Miss Willard, the president of the world's W. C. T. U. does not oppose bloomers as an article of dress, but she doesn't wear them. As a maiden of fifty-five she doesn't think they would become her. And everybody is satisfied.

Mrs. Hartwell has received a letter from her husband, stating that he expects to eat his Christmas dinner at Che-Kiang on his way to Chen-Tu to resume operations. Mrs. Hartwell's heart is in the mission work and she longs to get back to "dear Chen-Tu".

At Ottawa, the four gold sweepstake medals for herds of the four dairy breeds all came to Leeds County. The winners were;—Jerseys, Mrs. E. M. Jones, Brockville; Guernseys, W. H & C. H. McNish, Lyn; Ayrshirs, R. P. Steacy, Lyn; Holsteins, C. J. Gilroy & Son, Glen Buell.

At 4 o'clock on Thursday morning lightning struck the hog-pen of Mrs. Davis, Sheldon's Corners, near Plum Hollow, killing five hogs and two pigs. The building was ignited and rapidly consumed. Nothing was saved. Mr. Fred Hayes promptly started a subscription, assisted by Mr. W. J. Yates. The good people of the surrounding country responded cheerfully and did as they would that others should do to them in a like case. The loss in this case was a severe one. About $100 was subscribed most of which has been handed in. A grand comment on christian people.

Byron W Loverin of Greenbush left a basket containing 16 potatoes at the Reporter office last week that tipped the scale at 27 lbs., the largest one weighing 3 lbs. and 2 oz. The weighing was done by R D Judson, which is proof that the weights are correct. These potatoes are of the Rural New Yorker No. 2 variety from seed purchased from H N Hawks, Addison. We propose dividing this basket of potatoes into two lots and giving them as a premium to any two of our subscribers who will send in one new yearly subscriber each to the Reporter, accompanied by the cash ($1.00), which will pay up to Jan. 1st, '97. The first come, first served.

A Correction.

Editor Reporter.—

SIR,—In the local' summary of last week's edition of the Athens Reporter we notice a paragraph which referred to a special prize given at Lansdowne Fair by Mr. H. C. Mulvaugh. Now, we wish to make clear to the ladies and to the public in general that the special in question has been misrepresented to them by some would-be gallant who signs himself "H." The special reads thus: "For the best pair of roadsters driven by a lady," etc. Now, it does not specify whether the lady must be a resident of the county or not. The only restriction is that the team of roadsters shall be owned in the front of Leeds & Lansdowne. We would advise Mr. H. in the future to understand the conditions before putting himself forth as ladies' champion. It is evident that he is not a member of the agricultural society, but, even so, some neighbor would loan him a prize list. It is also evident he has not got over the pons assinorum in his effort to square the circle.

I wish to say to the public that nearly every article of the large stock on hand last fall, when I took the business, has been sold and replaced with new goods of the latest designs. My stock is complete in every line, which I purpose selling on reasonable terms or discount off for cash.—T. G. STEVENS, Athens Ont. 3 in.

We will have a special announcement to make next week, regarding our clubbing rates for the Reporter and weekly Globe, that will be worthy the attention of every one wanting the two best weekly papers published in Canada. Look for special announcement at head of local columns next week.

On Wednesday last, Mr. Delber Dobbs was united in matrimonal bonds with Miss Annie Scott, daughter of Abel Scott, Esq., of Addison. After a brief trip, the happy couple have established their home in Athens. The Reporter extends congratulations and best wishes.

At the residence of Jas. Herbison, Esq., of Leeds, on the 25th Sept. by the Rev. H. Gracey, Mr. Alden Aiguire, of Grand Forks, Dakota, was wedded to Miss Annie B McCallum, M. D., of Leeds. Both the contracting parties were formerly pupils of Athens high school and have many friends in this section who will learn with pleasure of their marriage and wish them a happy and prosperous life.

The anniversary services of the Baptist church, held on Sunday and Monday, were in every respect successful. The Sunday services were well attended, the church being filled to overflowing at the evening meeting. The tea served on Monday evening was one of the very best ever provided in Athens and was enjoyed by a large number. An excellent entertainment followed, which was presided over in a pleasing manner by Mr. J. H. Mills, M. A. The speakers were Rev. S. Sheldon of Delta, Rev. J. M. Hagar, Rev. W. Giles, and Rev. J. J. Cameron. Miss Jennie Davison sang a solo very acceptably and the church choir gave several selections that were unusually well rendered.

Worthy Your Confidence.

The success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in conquering scrofula in whatever way it may manifest itself is vouched for by thousands who were afflicted by this prevalent disease, but who now rejoice over a permament cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Scrofula may appear as a humor, or it may attack the glands of the neck, or break out in dreadful running sores on the body or limbs. Attacking the mocous membrane, it may develop into catarrh or lodging in the lungs lead to consumption.

FRANKVILLE.

MONDAY, Oct 7.—Mr. S. J. Stevenson of Ottawa was the guest of Mr. J. Richards last week.

Miss Gertie Coad, Brockville, is visiting her many friends in this vicinity.

A very quiet wedding took place at Mr. Enos Sopers, on Wednesday last it being the marriage of Miss Etta to Mr. W. W. Devitt of New York City. After the wedding breakfast the happy couple left for their home in New York.

Miss Morrison, Soperton, was the guest of Mr. Enos Soper last week.

Miss Devitt of Easton's Corners and Miss Ida Bates, Elbe Mills, are guests of Miss Cynthia Soper.

Mr. Hill Richards is a happy man. It's a girl.

Will Dowsley has returned to Queen's College, Kingston.

Dr. L. M. Dixon is improving in health. We hope to see him around in a short time.

Rumor says another wedding is soon to take place.

Mr. O. L. Munroe is drilling a well at the rear of his lot.

Mr. Wm. Dowsley, jr., and H. H. Elliott, who have been spending the summer at home, returned to Queen's College, Kingston, on Tuesday last.

Mr. R. Brownbridge, proprietor of the Florida House, has made considerable improvements to his house, adding much to its appearance.

Mr. Isaac Munroe had the misfortune to have one of his fingers severely injured while attending a sawing machine last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mitchell met with quite a serious accident last week while on the way to Gananaque fair. It seems the horses got frightened at some sheep in the road, throwing Mrs. Mitchell out, and severely injuring her about the head, while Mr. Mitchell escaped with only a sprained ankle.

The concert given on the last night of the fair, under the auspices of the Epworth League, was a decided success. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $30.

IS SHORTIS INSANE?

HOW LOWE SAVED THE MONEY.

Return of Sir Oliver Mowat—Fatal Accident at a Corner-Stone Laying—Farmer's Market.

Beauharnois, Oct. 4.—(Special.)—Excitement over the Shortis trial has reached a fever heat in this district, and the arrival of Dr. Bucke of London, who, with three other experts, will declare that Shortis is mentally irresponsible, and the prospect that their evidence, with that of the Waterford Commission, may save Shortis from capital punishment, has set the people in a frenzy. This afternoon it was announced that an evening sitting of the court would be held, but as the Crown has made such rapid progress with the taking of evidence actually started, it was thought advisable to give Judge, jurors and counsel, to say nothing of the press, a few hours to consider the doings of the day, but this was not believed by the throng that packed the court room at the adjournment at 6 o'clock. People thought it was a scheme to keep them out, and toward 7.30 the long road up to the court house was traversed by hundreds, among whom could be seen scores of women. Women fashionably gowned, women with shabby garments, girls of 14 and grandmothers of 80, wended their way to the doors of the big stone building, and refused to believe those who told them that the trial was adjourned until the morning. The presence in the court room of women has now become a distinant feature. They struggle with strong men in an endeavor to secure a place of vantage, and it needs but a few moments in their midst to convince one that did they constitute the jury Shortis would escape altogether. The Waterford Commission evidence will make about 200 typewritten foolscap pages. It is now in the hands of the defence and is being prepared for reading to the Judge and jury. Whether or not at the time of the tragedy Francis C. F. Shortis was unaccountable for his deed, the fact is now patent that the evidence for the defence will establish the truth of the assertion that in his family insanity exists, and that to-day, in addition to failing health, his mind is undoubtedly unbalanced. To-day he had a walk in the field at the back of the jail, the first breath of comparative freedom in seven months.

Constable Poirier of Valleyfield was first called to produce the revolvers, cartridges, chisel, pair of suspenders, necktie, piece of telephone wire and a small bottle. When the exhibits were laid on a table the prisoner lowered his gaze and for five minutes stared at the instruments he had used in the slaying. Then he resumed his unconcerned manner as Poirier gave from whom he had received the various articles.

Mr. John Lowe, the cashier of the mill, was then recalled and proceeded with his story of the shooting. He told, in a clear and concise manner, how Shortis came into the office, of his successful efforts to get the witness' revolver, the shooting of Wilson and Lowe and of his (Lowe's) escape by rushing with Arthur Leboeuf into the vault. Lowe continued his evidence as follows:—Shortis said: "Come on out," and I replied, "For God's sake go home, go away, you have done enough to-night." Shortis replied, "All right." He then went to the outer door and slammed it, coming back on tip-toe to the vault door. I next heard the cocking of a revolver at the vault door, and it was soon after this that he met Maxime Leboeuf, the watchman, and killed him. Mr. Lowe told of the appearance on the scene of Messrs. Sparrow and Smith of the mill, of his release from the vault by giving Mr. Smith the combination, and of how Shortis, who was then in custody, said, "For God's sake, Lowe, shoot me." "We will do better than that for you," replied Lowe. The witness next told of the searching of Shortis and how a second revolver was found attached to a handkerchief around the prisoner's neck. Among the clerks in the office there was a friendly feeling.

Mr. MacMaster then took his seat and handed the witness over to Mr. Greenshields. Mr. Lowe said:—Shortis was learning the business under Mr. Simpson's supervision. Simpson told Shortis that if he did not leave a certain house in Valleyfield he would have to leave the mill. He was afterwards discharged.

Nothing new was elicited from the witness, and as the clock struck noon the clerk of the court called Hugh A. Wilson. As the young man who so nearly lost his life at the hands of the prisoner entered the witness box there was intense excitement. Shortis' face became almost scarlet as Wilson met his eyes. Wilson's story has never before been told, at least not for publication. His efforts in his fight for life have been described, but never from anything he had said. To the jury he first told of his position in the mill, and the arrival of Shortis on the night of the tragedy. Coming to the actual shooting, the scene was graphic in the extreme. He said: "Shortis turned suddenly, and pointing the revolver at me shot me here (pointing to his cheek bone). The bullet ploughed my cheek and split on the teeth, three of which were broken. A small piece of it entered my tongue. Here it is," and he produced the lead, which had been buried in his tongue for two months. "He then turned and shot Loy dead, and Lowe and Lebeouf got into the safe. I cried, 'Don't shoot, don't shoot,' and as I went to the window near the telephone he shot again, the bullet missing me and going through the window. We heard some one coming, and he said, 'Maxime, what's the matter?' He went round the counter, and I tried to get into the safe. Falling in this I turned and went into the Manager's office. Just as I entered I saw him some yards away raise a pistol, and he shot a man, whom I presume was Leboeuf. I went into the Manager's office and closed the door. Hardly had I done this when Shortis came rushing to the door, tried it, and then kicked out a panel and he got in. I succeeded in getting past him somehow, just how I don't know. I hastened through the outer office, and as I was going through the mill he came near me and snapped the revolver, but it did not go off. As I got into the darkness of the mill I passed some one, whom I think was Maxime Leboeuf, crawling back to the entrance, where he had first been shot."

Wilson continued:—"When I got about ten feet into the mill another shot was fired at me. Soon after this I fell down, and after hearing a struggle at the entrance shortis came back to me, carrying a lantern. As soon as he found me he fired again. The bullet entered just below the collar-bone and passed under the lungs. Shortis left me and went right to the entrance, and I heard more shots fired. I crawled along through the mill and then got under a bench, where I laid for some time. Then Shortis came back into the mill, and got within 25 feet of me, but did not find me. He was searching for me, as I could see him lighting matches every few moments. He went away, but soon returned, and as he got near me he said, 'Wilson, Wilson, for God's sake where are you?' But I did not reply. He went away, and I crawled some distance to the side of the wall, where there was another bench. I shortly afterwards recovered my strength sufficiently to pass through the two long weave rooms to the lower part of the old mill, and going through the carpenter's rooms I reached the pipe room, where I met Napoleon Deliale, who supported me into the boiler house. I managed to murmur 'doctor' to him, and he left me to find one. Deliale came back with Dr. Sutherland, and I told him I was shot, and that Shortis shot me. I told him Johnny Loy was lying dead in the office, and I thought Maxime Lebeouf was dead, too. I was taken home and confined there for two months."
