POETRY.

THE LEAF.

Thou art curl'd and tender and smooth, young leaf,
With a creamy fringe of down,
As thou slippest at touch of the light, young leaf,
From thy cradling case of brown.

Thou art soft as an infant's hand, young leaf,
When it fondles a mother's cheek;
And thy elders are clusterd around, young leaf,
To shelter the fair and weak.

To welcome thee out from the bud, young leaf,
There are airs from the east and the west;
And the rich dew glides from the clouds, young leaf,
To nestle within thy breast.

The great wide heaven, and the earth, young leaf,
Are around, and thy place for thee,
Come forth! for a thread art thou, young leaf,
In the web-work of mystery!

Thou art full and firmly set, green leaf,
Like a strong man upon the earth;
And thou showest a sturdy front, green leaf,
As a shield to thy place of birth.

There is pleasant rest in thy shade, green leaf,
And thou makest a harp for the breeze:
And the blossom that bends from thy base green leaf,
Is loved by the summer bees.

The small bird's nest on the bough, green leaf,
Has thee for an ample roof;
And the butterflies cool their wings, green leaf,
On thy branching braided woof.

Thou art doing thy part of good, green leaf,
And shedding thy ray of grace;
There's a lesson written in thee, green leaf,
For the eye of man to trace.

Thou art rough, and shrivell'd, and dry, old leaf,
And has lost the fringe of down;
And the green of thy youth is gone, old leaf,
And turn'd to yellow and brown.

There are sisters of thine trod in clay, old leaf,
And in swollen rivers drown'd;
Ah, but thou tremblest mue, old leaf,
Looking down to the greedy ground.

The autumn blast, with thy doom, old leaf,
Cometh quickly, and will not spare,
Thou art kin to the dust to-day, old leaf,
And to-morrow thou liest there.

For thy work of life is done, old, leaf,
And now there is need of thy death,
Be content! 'Twill be all for the best, old leaf,
There is love in the slaying breath.

A LIFE SCENE.—How suddenly the scenes change in this great drama of life in which we are acting. The grave succeeds the gay and the dark the light, following each other with such rapidity that they almost seem to blend. In the late fearful casualty, the burning of the Austria, Mr. Smith, of Chelsea, informs us he was playing with the children in the cabin at the time of the alarm. Everything was gay and pleasant, when in the midst of the exuberant happiness that prevailed, the curtain fell! The change that followed was appalling in contrast with the recent brightness. In one hour's time the cheerful voices were chilled in death—the pleasant lips that he had kissed were cold—the bright eyes that glanced responsive to his own more closed forever, and he a waif upon the ocean, with death and devastation all around him, was battling with an impending and threatening doom. There is tho' for a life time to the one thus placed, and those childish voices must ring in his ears as long as memory holds its sway.

LADIES READ.—Nothing is so illy understood in America as those conventional laws of society, so well understood and practised in Europe. Ladies complain that gentlemen pass them in the street unnoticed, when in fact the fault arises from their own breach of politeness. It is their duty to do the amiable first, for it is a priviledge which ladies enjoy of choosing their own associates or acquaintances. No gentleman likes to risk the "cut" in the street by a lady through a premature salute. Too many ladies, it would seem, don't know their trade of politeness. Meeting ladies in the street, whom one has casually met in company, they seldom bow unless he bows first; and when a gentleman ever departs from the rule of good breeding, except, occasionally, by way of experiment his acquaintances do not multiply, but he stands, probably charged with rudeness. A lady must be civil to a gentleman in whose company she may casually be placed; but a gentleman is not, upon this, to presume upon the acquaintanceship the first time he afterwards meets her in the street. If it be her will, she gives some token of recognition, when the gentleman may bow; but otherwise he must pass on and consider himself a stranger. No lady need hesitate to bow to a gentleman; for he will promptly and politely answer, even he has forgotten his fair saluter.—No one but a brute can do otherwise. Should he pass on rudely, his character is declared, and there is a cheap riddance. Politeness or good breeding is like law—the "reason of things."

A countryman was dragging a calf by a road in a crul manner. An Irishman asked him if that was the way he trated his fellow critters.

The reason gentlemen of the present day stoop so is on account of their being constantly bent upon pleasure. We hope they will not be straitened by the circumstances.

Dr. Hall has recently advanced some new ideas in regard to sleep. He advocates going to bed early does not advocate early rising when one's natural sleep is disturbed by it. He thinks that no person should jump out of bed immediately on waking, but should be quiet, until the sense of weariness passes from his limbs.

In Cork a short time ago, the crier endeavored to disperse the crowd by exclaiming, "All ye blackguards that isn't lawyers quit the Court."

POWER OF STEAM.—"Is it stame?" said an Irishman. By the Saintly St. Pathrick but it's a mighty great thing intirely for drivin things! It puts me through nine States in a day!—Divil a word o 'lie in it!"

"Nine States!" exclaimed a dozen in astonishment.

"Yes nine of them, be japer! as aisy as a cat 'ud lick her ear. D'ye see now—I got married in New York in the mornin,' and wint wid my wife Biddy to the Baltimore the same day—hould your whist now and count the States. There was the state of matrimony, which I entered from a single state in a sober state, in the state of New York, and I wint through New-Jarsey Pinsylvania and Dilawur, into Maryland, where I arrived in a beautiful state of joli fication!—There is nine by the holy poker! Och, but stame's a scrouger!"

"John," said a victimised husband, "how I wish it was as much the fashion to trade wives as it is to trade horses." "Why so, Pete?" "I'd cheat somebody most shockin' bad afore night."

AN UP AND DOWN REPLY.—During the examination of a witness as to the locality of the stairs in a house, the counsel asked him:

"Which way did the stairs run?"

The witness a noted wag, replied that "One way they ran up stairs, but the other way they ran down stairs."

The learned counsel winked his eyes and then took a look at the ceiling.

TRUE COURAGE.—Have the courage to show your respect for honesty, in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt, for dishonesty and duplicity, by whomsoever exhibited.

By taking a revenge, a man is but even with his enemy; but in passing over an injury he becomes his superior.

A [illegible] intoxicated, was sent to jail. "[illegible] out?" inquired a by-[illegible]," exclaimed [illegible] up him [illegible]."
