THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE EAST.

The Times' correspondent at Alexandria, writing on the 17th April, says:—

"By the French steamer from Syria we have received some further intelligence of the journey of the Prince of Wales in the Holy Land. His Royal Highness arrived at Jerusalem on the 31st ult., shortly after midday. On receiving tidings of the Prince's approach, the Pasha of Jerusalem went forth to meet him on the Jaffa road, and in his company the little English party performed the last stage of its journey, preceded and followed by a numerous and picturesque escort of Turkish horsemen. As they approached the walls of the sacred city, the scene was both novel and animating in the extreme. The irregulars in front careered wildly to and fro, according to the fashion in which the Bashibazouks delight when welcoming and paying honor to a guest of unusual rank, brandishing their lances, and engaging in mock combat with each other. The arrival of the Prince was announced by a salute of 21 guns from Mount Gihor, presently taken up and repeated from the Tower of Hippicus, which, as Josephus informs us, was spared by Titus "in order to demonstrate to posterity what kind of a city it was and how well fortified, which Roman valor had subdued." The Pasha offered the Prince of Wales the hospitality of his house, but His Royal Highness decided in favor of tent life, and the party accordingly encamped on the Northern side of the city, near the Damascus gate.

The two following days were devoted to the business of exploring the numerous points of interest in and about the city. The site of the Temple was the first to claim the attention of the Prince and his party. They spent several hours within the inclosure of the Harem, visiting and examing every part in its minutest details. On the following day admission was obtained into the chamber adjoining the tomb of David, into which, with the exception of the Duke of Brabant, no Christian had for centuries been permitted to enter. In the afternoon the Prince left for Bethelem and the Dead Sea and returned to Jerusalem on the afternoon of Saturday, the 5th inst. On the following day His Royal Highness attended Divine service at the English Church.

Last, though not least, came the excursion to Hebron, which will undoubtedly be long regarded as the memorable event of the Prince's pilgrimage. From Hebron the Prince again returned to Jerusalem, and on the 10th, His Royal Highness and suite finally left to proceed on their journey to the North. The Osborne left Alexandria on the 15th instant, and, as I have mentioned before, the Prince and his party will rejoin the yacht at Beyrout, after visiting Damascus.

ENORMITIES OF THE FEDERAL SOLDIERS IN VIRGINIA.

A gentleman of the highest respectability, just from Williamsburg, gives the Petersburg Express information of a series of the most diabolical outrages recently perpetuated on the lower peninsula by the infamous vandals now in possession of that portion of Virginia:

The first on the list is Capt. S. Holley, who resided in the lower end of Warwick county, a gentleman about fifty-five years of age, of the highest respectability, and universally esteemed by his neighbors. His residence was invaded by a lot of Yankee officers and men, who introduced themselves by a brutal proposition to Capt. H's two daughter's, both young and beautiful ladies. While endeavoring to accomplish their designs by force, the indignant father shot one of the demons dead, and had taken aim at another, when he was instantly killed.

Mr. John Patrick, who resided near Warwick Court House, was killed last week by a party of the invaders, while endeavoring to save an only and a beloved daughter from a fate worse than death. Deceased was a pious and consistent member of the Baptist Church, and, we understand, had for a long time filled the post of deacon. He was nearly sixty years of age.

Mr. Edward Harwood, who also resided in the vicinity of Warwick Court House, was brutally murdered a few days since while defending his daughter's honor. We were unable to ascertain the particulars of this case.

The fourth and last victim to the lust of these worse than demons who now infest that section of Virginia, was Mr. Thomas R. Dunn, of York county, who resided near Harwood's Mill. He died in defence of his much beloved daughter, who was being outraged by a Yankee officer. He killed the monster, but was in turn quickly killed himself. Mr. Dunn is represented to us as having been a gentleman of universal and deserved popularity. His age was 45.

These are the scoundrels who profess to have come South for the purpose of restoring the Union and defending the old flag. The accursed calendar of their crimes exceeds in enormity any we have ever been called upon to record.

AMERICAN BULLYING.

To the article in the N. Y. Journal of Commerce, the Montreal Advertiser thus replies:

We are afraid that England will not heed this advice; we fear that with an extraordinary levity she does not care a brass farthing for the hatred of the United States; and we are satisfied that if the republic tries the little game of bully an inch too far, England will give it such a thrashing as will cure it of any desire for war for the next century.

The South is not conquered yet, and there are no signs of that event being speedily accomplished. No decisive victory has yet been obtained over its armies; its military strength is unimpaired; its naval power is alone broken. If it were conquered, it would be only subdued by force, and must be kept down by force; all the army the North can raise would be required to maintain even the shadow of authority over the re-conquered districts. There is a gulf of blood, and tears, and suffering between the people of the two sections of the country, which makes them eternal foes; the North in its blind, ignorant presumption may imagine that once subdued the Southern people will learn to love those who have slaughtered their sons, their fathers, brothers and husbands, violated their women, burned and pillaged their homes, and reduced them to the vilest of degredations—subjection to Yankees. It reasons from what it calls human nature, taking northern nature as the example; it imagines that because it would do all this, and more, if there was money to be made by it, therefore the South finding subjection more profitable than rebellion will learn to love it, and those be whom it was accomplished. The Dutch trampled under foot the symbol of their redemption to obtain the profitable trafic of Japan; the South is only asked to tread in the dust its hopes, and its affections, its honor and aspirations, its memory and self-respect: and in reward it shall have liberty to pay taxes to support a hord of Yankee plunderers, and liberty to live under a banner inscribed with the names of battle-fields watered with the blood of its people.

In one of the N. Y. Churches, last Sunday, the clergyman concluded his sermon as follows:—"But I hear the rustling of silks in the pews, as if some of the ladies are impatient to leave; I will therefore say, God bless you!"

IRISH NEWS.

A dreadful murder was committed in the County of Tipperary on the 28th of April Gustave Thiebault, a French gentleman who had purchased an estate near Cahri, was shot dead near his own residence. About fifteen years ago the former owner of the property was assassinated at the same place, under similar circumstances. M. Thiebault is supposed to have incurred the hostility of certain persons whom he had evicted. Three men were apprehended on suspicion.

The death, in his 71st year, of Sir Thomas Wyse, a distinguished citizen of Waterford, an English Minister at Athens, is announced. He was an active co-laborer with Mr. O'Connell in the work of emancipation, and was a life-long friend of education, and for several years occupied a seat in Parliament. When a young man he married a daughter of Lucien Bonaparte, niece of the first Napoleon and cousin of the present Emperor, but the marriage was not happy, and he separated from his wife some years ago.

On Sunday, April 27th. a man named Corrigan and his wife, residing near Drumlich, county of Longford, were shot dead by some assassins, who have not yet been arrested. The cause of this double murder is stated to have been owing to some disputes about land.

The great agricultural exhibition in Dublin was a decided success, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather. The show of stock was remarkably fine, and the premiums were awarded by the Lord Lieutenant.

The Right Reverned Dr. Gregg, Bishop of Cork, lately delivered an able and eloquent address to the working classes at Cork. He took high ground in favor of the dignity of labor, and the worth and grandeur of the human soul.

Several of the English style of cabs have lately been introduced into Cork by a Liverpool cab owner.

The Rev. H. Maunsell, in a recent lecture delivered in Drumbose, County Down, on the "Round Towers of Ireland," discredited their Drudical origin; though they were built as belfries and depositaries of Christian archives, and were erected by the ancient, learned, and scientific architects called "Freemasons," who are known to have superintended the construction of the grand old cathedrals, and other magnificent buildings of former times.

On Good Friday, April 18th, a dispute arose at Castledawson, County Londonderry, between two cousins, named Charles and John McErlane, respecting the trespass of some cattle, when Charles, in a fit of passion, shot his cousin John dead with a shot gun. On this, the brother and two sisters of the murdered man fell upon the murderer with stones, pitchforks, and whatever else was at hand, and beet his brains out in a little while.

THAT SEPARATE SCHOOL BILL.

At a meeting of Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 898, the following resolution was moved by the Rev. F. M. Finn, seconded by Thomas Stevenson, and carried unanimously:—

"That whereas, we have seen in the Canadian "Freeman" of May 1st, the 'Separate School Bill,' introduced by Mr. Scott, of Ottawa, and it is with deep feelings of regret and pain we have learned that while, as Protestants, we have been sleeping in security, the enemy has stolen a march upon us: Therefore, resolved, that this L. O. L., No. 898, do hereby pledge itself to use every means in its power to oppose any man who will vote for said Bill, should it even be our Grand Master; and that we call upon all our brethern, as well as every honest thinking Potestant, to speak out and show their disapproval of such an iniquitous 'School Bill,' and not allow this, nor the like, to become 'tall law.'"

JAMES ARTIMAGE, Master.
ALEX. ANDERSON, Secretary.
Kinloss, Lodge Room, May 8, 1862.

The three bills relative to the rate of interest, which were introduced early in this Session were referred to a select committee to amend the same and report. The committee has now reported a bill, the main principles of which are as follows:—Contracts made before this Act come into force are unaffected by this Act. Bank's Insurance Companies, and other Corporations, are restricted to charge no more than seven per cent; and when there is no agreement between the parties, six per cent shall be the legal rate of interest. The rate of interest is limited to 7 per cent under all contracts and stipulations. The penalty attached to receiving interest in excess of the legal rate is the forfeiture of all interest whatsoever due or to become due, paid or payable, the borrower having power to recover the excessive interest which may have been paid out of the principal sum remaining unpaid. The Act (if passed) is to come into force on the 1st of August, 1862.

HOW TO MAKE STRAW HIVES.

In the Country Gentleman of Jan. 16, p. 50, we published an article from a correspondent of the Dollar News-paper on the advantage of straw hives. The writer in conclusion, promised to furnish a few plain directions for making straw hives, which he had seen in use the past year. These directions are as follows:

I do not claim that my plan for a straw hive adapted to improved bee-keeping, is the best that can be advised. I do not say that it is the best that has been given to the public, but since it is cheap, simple, and free from the suspicious prefix of patent. Would it not be claimed under the Langstroth patent on account of the movable frames? it is the more confidentially submitted for what it is worth.

Take strips of pine or other soft wood, an inch thick by two inches wide, and make two rectanglar frames, halving the corners together and keeping the wider surfaces in the same plane. These frames must be of the same size, and of dimensions according to the size of the hive required. Lay one of them on the bench before you and nail to it upright strips of lath of length corresponding to the height of the hive, the lower ends being even with the lower surface of the frame as it lies. These uprights must be on both inside and outside, and about four inches apart. Now take long clean straw, previously wet, and lay it between the upright pieces of lath, bending it around the corners in such a way as to make the walls of the hive. Having pressed the space full, lay the second frame upon the straw directly over the first, nail the upper ends of the lath to it, and the hive with the exception of the top is done. Such a hive should have two tops, movable, of course, as in all movable-comb hives; one of wood an inch thick, to be used during the gathering of surplus honey, and the other of straw for spring, fall and winter. This straw top may be made on the same principle as the hive. Make a frame of proper size, and two inches deep; nail pieces of lath on the under side, sinking them in so as to leave a level surface; fill in above them with straw and bind it down with lath nailed above crosswise, from side to side. It will be unnecessary to leave any passages for ventilation, and as the thin wood top is to be used in the honey season, no holes are necessary in the straw top to communicate between the boxes and the hive. Such hives, with no ventilation but that afforded by the porous absorptive mass of straw on the sides and top, were found free from frost on the combs and in fine condition where the thermometer stood at 10 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

It will be seen at once that this hive is adapted to the movable combs, the fixtures of glass boxes and wooden covers, and all the appliances of improved bee-keeping, quite as well as those made of wood.

It may be objected that the bees will very soon coat the inner surface of such a hive with an impervious coating of propolis, thus preventing the absorption of moisture. Granting both this to be true and that it could not easily be remedied, the advantage of an even temperature would remain. But if the inside of the hive should chance to be coated as thoroughly as supposed, the frames being movable could easily be taken out and the propolis taken off the straw by scraping scratching or scalding with hot water. And even if this could not be done, since winter is the time when the hive should be most nearly closed to retain the animal heat, the straw top would then be used, which would probably, of itself, afford sufficient ventilation.

For the Country Gentleman and Cultivator.

THE HONEY BEE.

Inexperienced bee keepers, will be interested to know that many swarms are destroyed, and many others greatly injured, by neglecting timely to remove from the bottom board of the hive, the cappings of their winter stores and young brood, and the bees which die in winter—which, together with the moisture from the condensed vapor in the hive, as it settles into this mass, forms a compound too well adapted to mold the comb with which it comes in contact or close the door and suffocate the bees. It is true the combs become mouldy in many hives which have not been thus neglected, but this is a very common cause, and easily prevented. Combs which are but slightly mouldy are not materially injured.

It is a mystery to many bee-keepers even why many swarms continue year after year, without producing either surplus honey, or a sufficient number of bees to swarm. Some however, attribute such unproductiveness to a superabundance of drone comb, or of bee bread (pollen) in the brood combs. But i am satisfied that it should as often be attributed to mouldy combs destroying to great er or less extent brood combs. And as bees, in common with other insects, are short lived, one limited generation of bees might follow another for an indefinite period, without profit or better prospect.

The best course to pursue with such swarms, that I know of, is to transfer them with such portions of comb as is suitable, and that worker brood comb only, to a new hive in early spring, or drive them in swarming time.

The first bee food in spring of much importance here, is obtained from the flowers of the soft maple. Often, as early in spring as the weather is sufficiently warm that bees can fly to the woods, this food is supplied in abundance. But as this food [pollen] is principally for the young brood [though not less important,] such swarms as are short of honey will still need to be fed. I. I. East Shelby N. Y.

CHURCH TOWER AND THE STARS.

During the melancholy time of the Revolution in France, foolish men tried to forget God; and for some time the churches were closed, and in many cases destroyed.

"I am going to order your old church tower to be destroyed," said an unbelieving revolutionist one day to a pious peasant. "I wish to have nothing left to remind you of your old superstitions."

The peasant replied by pointing to the heavens.

"You will be obliged," said he, "to leave us the stars, which are far older, and are seen from a far greater distance, than our old church tower. If the church is destroyed, the sun, and moon, and stars will never cease to speak to us of God."

"The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Day unto day utereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their light gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world." Psalm xix. 1—4.

Christopher Boulton has been convicted of wife murder at the Lincoln Assizes, and is under sentence to be executed on the 12th of June next. The horrible crime was committed in Park Lane, St. Catherines on Sunday afternoon the 5th January last.
