The Little Red Schoolhouse

In these days of graded schools and diligent supervision, country child as well as city-bred young Canadian has no difficulty in not only learning the three R's, but in pursuing the elusive Greek root and analyzing Browning into elements of Truth and Beauty if he wishes. But fifty years ago things weren't so easy for our fathers and mothers, and "The Little Red Schoolhouse," by Maria H. Coyne, in August Canada Monthly (formerly Canada West) puts before the reader the trials of the small scholars of long ago with almost painful vividness.

"I'm going, I tell you!" stamped Tom, aged nine, as he and his younger brother, Will, stood by the great well sweep of a comfortable farm house on one of the new clearings at the western extremity of Colonel Talbot's settlement, 'Little Ireland,' on Lake Erie, County Elgin, Upper Canada.

"It was in 1822, and the two children were discussing the vexed question of to go or not to go—to school. Tom continued, 'Father would like me to do, I know, but John always pretends he's too busy to spare me. I despise hoeing taters. Sure they will grow without all that fuss. You wait for me by the big stump.'

"Fifteen minutes later the two children, with bated breath, scurried out of sight and then more leisurely made their way through the mile or two of forest that led them to the edge of the small clearing with its log schoolhouse. Here a group of children were gathered, listening intently to the sound of screams, oaths and scattered furniture within, announcing that the schoolmaster had been indulging in a drinking bout and that he and his wife were engaged in a hand-to-hand argument on the question of his delinquency.

"In those early days men who were competent to teach the three R's were rare and the settlers were inclined to believe that the men who best regarded the Scriptural injunction to 'spare the rod and spoil the child' were most fitted to teach the young. This morning however, the tumult and the crying died in a few minutes, and the children entered the one room which combined the uses of reception hall, parlor, dining room, saloon, kitchen and school room, to which was added rather unnecessarily, one could suppose, that of ash receptacle. The master's bedroom was a little receptacle under the peak of the high, sloping roof and was reached by a ladder.

"In the big room downstairs, one corner, near the large fireplace, was occupied by a mass of ashes, then a highly prized commodity, as from them, by leaching and boiling down, the lye, potash was obtained and this commanded a high price in the states. The schoolmaster's wife, however, ordered her life on the principle of "never do today what you can put off until tomorrow," and the result of this policy was that the ashes kissed the ceiling, then gradually spread over the most of the space allotted to the children, who regarded this and other discomforts with the nonchalent air of indifference of a time when children were trained to expect no attention to be paid to their whimsies.

"Winter and summer three backless benches stood in front of the fireplace. The seats were made by the simple contrivance of driving four small stakes into a thick slab, 'whipped' out from a good sized tree trunk. The stakes were never of equal length, and the seats were naturally wobbly, a source of great amusement to the bad boy of the school, who would, by a motion of his foot as he left the bench envelop the rest in a dense grey cloud; or better still, upset a small boy and send him over into the ashes. The little boy might get bruised knees but the master was sure to stop any audible protest by giving him something to cry for.

"In warm weather the other children were kept home to help with the crops and the younger ones sat on a bench in front of a long slab fastened to the side of the room, where the unfortunate children, with feet curled up under them, did their best to learn to write. The books were as various as the small scholars. One small boy was the proud possessor of his mother's old horn book, from which she had learned to read in Scotland. Tom and Will carried Wesley's sermons; others were provided with New Testaments, and many had portions of old newspapers.

"The two brothers were the only 'Irishers' in the school filled with Highland Scotch. They were anxious to learn and if their desire seemed to slacken their mother spurned them on, telling them that they were to study hard for the honor of the old sod. They did not quite know what she meant, but she inspired them with a desire to be like Father in every way, and so of course they must learn as much as possible.

"They were sitting close together trying to digest the long words of the Wesleyan sermons, when a boy at the end of their seat tried to kiss the girl next him. She resented the familiarity by boxing his ears and a noisy scuffle ensued. The teacher had a habit of throwing his taws in the direction of any noise, the inflexible rule being that he or she whom it hit, whether guilty or innocent must carry it back to him and receive a most unmerciful trouncing. Unfortunately this time it hit little Will, who sat too frightened to move. Tom snatched it hurriedly and carried it forward, but his self-sacrifice availed him nothing, for the result was that both children were compelled to endure the torture."

C.M.B.A. CONVENTION

Reports Submitted Show Total Grand Surplus of $528,799.85.

OTTAWA, Aug. 11. — The second day of the C.M.B.A. convention was ushered in with great enthusiasm. Rev. Dr. Burke having led in prayer the business of the convention was at once discussed and the remainder of the reports of the grand president and grand secretary were unanimousl and grand secretary were unanimously adopted.

The auditors' report was also submitted and adopted. Since the last convention statement of June 30, 1907, the surplus of the association has increased from $228,407.43 to $522,531.66. This is equal to an increase of 129 per cent. The present balance in the hands of the grand treasurer amounts to $324,747.91. The amount of the beneficiary fund, less liabilities, is now $187,334.06; general fund, $92,921.47; and branch indemnity fund, $528.20. With that of the sick benefit fund amounting to $6,268.19 the total grand surplus is $528,799.85.

The grand president's report, which has been adopted, shows the total membership of 22,252 is distributed by provinces as follows: Ontario, 11,268; Quebec, 3,869; Nova Scotia, 3,069; New Brunswick, 2,028; Prince Edward Island ,1,078; Manitoba, 449; Saskatchewan, 131; Alberta, 253; British Columbia, 107.

CENSUS BULLETIN

The Census Bulletin shows that the condition of field crops in Canada this year have been greatly modified by temperature and rainfall, and that between the East and the West it is hardly possible to make a statement of averages that will no be misleading. In the eastern provinces growth has been uniformly good throughout July, and the percentages of condition have been high for every crop; but in extensive tracts of the northwest provinces drouth has prevailed and crops are reported in every stage of condition. The northerly parts of these provinces have been largely exempt from the drouth, and there the per cent. conditions are high. It is difficult to indicate fairly an average of conditions for the East and West which does not take account of the areas sown, and these have been considerably reduced since the June report. The August report will give revised figures from which yields may be estimated.

In comparing the per cent. conditions of crops for 1909 and 1910 it should be remembered that fall wheat, rye peas, buckwheat, mixed grains, beans, potatoes, hay and clover and corn are principally produced in the eastern provinces; and spring wheat and flax mostly in the northwestern provinces; with oats and barley in nearly equal proportions in the two regions.

Fall wheat is grown chiefly in Ontario, and its condition for all Canada has been reduced by a relatively poor crop in Alberta. Compared with the condition at the same time last year, it is 84.63 to 76.53. Rye is 85.20 in 1910 to 81.84 in 1909; peas is 81.70 to 87, buckwheat 87.64 to 86.15, mixed grains 99.91 to 87.23, beans 84.43 to 84.33, potatoes 81 to 92, hay and clover 90.87 to 73.79, corn for husking 84.30 to 82.86 and corn for fodder 89.76 to 83. These crops, which are mainly grown in the East, show a high average of condition, affected only in a slight degree by reports for the West.

The average condition of spring wheat is 77 for 1910 to 84.57 for 1909, and of oats 79.57 to 87.78 for all Canada, which is substantially lower than the averages for the East. In the three northwest provinces the condition of spring wheat is 62, of oats 58.62 and of barley 63.60.

The estimated yield of fall wheat in the country is 18,724,000 bushels, being 26.47 bushels per acre. The hay and clover crop is estimated at 15,490,000 tons, or 1.80 tons per acre, and of alfalfa 1.92 tons per acre,

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

The Angel of the Crimea Dies in London—The World's Most Noted Nurse—Lived Until Over Ninety

LONDON, Aug. 14. — Florence Nightingale, the famous nurse of the Crimean war and the only woman who ever received the Order of Merit, died yesterday afternoon at her London home. Although she had been an invalid for a long time, rarely leaving her room, where she passed the time in a half recumbent position, and was under the constant care of a physician, her death was quite unexpected. A week ago she was quite sick but then improved and on Friday was cheerful. During the night Friday was cheerful. During that night alarming symptoms developed and she gradually sank until two o'clock Saturday afternoon when an attack of heart failure brought the end.

Her funeral will be as quiet as possible in accordance with her wishes made during recent years. Owing to her feebleness and advanced age, Miss Nightingale had received but few visitors. On May 12th last she celebrated her 90th birthday, and was the recipient of congratulatory from King George. Florence Nightingale was the first woman to follow a modern army into battle as a nurse and in the Crimean war gained the title of the "Angel of the Crimea." She studied nursing under the Protestant Sisters of Mercy at Kaiserworth, Germany, and the Catholic Sisters of St. Vincent De Paul in Paris.

Returning to England when the Crimean war broke out she organized a corps of nurses, whom she led into the field and was especially celebrated for her noble services at Scutari. At the close of the war she was enabled by a testimonial fund, amounting to $250,000 to found an institution for the training of nurses, the Nightingale Home at St. Thomas Hospital. She was also the means of calling attention to the unsanitary condition of camp hospitals.

In 1908 she received the freedom of the the City of London. King Edward bestowed upon her the Order of Merit, the most exclusive distinction in the gift of the British sovereign.

The membership of the Order is limited to 24 and it includes such men as Lord Roberts, Lord Wolseley, Field Marshall Kitchener, James Bryce, Prince Yamagata and Admiral Togo.

SONS OF ENGLAND

Grand Lodge to be Established in Manitoba.

OTTAWA, Aug. 12.—The Supreme Lodge, Sons of England, decided upon an important new department at today's sitting, when a report by the general purpose committee in favor of acceding to Manitoba's request for the right to establish a provincial grand lodge was adopted. No official announcement was made as to the amount of financial assistance granted to Manitoba to establish a grand lodge, but it is understood that $500 was voted for that purpose, and that the supreme lodge will pay all claims on funeral fund for a period of six months.

Niagara Falls was chosen as the place where the grand lodge will meet in 1912. Among the places competing for the honor were Toronto London and Vancouver.

In view of the fact that an act has already been passed by the imperial parliament amending the coronation oath, no action was taken in regard to it by the grand lodge. It was decided to refer to the incoming executive committee the question of dreadnoughts and the Canadian navy. The question of the employment of coolie labor in Canada will be dealt with by the executive and the St. George's Society.

The usual vote of $150 was passed to buy the past president's jewel for Mr. D. C. Smith, the retiring grand lodge president. The executive was instructed to get a jewel of merit for Rev. Dr. Ikon, as a recognition of his services to the grand lodge of South Africa, which is subordinate to the Canadian Supreme Lodge. At the concluding session in the evening the evening the new supreme lodge officers were installed.

Saw Mill Accident

BRANDON, Man., Aug. 15.—Sam Winoski, employed at Hanbury's Saw Mills, met with an accident, in which his life was saved by only the narrowest margin. He was running one of the big saws and in handling one of the big logs his foot slipped and he fell on the saw, which ripped his left arm down through his hand between the second and third finders. The shock was so great that Winoski collapsed and would have been torn to pieces by the saw but for the quick assistance of comrades who saw the accident and pulled him away.

His arm was cut to the bone all the way along and it took forty stitches to sew up the wound. Bleeding profusely he was hurried up town to Dr. Tindall's office. By that time he had recovered from the shock and refused to take an anaesthetic, while the cut was being sewn. The pain he suffered was intense but he never winced. Winoski will be unable to work for many years.
