CHILDREN

Are always liable to sudden and severe colds, to croup, sore throat, lung fever, etc. Remedies, to be effective, must be administered without delay. Nothing is better adapted for such emergencies than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It soothes the inflamed membrane, promotes expectoration, relieves coughing, and induces sleep. The prompt use of this medicine has saved innumerable lives, both of young and old.

"One of my children had croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it

Strangling.

It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicine it had taken, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having a part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and in a short time it was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved its life."—C. J. Wooldridge, Wortham, Texas.

GIVE YOUR FULL ADDRESS.

It is stated that of all people in the world who export the products of their manufactories or of their soil, Canadians are the most negligent in the matter of trade marks by which their goods may be recognized, in some cases even going so far as to neglect to stamp or label their merchandise with an address which might not be interpreted abroad as signifying that the place of production was as likely to be in Japan or the Sandwich Islands as in Canada. This is a great mistake. Among us thousands of retail purchasers are familiar with the trade marks and addresses of the manufacturers of their favorite wines, condiments, sauces, pickles, jellies, preserves, soaps, perfumes, and fabrics of many kinds, in England, France, Germany and elsewhere, and will buy no articles that compete with them because they are satisfied with their quality and know that they are never allowed to deteriorate. For home consumption it is sufficient for a manufacturer to stamp his goods with his ordinary address, but in Jamacia or in England canned corn from Fredericton, N. B., lobsters and blueberries from Chatham, Miramichi, or cheese from Antigonish, N. S., so far as the consumer is concerned might in most cases as well be labled in Sanskrit. It is essential that all our producers of goods for export, tweeds, cottons, iron ware, nails, carriages, harness, canned goods, butter, cheese, furniture, etc., etc., should be careful to let purchasers know, and not only that, but keep constantly before them, where their orders can be duplicated; in this way, and by always keeping our products up to the highest standard, a market can be created which after a time will take our merchandise of its own accord and without any seeking on our own part. Let every exporter of goods to the West Indies, England, or elsewhere stamp or label his goods with his full address, Saint John, New Brunswick, Canada, or whatever it may be, and if quality and price are satisfactory and there is a demand for his products or if a demand can be created, orders will follow without solicitation.

MIND AND MATTER.

Brooklyn physicians are just now perplexed over a case in which the patient, a man of unusual intelligence and stability of mind, loses the sight of one of his eyes from no other cause that can be traced than the effect of the mind upon that organ. Judah P. Voorhees is the man, and one of his eyes is so nearly useless that to a flash of the most brilliant light it is almost entirely unresponsive. His attendants are mystified as to the cause of this blindness and Mr. Voorhees is just as indefinite in his ideas in the matter as are the medical men. The theory that the defect of the organ was caused by fright has been suggested and on this point Mr. Voorhees says:—"Last August I was in the White mountains. There was a railroad collision in which the passengers were badly shaken up, and I was unfortunate enough to be one of them. One of the colliding trains was going quite slowly, but the other was going at a pretty fast rate, and we were all rather badly scared. I am perfectly willing to admit that the shock affected me for a considerable time afterward. This, however was not the only fright which I have recently received. I came within an ace of being nearly killed in the surrogate's office. Some alterations were in progress and they rendered necessary the erection of a scaffolding directly above my head. While I was at work a heavy plank came thundering down. It fell across my desk and descended no more than an inch or two from my head. That, too, startled me pretty badly, and it may be that the loss of the sight of one of my eyes is the consequence of these scares, either collectively or separately." We have long believed that many of the physical infirmities that afflict mankind have a mental origin; we read of men being "dazed by grief," "blinded by astonishment," "paralysed by fear," and we believe that many so called hereditary complaints are transmitted from generation to generation by nothing else than a constant brooding over an impending calamity. In times of cholera and diseases of a like character it is pretty well established that as many people fall victims to fear as to disease. The theory may not be consistent with Dr. Koch's, but we do not question but that healthy men may drive themselves into consumption by fear of its approach. Mr. Voorhees is well known among men of letters, among whom he is somewhat distinguished, and the infirmity by which he has been overtaken is looked upon with deep regret. The Eagle says:—

As a literary man Mr. Voorhees has won all the distinction he enjoys, except, of course, that which has direct reference to his chief clerkship. He has not only participated quite prominently in the deliberations of the society of Old Brooklynites, but his contributions to the papers of that organization are among its most interesting records. Local magazines have been enriched by these contributions, and it is needless to say that almost without exception they deal with people and events of former times. As a matter of fact the affairs of the present day have so little interest for Mr. Voorhees, from a literary point of view, that his papers are responsible for much of the gentle and entirely harmless humor which is indulged in concerning his age. Mr. Voorhees takes with great kindness to whatever is said on the subject of his years. He is rather pleased than otherwise when they are discussed. Local humorists have a chronic habit of saying that the date of the birth of Mr. Voorhees goes back so much further than the paleolithic age, that it is absurd to attempt to establish it with anything like entire accuracy, and that the only alternative is to be haphazard about it and to identify his infancy with some remote era and let the glacial age shoulder the responsibility. No protest against this having been handed down from that remote period of the world's history and no denial having come from Mr. Voorhees himself, the theory has passed current in spite of the fact that the chief clerk's memory for dates is not vague, and that in a sentence he could have settled the interesting controversy. He is about 62 years old, so that in comparison with some of his traducers he is still a man of tender years. He is a member of the St. Nicholas society, and, as assistant secretary of that organization, is in charge of many of its records. When the society partakes of its annual repast Mr. Voorhees deliberately unfolds much of the interesting parchment of his memories and the village of fifty years ago is revived, with its tortuous lanes, its apple trees and its pumps. The apple trees flourish most lustily when the stone jars of schnapps begin to diminish in weight, and as the festive evening advances the pumps are located with great exactness.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

The discovery of the cancer parasite is claimed by Dr. Russell of the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. In view of what science is accomplishing it would be hardly rash to predict that in process of time death will have no unavoidable natural cause except old age.

Speaking of the new order of the most Holy Sacraiment that has recently established itself in Montreal, the Toronto Mail says that Quebec is becoming the happy hunting ground of what are termed "the religious." It will soon be difficult to find a layman there.

Americans are apt to resort to humor while discussing the gravest subjects. A republican paper responds to one of its contemporaries which says "the party is recovering from the accident of last November," with the remark, "But the skull was broken and some of the brains appear to have escaped."

John Birce, the Grand Trunk railway engineer, who died with his hand on the throttle, at Lachine last Thursday, after he discovered the mistake of the switchman had about one minute to consider whether he would save his own life and sacrifice those of his passengers, or save theirs and sacrifice his own. He choose the latter, proving that under his greasy waistcoat there beat as big a heart as ever beat under the vestments of a king.

As much has been said of late relative to the New York Steamship Company retaining the wharf leased by them for a term of years, we will state that the company have complied with the terms agreed upon, and the wharf will not be rentable after Dec. 10th, as prophesied. Their warehouse accommodation is one of the best in the city, and we understand that were it not for the present rules and regulations of the port, that arrangement could be made with their agent for wharfage and storehouse room, as they would be glad to accommodae other tonnage there, when it would not conflict with the city wharves, or while their steamers are not running. In fact the company have the interest of the port at heart and are anxious to accommodate the shipping and commercial houses, doing business at St John.

The recent purchases for the Maritime Stock Experimental Farm at Maccan, which are now domiciled at that place, came in the main from Ontario and consist of:—Shorthorns—a male and three females; Holsteins—a male and three females; Ayrshires—a male and two females. Col. Blair also bought a few of the best strains of fowls in White Leghorn, Plymouth Rock, and Black Minorcas. The Amherst Record say:—

The stables at this farm now contain 58 head of cattle and seven horses. When the Colonel mentioned this to the Record, his eyes twinkled as he added with evident pride, "And we have the feed for them all, too—raised on the farm." This fact is unmistakable evidence of the valuable work being accomplished by good cultivation.

SWINDLED THEIR GRANDMOTHER.

A Slight Case of Heartlessness Reported in Biddeford.

BIDDEFORD, Dec. 7. A case of heartless rascality, through which an aged Biddeford woman who can ill afford it loses $300, is reported. The victim is a widow eighty years old who resides with her daughter in the outskirts of the city and her earthly possessions consist of a small bank account at the York county savings bank. It seems that several weeks ago two grandchildren, young men and brothers, came here from a Connecticut town to visit their aunt and grandmother. It is claimed that while on a visit the two persuaded the old lady to advance them some money from her bank account and that she finally consented to give them an order for fifty dollars. On account of failing eyesight and other infirmities, the old lady was hardly able to sign her name, so one of her grandsons wrote the order for her, made payable to himself, while the other witnessed the old lady's signature. How they read the order to their grandmother is not known but the order which she signed and which was honored by the bank, instead of being for $50 was for $300. The young men returned to their home in Connecticut and their rascality was not discovered until a few days ago when the victim had occasion to draw on the bank on her own account

DISEASES MADE TO ORDER.

A Choice Collection of Horrible Complaints Bottled in Tubes.

(From the Washington Star.)

In the Army Medical Museum there is at present a bottled stock most admirably complete of nearly all the diseases which are apt to be fatal to human life. If one cares to indulge in any of these luxuries there are on hand in quantities to suit; consumption, pneumonia, typhoid fever, diphtheria, Asiatic cholera, blood poisoning, erysipelas, carbuncle and numerous other similarly cheerful complaints. The Army Medical Museum keeps these morbid affections in tubes so constantly ready for immediate communication to healthy individuals that the curator in charge of the laboratory was kind enough to say yesterday that if desired he could give them all to the writer within a few moments.

The curator added that he really would be able to do this at no serious loss or expense, inasmuch as there was enough consumption in the consumption bottle to communicate the complaint to many thousands of people, and it was the same way with all the other diseases he had on hand. In administering pneumonia to a patient, so he said, he would select by preference the method of putting a solution of the germs in water in a spraying vessel and have the victim breathe the spray. The subject operated upon would contract the affection with absolute certainty every time. Pneumonia, by the way, is contracted not from a cold or inflammation of the lungs, as people ordinarily suppose, but from the breathing in of pneumonia germs, which are given encouragement in growing and multiplying by an unhealthy condition, such as a cold may give rise to. The mouths of altogether healthy people very commonly have lots of pneumonia bacteria in them. The disease signifies simply that the air cells in the lungs are ruptured and blood flows into them, thus rendering them useless for breathing.

As for the interesting and commonly fatal complaint, carbuncle, the curator said that he could produce it any time in the most healthy individual by a simple inoculation with a solution of the germs. Once so inoculated you have about an even chance with death. This is very commonly called "wool-sorters disease," because men who sort wool are very apt to contract it. Sheep are frequently afflicted with carbuncle, and the slightest abrasion on the hand of one who touches the fleece of an animal so diseased is likely to communicate it. Spraying the throat with a solution of the proper germs is the proper method also for contriving diphtheria, which can be given in this way with absolute certainty. Then it is a question of preventing the patient by artificial means from being strangled by the false membrane that rapidly grows and tries to fill up the breathing passage.

There is no great difficulty in contracting Asiatic cholera if you want it. Take a few of the germs from the appropriate bottle at the museum and drink them in water or beef tea. If your stomach is in a particularly healthy condition you may not take the disease, but otherwise you are pretty sure to have it. An assistant in the laboratory of the famous Prof. Koch once swallowed by accident a lot of germs of Asiatic cholera, with which experiments were being made, and developed what the professor delightfully called a typical case. He recovered by a narrow scrape.

The diseases which the Government keeps thus bottled in convenient form are all obtained—the germs, that is to say—from actual diseased tissues of patients afflicted with the complaints. To propagate the germs in any quantity from these tissues is easily enough. Vegetable gelatine, from a Japanese plant called "agar-agar," is boiled and mixed with beef tea, so as to form a soft, transparent solid. A small quantity of this is put into a tube that is tightly corked with cotton at the open end. The tube is then placed in an oven and heated until all the germs in it, of whatever sort, are killed. Next the tube is briefly uncorked and a long steel wire, that has been heated also to sterilize it, is dipped in the germs of the disease which it is desired to cultivate and scraped across the surface of the gelatine. The tube is now recorked and permitted to stand for a few hours, at the end of which the bacteria, of the disease, having found the gelatine to their taste for feeding upon, will have multiplied enormously, so as to fairly cover the surface of the gelatine. Each kind of bacteria or germ has its own form of growing in colonies so that one disease can be readily distinguished from another in the tubes without a microscope. All diseases, you see, are caused by poisonous bacteria, but most bacteria are of the most important usefulness in the world, performing an essential part in the operations whereby human tissues are renewed and kept healthy. The mouth and throat are always full of bacteria and the skin is covered with them; they are in the air and everywhere.

Messrs Lane and Jones, of Kentville, who have been prospecting for gold on the Gaspereau mountain during the last few weeks, brought to Wolfville on Saturday last a bag filled with gold bearing quartz, found on Gold Brook near the residence of Mr. Judson Gould. They inform us that the lead is about 3 feet wide and easy to mine.—Acadian.

Purify The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is hereditted and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

Who have used the various Emulsions of COD LIVER OIL with which the market is flooded, and after prescribing ESTEY'S COD LIVER OIL CREAM, unhesitatingly pronounce it the finest preparation of the kind they ever used. Being made with Glycerine instead of sugar or other Saccharine matter in any form, renders it far less liable to fermentative changes in the stomach, and prevents and overcomes the flatulency and eructation so often occasioned by the plain Cod Liver Oil.
