New Weekly Paper,
Published every Wednesday, by Charles Alexander, Philadelphia,—commenced 4th Jan. 1837.

$500 in premiums for Original Tales, founded on facts connected with the early history of our country.

Twenty-five Biographettes of distinguished public characters, accompanied by well executed and faithful Portraits.

Ten copies of this journal forwarded by mail to any direction ordered, during one year, by remitting a ten dollar note.

Who will deny, therefore, that the American Weekly Messenger (the title selected for the new Paper) is not the cheapest vehicle of intelligence that has ever been offered to the Public?

Reader—There is in this city, at present, no less than four family papers, published every Saturday, all of a mammoth size, and each conducted with ability and tact. Persuaded that these periodicals are sufficient to supply the actual wants of the public, we should have abandoned the fondly cherished desire of entering the list again, with the odds so much against us, if we were not fully impressed with the belief that we shall succeed in rendering our Journal, (making its appearance as it does on an intermediate day of the week) a necessary link in keeping up the chain of important events which are constantly and hourly transpiring to swell the columns of our news-journals. That we may be properly understood, we herewith present you with a brief analysis of the character and design of our publication:

The Weekly Messenger—Is printed on fine white paper of the largest class, with a clear and legible type, and published every Wednesday, at two dollars per annum to single subscribers. ☞A five dollar note will pay for four subscriptions for twelve months, forwarded in advance—and an agent (acting for himself or others) by sending a ten dollar note will be furnished with ten copies of this journal for one year.

Original Tales—One of the popular features of this new enterprise will be the encouragement of American literature—that our Journal, therefore, shall be supplied with interesting Tales, we shall appropriate (every year) five hundred dollars, to be divided into Premiums, for the best Tales, descriptive of events connected with the early History of our Country. In a future number we shall announce the manner and time when the premiums shall be destributed.

Biographettes—Every other week we publish a sketch of the Life of some distinguished public character—each accompanied by a correctly engraved portrait A gentleman of well-known abilities has been engaged to supply this department of our Journal.

European News—The latest intelligence from abroad will be procured from the London and Paris papers, which we receive by the regular packets—a minute and comprehensive knowledge of the leading subjects of interest which transpires in England and France, is forwarded to us by especial correspondents.

Domestic News—An Epitome of the most prominent events which are constantly multiplying in our own country, is carefully made up—and as a chronicle for future reference will be found of invaluable advantage.

Original Poetry—We are promised contributions from several gentlemen whose taste lead them to cultivate an acquaintance with the muses—abundant means, which we shall profit by, are always accessible for obtaining the choicest selections.

Theatrical Notices—Some part of our columns is appropriated to matters concerning the drama—the liberality of the American public towards the stage has wisely established it as a national amusement—its concerns and interests therefore legitimately belong to a well conducted newspaper.

Sporting Affairs—The Turf particularly we feel ourselves called on to attend to—all other topics that may be considered of interest to sportsmen generally, will meet with our especial care.

Bank Note and Stock Register—Authentic information we shall study to obtain, to enable our readers to form a correct estimate of the value of stocks and the rates of discount—we are well aware of the exciting interest which prevails at all times regarding the fluctuations in this extensive branch of business.

The Salmagundi—As the Weekly Messenger is offered as a substitute for the Journal published under this title—an amusing medley of Light reading will be judiciously selected every week, that we may continue to gratify the tastes of our numerous readers, whose good sense and liberal dispositions lead them to relish whatever pertains to sterling wit and genuine humour. No expense will be spared in supplying appropriate embellishments for the subjects which shall be chosen.

The Songster's Manual—Under this title, we devote a part of a column every number to the most pleasing ballads of the day—many of them will be set to music. This will certainly be considered a gratifying addition to the uncommon attractions which we have managed to adopt for the prosperity and success of our new Journal.

The publisher is well known to the reading public—a connection with them for upwards of twenty years has largely increased his facilities of usefulness, and he is satisfied with the means he now possesses, and the already very extensive patronage of the Salmagundi, and News of the Day—which paper will give place to the Weekly Messenger, that this new enterprize, offering such powerful inducements for patronage, will meet with the most unequivocal manifestation of public support and approbation.

The terms have been already stated—it may be well to repeat that ten copies of the Weekly Messenger will be sent to any pat of the United States for one year, by forwarding a ten dollar note, free of postage. The paper is published punctually every Wednesday morning.

☞All letters, postage paid, addressed to CHAS ALEXANDER, Esq. Athenian Buildings, Franklin Place, Philadelphia, will meet with the earliest attention. A Post-master's certificate of the mailing of any specified sum will be a sufficient guarantee of the receipt of such remittance.

Philadelphia, January 11, 1837.
