NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

Some inconsiderate people in Massachusetts with more children than they had any right to or the means of taking care of, celebrated Thanksgiving Day by leaving them on the door-steps of strangers. Several instances have been reported, and it is rather an alarming custom for the owners of the door steps. They are not apt to be over-thankful for such blessings.

"The finest suspension bridge, the finest workhouse, the grandest fountain and esplanade, the most magnificent hospital, the most complete, ornate and extensive library edifice, the most beautiful suburbs and cemetery, and the best station house, in the country," are among the advantages claimed by Cincinnati. We fear she is beating Chicago at her own game. We await advices from Bragopolis with anxiety.

Your ghost has no fear of the mortal engines that affright the souls of living beings, and villainous saltpetre hath lost its terror for the disembodied. Witness a spectre that haunts the pistol factory of Smith & Wesson in Springfield. He was whilom an industrious oiler of the machinery in that manufactory of death-dealing implements, and even now by the glimpses of the watchman's lantern he plies an oil can in the dead hours of the night.

A way that they have in Massachusetts of showing their gratitude to Providence for the manifold blessings of the year is by pardoning one or more well-behaved convicts from the State prison. Last Thursday there were four lucky ones at Charlestown. One of them had become blind in the service and was turned out to take care of himself, which he will do by bearing a placard on his chest signifying that he has a large family and met with a distressing accident some years ago. He should hold the State to its contract for supporting him during his lifetime.

It is not often that a public speaker has the satisfaction of seeing his or her (we must needs use the awkward double-headed phrase now-a-days) teachings acted on so promptly as those of Mrs. Livermore were in Springfield the other evening. She was speaking with especial severity of the practice of tight-lacing and the injurious effects of corsets, when "a young lady in the gallery, with great difficulty and much perseverence, burst her corset strings, and drawing them forth, knotted them together, and, tossing them to some young gentlemen near by, remarked, 'Here, boys, you can have this to play cat's-cradle with.'"

The verdict of "criminal neglect" in the inquest on those killed by the awful boiler explosion at Harlem will do some good, if is enforced by the arrest and punishment of the contractors and engineer. Under present conditions of life, as we have many times pointed out, there is much more danger to life and property from carelessness than from design, and we can not live in even moderate security unless criminality is imputed, and its punishment awarded to those who accept the dangerous responsibilities of steam and other explosives, and betray the trust. If the law is not sufficient to cover this ground, common sense dictates that it should be amended accordingly.

The United States Army and Navy.

FROM THE REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

The estimates for military purposes for the year ending June 30, 1874, were $33,828,378.78. The estimates for the same purpose for the year ending June 30, 1875, are $34,410,722.89.

It is very difficult, under existing laws, to supply the Army with field musicians, two of which are allowed to each company. As this is an essential part of the military establishment, better facilities for obtaining musicians should be afforded, by the passage of an act to authorize the enlistment of boys not under 12 years of age, always with the consent of parents or guardians. This provision did exist until, probably through inadvertence, the law of 1865, against the enlistment of minors, put an end to it. It is unnecessary to allude to notorious cases of efficient service by music boys, even on the field of battle, to illustrate their perfect competency for all the duties required of musicians. While they make the best musicians, they generally, at more advanced age, have become most valuable non-commissioned officers as the fruit of their early training. This plan has, too, the merit of being a most useful charity, for it would provide for many sons of old soldiers, living and dead, who now are without aim or object of life, and in danger of becoming worthless men, but who, if enlisted, would have the benefit not only of tuition in music, but also in the useful common branches of education taught at the depot school.

The recruiting officers are charged with the expenses of enlistment of minors when guilty of want of due care; but it is exceedingly difficult in many instances to ascertain the true age of a man, even with such critical examination as recruits are subjected to. Thus, while the Government is imposed upon, under an oath, by the recruit, while it in good faith feeds, clothes, transports to a regiment, and often pays him, it is by present legislation left without protection or remedy against the fraud. The recruit obtains all the benefit, sometimes is transported to a region where he wishes to settle, and then obtains a discharge with perfect impunity for his fraud. It is suggested that some action be taken towards the passage of a positive law to provide for the punishment of recruits who have deceived the recruiting officers by falsely swearing to their age or physical condition. In my judgment he should be immediately turned over to the proper tribunal, and the United States law officer in whose district the recruit may have committed the offense should be required to prosecute him for the false oath he has taken, and for the great expense he has given the Government.

FROM GEN. SHERMAN'S REPORT.

I have the honor herewith to submit a statement showing the organization and actual strength of enlisted men in the army, compiled from the official returns up to the latest date, and invite your attention to the recapitulation, showing 25.525 enlisted men of cavalry, artillery, and infantry, and 3,970 non-combatants—the whole aggregating 29.505, or 495 less than the number (30,000) limited by law. In the active regiments the number of sick men and on the necessary details about the post will fully equal 25 per cent; so that the actual strength for military service does not exceed 19,652 men. In order that the regular army should fulfil its arduous duties on the frontier, as also form the model on which to shape the volunteers and militia force of the United States, I earnestly recommend that the Congress be asked to fix the limit of the enlisted force at such a figure as will give 30,000 for the regiments of the line, and to provide specially for the non-combatants, such as the engineer battalion, the Ordinance Department, West Point Detachments, Signal Department, ordinance commissary sergeants, in the same manner as has been done for the hospital steward.

No part of the army is under my immediate control, and the existing army regulations devolve on the Secretary of War the actual command of the military peace establishment and all responsibility thereof, so that I forbear making any further recommendations or report.

FROM THE REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

There are now in the Navy 165 vessels, carrying, exclusive of howitzers, 1,269 guns, which is a reduction, since my last annual report, by sale and otherwise, of 13 vessels. A general enumeration of these vessels presents: 63 steamers, other than iron-clads and tugs, carrying 826 guns; 29 sailing vessels, 332 guns; 48 iron-clad vessels, 121 guns; and 25 tugs, used for navy-yard and freight purposes. Of this number there are at present in commission for sea service, distributed on the several foreign stations and on our own coast, 46 vessels, carrying 407 guns. The cruising or active force of the Navy, as these may be called, and which is controlled by the appropriations made and the seamen authorized by law, is about the same as last year, the places of those vessels which have been put out of commission within the past twelve months from expiration of the cruises or for other causes, having been supplied by commissioning and sending to sea a corresponding number of others.

The list will show a force slightly decreased in numbers by the sale of some useless vessels, which were, while we retained them, only a source of expense, and it is somewhat weakened also in strength by the condemnation and laying up of several of our white oak cruisers which have reached the limit of their cruising life, and can no longer be used with safety on the seas. Many of the ships now on the Navy list, and which serve to swell the number to the figures above given, are far from being such as are really needed, and their true condition, which has been often officially represented to Congress, can be fully understood and appreciated by reference to the reports of the Bureaus which are herewith submitted.

In the meanwhile, however, we have been engaged in completely repairing six of our live-oak cruising ships which, are now in various stages of forwardness at the several navy yards. These are all of moderate size, and none of them sufficiently advanced to be of present use, but they are adapted to the wants of our cruising navy, and will in a few months add materially to its strength and efficiency. The eight new sloops of war authorized by the last Congress are all in process of building—one-half at the various navy-yards, three under contract in private yards, and the remaining one under private contract in the Navy Yard at Kittery. The building of those ships, with their engines and machinery, is progressing rapidly, and the work, widely distributed at more than a dozen naval stations and private establishments, is contributing to the remunerative employment of several thousand workmen, and the maintenance of a very large number of persons dependent upon their labor for support and education. It is not without gratification that I am able to report that, besides the great value and importance of this work to the service, we have also been able to utilize the liberality of Congress as to contribute materially to the business interests of the country and to the support and comfort of many producing and dependent people.

The valuable work thus begun should not be discontinued, but the Department should be provided with a moderate amount of funds and authorized to commence each year to build a certain number of tons, to supply regularly the regular yearly expenditure of naval force which will of necessity occur.

What constitutes conspiracy against the Spanish Government in Cuba. A man named Bello, who had lived in Boston for years and had been a professor of the Spanish language, went to Havana lately to look after some property which had been sequestered, and was immediately arrested for "conspiring against the Spanish Government." A Government that sees such horrid spectres in every arriving passenger, must be in a terribly debauched condition.

Mechanics' Institute!

LECTURE SEASON, 1873-74.
30th Annual Course.

THE President and Directors of the SAINT JOHN MECHANICS' INSTITUTE beg to announce that they have engaged a number of gentlemen to deliver, during the approaching Season, a Course of Lectures, which, they think they may safely say, will be, in many respects, the best and most attractive ever given in this city.
They have secured the services of four eminent professional lecturers, two of whom will come from the United States and two from the Mother Country.
The Regular Course, to which all members will be admitted, as usual, upon taking out their Season Tickets, will consist of Seven Lectures and Readings, and will begin on the evening of MONDAY, 8th December next.

Programme of the Regular Course:

1873.	NAME OF LECTURER.	TITLE OF SUBJECT.
8th Dec'r.	EDWARD JENKINS, Esq., author of "Ginx's Baby, &c."	"The England of To-Day."
15th "	ISAAC I. HAYES, M. D., the Arctic Explorer.	"The Open Polar Sea."
22nd "	HON. WILLIAM PARSONS	"Michael Angelo."

HOME TESTIMONY.
St. John, N. B., March 28, 1873.
MESSRS. R. C. MARGESON & CO.—Gentlemen: I have been afflicted with gravel and stone upwards of a year and a half—tried everything I could hear of for its relief, without avail; saw your advertisement of CALCULIFUGE in the Halifax papers—took three bottles according to directions, and in the short space of four weeks am entirely cured. I willingly add my testimony to its value, and heartily recommend it to all afflicted as I have been.
(Signed) DAVID COLLINS, Formerly Harness Maker, St. John, N. B.
