

It is in our power, in the power of the people of this great Empire, to drag down the throne even in spite of itself, to the level, if so be, of our own meanness, triviality, or self-indulgence, as it is, thank God, also in our power, by the purity of our homes, by the sincerity and loftiness of our purposes, to create the atmosphere in which the Throne must become pure and lofty, because it cannot help receiving the influences which ascend to it from below and from around. We, by raising up a constant succession of just, upright, loyal, single-minded citizens, of enlightened and energetic teachers, of far-seeing and unselfish Statesmen, form a body-guard around the Royal House of England, even as the statues and monuments of famous Englishmen in Westminster Abbey stand like a guard of honour round the shrines which contain the dust of our Princes and Kings. Any breach in that sacred line of honest English hearts, any failure of duty, of vigilence or of faithfulness on our part, lays open the way for the destroyer to come in and lay waste the innermost sanctuary of the State itself. Our prayers, our thanksgivings, if they are to last beyond the passing moment, must take the shape, not of idle flattery or fond endearments, but of stern requirements of duty both from others and from ourselves.

My brethren, it is not in the spirit of vain glorious exultation, nor with the idle desire of comparing ourselves with other nations, not to foster the subtle passion of civic pride, that we hold this service to-day, but to deepen our sense of loyalty to the throne, to quicken our sense of unity as a people, and kindle a deeper glow of devotion to Him who is the giver of all good, and the source of all blessing. And therefore it is that I have endeavoured within the few moments at my disposal to set before you what I conceive should be our Christian duty toward that Kingly Commonwealth of which we are members—of which we are proud—for which we are bound in the sight of God to lay down our lives and to spend our latest breath.

One more historic scene has been added to the many glorious spectacles witnessed in our Ancient Abbey. One more Sovereign, crowned and anointed within its stately precincts, goes forth amid the thunder of the saluting guns, and the enthusiastic acclamation of rejoicing crowds, to wield the sceptre of truth and righteousness, of justice and of equity, in the government of a great and free people. God be with him now and evermore, our Sovereign Lord the King, and with his gracious, Queenly Consort! May their reign ever be remembered as an epoch of the highest national prosperity! May it leave behind it unbroken memories of peace, of happiness, of moral and religious progress, and of the highest influences for good to the Mighty Empire which God has entrusted to their Royal care!

HYMN.

ANTHEM.

The King shall rejoice in Thy strength, O Lord: exceeding glad shall he be of thy salvation. Thou hast presented him with the blessings of goodness, and set a crown of pure gold upon His head.

Glory and great worship hast Thou laid upon him. As for his enemies clothe them with shame, but upon himself shall his crown flourish.

Let Thy mercy, O Lord, continue upon him for evermore. Let his seed endure for ever, and his throne as the days of heaven.

This is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it. Amen.

HALLELUJAH CHORUS.

Hallelujah! for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth. The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ: and He shall reign for ever and ever, King of kings and Lord of lords. Hallelujah!

LAYING FOUNDATION STONE.

The function of laying the foundation stone of the new Ceamen's Home on Water Street was attended by a concourse of citizens Thursday, despite the wet weather which prevailed. A spacious platform had been erected and from it many flags flew, while seats were placed around for those who occupied it. There present the chief government officials, members of the Legislature, representatives of the Bench and Bar, many of the clergy of different denominations, the Mayor and members of the City Council, the captains and officers of the British and French warships and a large body of people. The stone itself was one of Newfoundland granite beautifully polished and bearing the following inscription on its face: —"This stone was laid by Sir Ralph Champneys Williams, K. C. M. G. Governor of Newfoundland, on the Coronation of King George V." Drawn up in front of the building and fully accoutred were a squad of blue jackets and marine from the Brilliant, the C. L. B. and a platoon of the police. On the arrival of His Excellency and Lady Williams, the naval men, brigade and police presented arms, while the C. L. B. band, choir and audience sang the National Anthem and the ceremony began. Mr. J. W. Withers, the chairman, gave a brief introductory addresss. The hymn "O God our help in ages past" was then sung, when His Lordship Bishop Jones who was attended by Rev. G. H. Bolt, M.A., as Chaplain, offered a prayer. His Excellency now stepped forward and was presented with a handsome silver trowel properly inscribed and with which he spread the mortar bedding for the stone. A special cable line had been run from the head Anglo Office in London to Buckingham Palace and thence a through line was made via Valentia, Ireland and Heart's Content to the platform in this city. From 12.15 p.m., local time, all the telegraphic instruments had been closed at London and His Majesty had direct control of the through wire to St. John's. Exactly at 12.31 p.m. the gong which showed that the Sovereign had given the signal, sounded, just above the stone which hung from the derrick, the electrical current passed through a powerful magnet and the "cam" or clutch which held the stone was released and it dropped into position, while tumultuous cheers broke from all present, a feu de foie of 3 volleys was fired by the naval contingent, and again the band rendered the National Anthem while all bared their heads. When quiet was restored His Excellency pronounced the stone to be well and truly laid by His Majesty the King in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. His Excellency then read the following cablegram from His Majesty King George V.

To Governor,
St. John's.

With reference to your telegram of June 10th, His Majesty commands me to transmit following message at the opening of the Seamen's Institute —message begins.

I desire, on the occasion of the laying of the foundation stone of the new Institute for Seamen in Newfoundland, to express my high appreciation of the admirable work which is being done for the welfare of sailors and fishermen in the Colony, under the direction of Dr. Grenfell, from whom, on his last visit to England, I learned the details of the arduous lives of those of my people who are engaged in the Newfoundland Fisheries. I learn with much pleasure that much of the cost of the Institute has been contributed by people of the United States, and I recognize in their action one more proof of the increasing friendliness of the English speaking peoples of the North American Continent. It is my earnest wish that this Institute may prove of the greatest benefit to the people of Newfoundland and I have been glad to consent to the request that it should be styled "King George the Fifth Seamen's Institute" and to extend to it my patronage.

HARCOURT.

Then in a fluent address His Excellency dwelt on the great interest evinced by His Majesty in the welfare of his subjects all over the Empire and particularly in this his Oldest Colonial possession, spoke of the great advantages that must come to the fishermen as a result of the building of the new institution, complimented Dr. Grenfell on his work, referred to the generosity of the people of the United States and Canada and concluded wishing Newfoundland and her people continued success and prosperity. Cheers called for by the Governor for their Majesties the King and Queen were given with a will, after which Dr. Grenfell spoke at some length, and in the course of his address highly complimented Mayor W. J. Ellis for his worth socially, and his ability professionally, as seen in the work of the building to-date, showed that the building would cost $150,000, that $13,000 of this had been subscribed by our mercantile men whose generosity he extolled, and hoped the institution would lead to the betterment and comfort of our toilers of the sea.

Chief Justice Sir William Horwood proposed a vote of thanks to His Excellency the Governor, seconded by Mayor Ellis. Both made eloquent speeches. A short message from the Premier was then read. After this the hymn "All people that on earth do dwell" was sung by the audience when this very pleasing incident of the day terminated.

MESSAGE.

To
Sir Arthur Bigge,
Buckingham Palace,
London.

On behalf of the Committee of the King George the Fifth Seamen's Institute as well as of all the people of Newfoundland I respectfully tender to His Majesty the King our loyal and grateful thanks for His Majesty's action in laying the foundation stone of the Institute to-day as well as for the gracious message which was received with infinite pleasure.

His Majesty as their Sailor King is very dear to the hearts of His Sailor-subjects of Newfoundland and an outburst of intense enthusiasm greeted His Majesty's generous action in laying the stone at the exact moment arranged a work which I had the honour of completing in His Majesty's name.

His Majesty's presence was brought vividly to His people by the singular accuracy of the arrangements.

RALPH WILLIAMS,
Governor of Newfoundland.

When Coffee Shows What It Has Been Doing.

"Of late years coffee has disagreed with me," writes a matron from Rome N. Y.

"It's lightest punishment being to make me 'fogy' and dizzy, and it seemed to thicken up my blood.

"The heaviest was when it upset my stomach completely, destroying my appetite and making me nervous and irritable, and sent me to my bed. After one of these attacks, in which I nearly lost my life, I concluded to quit the coffee and try Postum.

"It went right to the spot! I found it not only a most palatable and refreshing beverage, but a food as well.

"All my ailments, the 'loginess' and dizziness, the unsatisfactory condition of my blood, my nervousness and irritability disappeared in short order and my sorely afflicted stomach began quickly to recover. I began to rebuild and have steadily continued until now. Have a good appetite and am rejoicing in sound health which I owe to the use of Postum."
