NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

"All right, old boss, I'll be there," said an Alabama boy when sentenced to be hanged.

"He handled a gun carelessly and put his angel plumage on," is an obituary which appears in a Western paper.

The story that Alexander Stephens is dying can hardly be true. Mr. Stephens will have some last words to say, and the utterance will prolong his existence a year or two, at least.—Chicago Times.

A bright youth in Richmond, Ky., learning that "gas was to be introduced, and observing the workmen digging out places for the pipe, inquired of one of them "how deep they would go down before they struck gas."

Mrs. Governor Claflin gave a brilliant reception at her residence in Boston, on Wednesday, in honor of John G. Whittier. Political, fashionable and literary circles, says the Gazette, were largely represented.

A New York "fashionable" christening party was postponed last week in consequence of the non-arrival of a steamer from Europe having on board the face powder (made to order) in which the baby was to have appeared. The clergyman engaged was disgusted.

Patrolman John Doyle, who killed Miss Lawler, sent his resignation to the Police Board yesterday.—New York Herald. We admire him for it. If we had killed a woman, and the police were to come around making themselves disagreeable with handcuffs and such things, we would refuse to associate with them.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

An Iowa exchange says: "Old Bill Hull, a quarrelsome, well-known character, who used to get on extensive and dangerous sprees in Afton, was so well aware that he never would get his deserts in this state after the abolition of capital punishment that he went to Kansas, murdered his two sons, and an unsympathetic people will hang him next Friday."

We are not in the habit of supplying the neighbors' children with toys, but since the invention of those amusing parlor earthquakes, composed of homœopathic doses of nitro-glycerine, we have concluded to overcome a sordid nature and give the little cherub next door, whose midnight orisons are the admiration of the neighborhood, a liberal supply. We shall move to the hotel until the child has all the fun it can get out of them.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The University of Michigan, which holds a peculiar position as the most successful of all attempts in the United States to found State Colleges as a feature of the system of public education, appears to be in a prosperous condition. The total number of students is 1,106, of whom 484 are in the department of literature, science and the arts. Forty-six percent of the whole number of students is supplied by the State in which the College is. During the past year, the Legislature, besides some special appropriations, voted to impose a tax of one-twentieth of a mill on the property of the State for the benefit of the University. This will yield at once over $80,000,000, and, after the new valuation in 1876, much more.

GENERAL.

An Aberdeen philosopher has extracted the following reply from an advanced free school lad, to the query, "How is the earth divided?" "By earthquakes, sir!"

A little boy who went to Sunday-school, and for the first time heard of the widow and the two mites, was quite anxious to find out what she did with the rest of the cheese.

Some of the new French flowers are made in tinfoil, colored and tinted in the most perfect style. They are very frail and delicate, and on that account—it is to be presumed—are so expensive. Tinfoil wreaths around the front of your new spring bonnet will be the "tip of the fashion."

It is said that the custom of having orange blossoms for bridal wreaths was derived from the Saracens, among whom the orange branch, from the circumstance of its bearing fruit and flowers at the same time, was considered an emblem of prosperity. Not one bride in ten now-a-days knows anything about tradition, however.

What scenes have passed in editorial dens: what scenes are passing there now! Editors are the centres of attraction. The world lies before them like a map. Its echoes are all around them. All professions speak to them. Every interest and prejudice passes before them in procession. They think rapidly, write forcibly, and speak boldly. They cannot long be the slaves of power in such an atmosphere. And that is why there is such a defiant and searching spirit in American newspapers. They find profit in disregard of party. Office has no charms to men who have better offices in their printing houses. Politicians are tolerable only as they are competent.—J. W. Forney.

The Illustrated Annual of Phrenology and Physiognomy for 1874, contains eighty large octavo pages, with more than fifty engravings, representing Heads, Faces, Mouths, Noses, good and bad, with "Signs of Character;" Also, My School-mates and what became of Them; A Good Memory; the "Leak; or, a Hole in a Pocket through Bad Habits;" and How to Save Money; One Thousand Boys Wanted; Bad Breath, its Cause and Cure; A Fascinating Face; What the Savans are Doing for Mental Science, etc. The best Annual ever issued. Agents wanted. Newsmen have it. Sent pre-paid, by first post, for 25 cents, by S. R. Wells, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

An Old Story.

The erudite Ritson, commenting upon the proverb "As drunk as a beggar," quaintly says: "This begins now to be disused, and "Instead of it people are "ready to say, As drunk as a lord, so "much hath this vice (the more's the "pity!) prevailed among the nobility and gentry of late years." If we pleased to go into the antiquities of the subject, from the time of Noah down, there would be enough to say and to cite. Mohammed put it all into a nut-shell when he called wine "the mother of sins." Archbishop Laud boasts in the history of his chancellorship, that he had "reduced the number of ale-houses in Oxford from 300 to "100." As early as 1671 a Bridewell was proposed for tipplers, every one of them to be assessed 12d. per annum for its support. What is called Prohibition is no new thing, now as we think it. An act for diminishing the sale of spirituous liquors was passed in 1736 by the British Parliament, aimed specially at the gin shops and brandy shops; and so great in London was fear of a riot upon its enforcement, that an extra military force was kept in readiness. "The London Magazine" or October, 1736, mentions that its surgeon-apothecary and chemist have "been fitted £100 each for retailing "spirituous liquors contrary to the act;" and the popular cry at that time was, "No gin, no king!" Strong drink is said to have hastened Addison's death, yet he was constantly warning the readers of The Spectator against inebriety, and No. 569 contains a specially good consideration of the subject. Fielding, the novelist, in his admirable essay on "The Causes of the Late Increase of Robbers," says, in the very spirit and almost in the very words of modern temperance lectures: "Thus we see the "Legislature have taken the utmost care, "not only to punish, but even prevent "this vice of drunkenness, which the "preamble of one of the foregoing statutes calls a loathsome and odious sin, "and the root and foundation of many "other enormous sins, as murder, &c." Coming down almost to the present, we find Cobbett, in his "Advice to Young Men," saying, in a time of specially hard British drinking: "I beg you to regard "as perverters of Scripture and as seducers of youth all who cite the Bible "texts as an apology for the practice of "wine drinking in England."

We might go on with our illustrations ad infinitum, but these must suffice. There is nothing new under the sun. The vice and folly of drunkenness were as well understood in the days of Juvenal as they are now in the days of Mr. Neal Dow. "You will find the drunkard," says the Roman satirist, "beside some "cut-throat, along with sailors, or thieves, "or runaways." "You will find him," says Mr. Dow, "in the prison or the alms-house." The testimony of the Holy Scriptures we have not thought it necessary to cite, familiar as it is to all. Nor is there anything specially new in our methods of combating and mitigating the vice. Prohibition has been tried over and over again; that is regulation, for we have never had any statute anywhere which absolutely prohibited the sale of intoxicating liquors. Dram-sellers were heavily fined both in Old England and New England more than a century ago; inebriates were imprisoned and fined three centuries ago; moralists have been denouncing that form of immorality almost ever since the creation; and women, doubtless, in the days of our grandmothers, pleaded with desperate and heart-broken eloquence, and besought the dram seller to abandon a traffic which was desolating their homes. We have discovered nothing—neither a new disease nor a new remedy. It was as well understood in Dr. Johnson's day as it is now, that for some men total abstinence is the only safety.

There is nothing, however, in the facts which we have stated to discourage the advocates of temperance. On the contrary, it should be encouraging to them that the common sense of the race has always been upon their side and of their mind. It would be better for the world, doubtless, if moral warfare could become no longer necessary; but this constitution of our nature and our endless heritage of infirmity forbid us to hope for. It would be better if the contest with evil could always be consistent and steady instead of spasmodic and intermittent; but this the infinite variety of human interests seems to render at least improbable. Society is like a leaky ship; only hard labor at the pumps keeps us afloat. Much which we are complacently ready to dismiss as fanaticism breaks our peace and will not down at our bidding, simply because the world needs importunate prophets to save it from cold indifference, to keep its eyes open to its own best interests and its feet in the paths of social progress.

St. John, N. B., March 23, 1873.

Messrs. R. C. Margeson & Co.—Gentlemen—I have been afflicted with gravel and stone upwards of a year and a half—tried everything I could hear of for its relief, without avail; saw your advertisement of CALCULIFUGE in the Halifax papers—took three bottles according to directions, and in the short space of four weeks am entirely cured. I willingly add my testimony to its value, and heartily recommend it to all afflicted as I have been.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AMONG the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than the effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, a specimen of its virtues throughout this and other countries has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most prominent portions of the Pulmonary Organs are liable to the powerful and ofttimes fatal Consumption, and to this preservation are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may place the full reliance, securing Consumption, the forerunners of more serious diseases, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tens of thousands bear this testimony, and it is our duty to make it known. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centered on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured. Prepared by
