TECH. WON CLOSE GAME ON HOLIDAY

Defeated Georgetown 2 to 0 After Great Battle — Rugby News and Gossip.

Technical High School Rugby team journeyed to Georgetown on the holiday and won a stubbornly contested game 2 to 0. The Georgetown team had weight and strength on the high school boys, but good speed and team work won for Tech.

Lane was a whole team in himself, and kicked for many gains. At half-time it was 1 to 0, and when the second half started Georgetown presented a formidable line and made things hum. Tech. were able to kick another point before full time.

The all round work of Lane and Locke, and the tackling of Starke and Webb featured the game. "Cupid" Barber of the Caps was the best for Georgetown.

Tech's line-up: Full, McCormick; halves, R. Locke, Lane and Kilcopp; quarter, Keeley; scrimmage, Kellogg, Burton, M. Locke; wings, Kalibash, Leriche, Johnston, Taylor, Starke and Webb.

It was a limbering up practice that the blue and white squad got last night, and several sported sore spots. The game with Queens bruised up several of the bunch, but all will be in harness on Saturday. The real week's work will begin tonight.

The Central Y.M.C.A. Rugby Club will practice on Wednesday evening at 7.30 on Broadview field. The supporters of the team are organizing a rooters' club for Saturday's game with St. Michael's College. A rehearsal will be held at the gym on Friday night at 9 o'clock, when all interested in the team, whether members of the club or not, are invited to attend.

The Beach Canoe Club intermediate city team are requested to turn out to practice this evening at 7 o'clock. They play Riverdales on Saturday.

Parkdale Junior O.R.F.U. team defaulted their game on Monday to Beach Canoe Club. Beach got word late on Sunday afternoon and had to hustle to get an exhibition game with some other club. They succeeded in getting Kew Beach senior city team, who are tie with Capitals for the senior city championship, and a good game resulted. There was little to chose between the teams. The play was very even, as the score indicates. Kew won by the score of 4 to 2.

Ottawa College are negotiating with the Parkdale Ontario Union team for an exhibition game in Toronto this Saturday, save an Ottawa despatch.

As the only game scheduled in Toronto for that date is the exhibition game between Varsity and R.M.C., the local ex-Intercollegiate team think that it would prove a good drawing card.

An Ottawa despatch says: With a championship in sight, Ottawa has gone Rugby crazy. The chances of Dr. Galvin's men in their game with the Argos is the most discussed question in the capital, and it is a safe bet that, with fine weather, the biggest crowd to ever view a Rugby match in this city will see the teams lock horns. Locally it is expected that the Rough Riders will down the Oarsmen, and odds of 2 to 1 are already being offered. Galvin places his reliance on the Rough Riders' wing line, claiming that the local line is good enough to hold any line in Capada, and that they will be able to give their halves perfect protection, while their speedy following-up will disorganize the Argo back division.

Of Lawson the Rough Riders are still a little nervous, and he will be closely watched. Kilt. and Davie McCann being told off to attend to the big plunging half-back. The Rough Riders will have every man of the squad out and in perfect condition for the game. McCann was out again last night, while Gerrard will be in uniform again by Thursday night. Jack Williams is rounding into his old form after the two games with Montreal, in which he did not display anything sensational. Dr. Galvin looks to see his back division have the better of the argument in the punting.

CIGARS AT $5 APIECE

A salesman for a Havana, Cuba, cigar concern is authority for the statement that the demand for cigars at $5 apiece is so great that it cannot be met.

"We could dispose of ten times as many $5 cigars if we were able to turn them out," he declared. "The difficulty is in the wrapper, which must be very large. You are likely to sort 100 bundles of tobacco and find only 100 wrappers suitable for this kind of a cigar."

From a sample case containing 462 different sizes and prices of cigars the salesman took one of the $5 brand known in the trade as "promenetes," just as the 25 cent straights are called perfectos. It looks more like a yellow colored Roman candle than a cigar. In size it is between 15 and 16 inches long and 1000 will contain 120 pounds of tobacco, as compared with 14 pounds to 1000 perfectos.

"These are bought mostly by people who enjoy the novelty of smoking such a cigar," said the salesman. "Banquets and smokers attended by wealthy men are the best buyers of the $5 kind. The one place in the world which takes more than any other is Heidelberg, Germany.

"The students at the university there never seem to get enough of them. I have been told that besides buying them for smoking them in the ordinary way they sometimes will put one of these into a water pipe of the oriental type; then five or six students will get around the pipe and smoke it."

Size does not always indicate value, according to this authority. One insignificant little cigar which most people would take for a "stogie" really sells at $1.50, while a larger and prettier one sells for a beggarly 50 cents.

"These stories about the big financiers of the east and of Europe smoking cigars a foot long are all bosh," declared the salesman. "While they pay as much as $3 and $4 apiece for their cigars these are, generally speaking, of the ordinary size and shape. The cost is in the extra quality of the wrapper and filler, not in the size of the cigars. Such cigars generally are made to order."

British Boxer Wins Frenchman Loses Bouts in New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—England's best bantamweight boxer and France's leader of the lightweight division tried conclusions with American representatives last night at Madison Square Garden, and at the conclusion the British colors waved triumphant, while the French drooped sadly. Eddie Morgan, 118 pound title holder in Great Britain, won from Eddie O'Keefe of Philadelphia, who recently fought two very close matches with Johnny Kilbane, the American featherweight champion, and the little Briton did a whole lot better than Kilbane.

Louis De Ponthieu, the French pupil of Frank Erne, once America's best lightweight, was very fast and full of fight, but Joe Shugrue of Jersey City had quite a bit the edge in the speed and ability to hit hard, and at the finish of the ten rounds there were few dissenters in the opinion that the American lad was the victor.

Each of the bouts, which went ten rounds, was a fine exhibition of clean and skilful boxing, and there was no sign of a knockdown, altho many stiff punches were landed, and but few visible signs of damage were seen.

No Smoking at Boxing Bouts in Arena Gardens

There will be no smoking at the city amateur boxing tournament that opens on Saturday night of next week in the Arena. Smoking was not allowed at the bike grind, and as it is Manager Soiman's intention to cut it out during the hockey season there will be nothing left to do but chew gum and eat peanuts at the boxing bouts. This will be no innovation, as two Canadian championship tournaments were held in Massey Hall, where no one ever hits the pipe. Entries continue to come in at Billy Moodey's, 33 West King street, where blanks may be had and where the list closes next Tuesday.

Hugh Stevenson will have half a dozen good ones for the city amateur boxing tournament, including Nick Freeman, the 125-pound champion, who took Lindalla's measure in the terrific bout which decided the Canadian championship this spring, and Dave Freeman, his brother, a good 125-pounder.

Norman Lang will be an absentee in the 125-lb. class, but his Woodbine Beach Club will be represented by four or five, including probably a heavyweight.

Catching Trains in Europe Made Easy

The chief lesson we can learn from Europe in the operation of our terminals, writes W. S. Richardson, in Scribner's, lies in the constant effort to separate traffic along its logical lines, even at an increased expense of operation against the tendency of this country to mass its people altogether, for instance, those who are checking their baggage at one moment, quite irrespective of their destination, while at another moment the same set of people bound for different sections are again brought together for the purchase of tickets, etc. Contrast this with the ease with which a passenger can leave Charing Cross, London, for the continent on a crowded Saturday afternoon.

Arrising perhaps less than ten minutes before the time for the departure of the continental express, with a cab full of luggage, the system of porterage permits of that which is intended for the luggage van to be placed on one truck and that for the railway carriage on another.

The truck for registered luggage will be wheeled over a weighing platform almost directly in front of the ticket office, weight ascertained, charges paid, and tickets bought, while the small baggage for the carriage proceeds on its way to the platform.

There is no duplication of movement, no time lost, and the great crowd moves on without friction, unhindered, like a steady stream.

The amount which is thus accomplished in a limited time, apparently without effort, and without consciousness except to the acute observer, is really marvelous.

Consider our Grand Central Station, for instance, on a hot afternoon in August—the hurry, the confusion, the tensely drawn faces, the imprecation, the failure of luggage to reach its train, and, even in the case of those who are foresighted and plan hours or days in advance, the absolute impersonal nature of the transaction by which luggage and passengers are so widely separated, that it is only by a miracle of management that they usually come together at the appointed time and place.

GENESIS OF THE CHIMNEY

In the excavations at Pompeii and Herculaneum no discovery appears to have been made of anything approaching the nature of the modern chimney. The earliest mention of the chimney seems to be in an ancient Venetian inscription over a doorway, where it is written that in 1347 certain chimneys in that location were demolished by earthquakes. It is by conjecture only that we are able to say that the chimney was known in ancient Italy. Seneca, who lived during the first century of our era, invented a species of tube which he affixed to the length of the wall, and it seems to have run thru floors. Thru this the heat passed from subterranean ovens called "syndcausts," of which remains were found in buried cellars of houses built on the Bay of Naples. But in this there is no evidence of any chimney in the modern sense or even of any kind of stove. Before the invention of the chimney fires were made in excavations or pits opened beneath the floor of inhabitants in about the centre of the room, as the Eskimos do today.

Oakwood Wins From Riverdale

Riverdale High School was defeated on their grounds by Oakwood yesterday afternoon to the tune of 10 to 3. In the first half things were pretty even, but on a ground rule Riverdale lost a touch, and on a returned punt the referee allowed an onside kick, which was away off. Oakwood went over for a touch from this play. Russell is a good punter and kicked to the dead line many times.

The line-up:

Oakwood (10): Flying wing, McGee; halves, Webb, Russel, Dowling; quarter, McKenzie; wings, Stalker, Baker, Evans, Addey, Asheford, Craig; scrimmage, Ferguson, Elder, Butler.

Riverdale (3): Flying wing, Willis; halves, Preston, Walker, Sneath; quarter, Scott; wings, Chinn, Anderson, Herod, Barnes, Brown, James; scrimmage, Robinson, Clark, Snow.

SURPRISES IN CITY LEAGUE

Royals and Athenaeums Drop Three Games Each—All the Bowling Scores.

It was a fine old scramble for the big end of nearly every game in the City Bowling League last night, and several surprises were uncorked. Paynes gave the Athenaeums a trouncing in all three sets, and College got away with three from the Royals. Brunswicks handed the Dominions a whitewash, while the Rowing Club took the odd game from Eatons. The scores:

NATIONAL GOLF

By Steven Armstrong in Christian Science Monitor.

Everyone who has studied singing knows that the notes which are at the junction of the various voice registers are the weakest in the whole range; and it takes years of practice to learn how to slide from the chest tones to the middle register and to let the upper note of the latter melt into a clear head tone. When you come to play a three-quarter or a full shot with a cleek you are at the junction of the "registers" in the orbit and motion of a club head, the borderland (to change the figure) between a hit and a swing. Consequently you must watch that you slip easily from the chest tones (to return to the original simile) of iron play into the middle register of a brassie and thence to the head notes of a driver. This may seem a bit far fetched, but many really good players use their brassies exactly as they do their drivers and wonder why they go off their driving sometimes till some one points out that they are hitting not swinging.

We will go into detail about this later, in the meantime we are still emitting chest tones, with a cleek, as it were. This is the last hit in the scale and also your first really full shot hence the danger to be guarded against. Stand with the right foot only a little advanced and with your feet wider apart than in the shots we have dealt with up to now. Weight evenly distributed and as the club is longer, you should be a trifle further away from the ball. As you go up remember the advice I quoted once before of counting 1, 2, 3, evenly and devoting the 1 and 2 to the up swing, and the 3 to the down stroke and follow thru. It is never necessary with a cleek to go so far back on the up swing to force the left elbow to bend. Further back is only courting danger and gives no greater distance to your shot. At the top of your swing your left heel must be off the ground slightly and the foot turned onto the inside edge of the sole. All your weight must be on the firmly braced right leg. Your left eye, left shoulder and ball should be in a straight line. Now! let the ball "have it" firmly and follow right thru, round your neck if need be, but if you have not swung back too far you won't want to go thru round your neck, but do not make the mistake of trying to check your follow thru or you will jerk.

There is only one excuse for a jerk in the whole golfing repertoire of shots, and that will be dealt with alone, so you are safe in the meantime to make it a rule never to jerk if you possibly can avoid it. At the finish of a properly played cleek shot your weight will be all on the left foot and the toe of your right foot is used purposely, because there should be no weight on it at all. If you are as firm on the left as you should be you can lift the right foot off the ground, after you have finished the shot, without disturbing your balance in the slightest degree. As Braid is acknowledged a master of cleek play we will let him instruct us how to accomplish a three-quarter shot with this club: "Besides the full shot with the cleek there is the three-quarter, and while this may be carried out in the same way there is an adaptation of it which I have found very useful when playing against the wind. In this case I play with a more open stand, placing the right foot considerably nearer to the ball than the left. The weight is rather more on the left foot than the right, and the hands are held slightly forward, in front of the head of the club. In the upward swing the wrists and forearms are kept rather stiffer than in the playing of the other shots. The former do not turn so much, and the left elbow is kept rather straighter, so that when the club is at the top of the swing it is found that the hands are farther away from the body than when a full shot was being made with either the driver or the cleek. Less bent is also the right knee, and there is not nearly so much pivoting on the left toe as in other cases.

"On the other hand, the right knee stiffens itself more, and the body is held more rigidly. The whole attitude is stiffer than usual, and it continues to be so until the end of the stroke. The wrists and forearms bring down the club, and, as in the address, the hands are slightly in front of the blade at the time of impact, both wrists and forearm being as stiff as they can be made at this moment. After impact the right hand turns over somewhat, and an effort is made to carry the club thru as close to the turf as possible, following exactly the line of the flight of the ball. This is my variation of a shot which in one form or another is played by most of the leading professionals, and one which they find extremely useful in many emergencies. It is a shot that is generally only played in fairly advanced golf, and I would recommend all beginners to leave these refinements of the game severely alone until they have mastered the more elementary shots. At the same time this is one which will be extremely useful to them when they have got fairly going, and then they may take an early opportunity of practicing it."

Braid having sounded one warning, I will close with another. He speaks of the hands being slightly in front of the blade at the time of the impact as in the address. Be very careful that from practicing this "special" shot you do not let an insidious fault creep into your other shots and fall into that fatal habit of getting the hands thru before the club head. This is a most important point to guard against.

Will Ride in Ocean-to-Ocean Relay

MISS INEZ PATTERSON.

Miss Inez Patterson, heroine of the "Short Grass," Kansas Motorcycle tour of four western states has enlisted in the ocean-to-ocean relay of the Federation of American Motorcyclists.

She is an enthusiastic, cheerful high school girl who loves the rollicking out of doors and the motorcycle, she says, is the best means of enjoying it.

Altho but sixteen years old she's won her way into the hearts of Kansas motorcyclists. For several years she's been "master" of a motorcycle. She learned before most girls—or even boys for that matter—ever think about riding two-wheelers.

But in her case there was a good reason. Her father—Dr. B. J. Patterson of Pratt, Kansas, was one of the first motorcycle "boosters" in that state. Now he's president of the Federation of American Motorcyclists! He knew the pleasures of motorcycling and his daughter soon discovered them, too.

In the recent Short Grass tour of Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming and Colorado, Miss Patterson was the most enthusiastic and happiest rider. She ventured where others feared to go and not once did she lose. When the thousand mile tour was finished the other riders voted that she was the greatest girl rider in the world and the heroine of that eventful excursion.

But now she is after additional laurels. She wants to carry the message over part of Kansas during the coast-to-coast relay. This run is scheduled for early in October. The secretary of war has already been invited by President Patterson to send a message from New York to Los Angeles by the motorcycle relay.

And no matter who carries it in other states Miss Inez Patterson is almost sure to have the honor of bearing it over part of Kansas. She's ready for her part in the thrilling dash across the continent.
