COMMENCEMENTS

Sacred Heart Academy, London

The closing exercises of the Sacred Heart Academy took place on the 19th, in presence of His Lordship the Bishop and a number of priests. It was one of the most successful in its history. The customary programme of exercises was this year omitted because of the death of the Mother General of the Order, Rev. Mother Digby. This was a loving tribute to the memory of a great and good woman, whose administration of the affairs of the Order the world over have been dictated by a prudence, a zeal and a special regard for the spiritual life of her sisters in religion as well as of their precious charges, which will associate her in their thoughts with the Blessed Foundress. To her came the inspiration over a hundred years ago, to turn the minds of the nobility of France from that intense worldliness which brought on the revolution, and built up a spirituality of thought which would lead to greater and better and more enduring glory in its truest aspects for the land of St. Louis, which had done a world of work for the spread of God's Church. As a corner-stone, if we may say so, for the beginning of this grand edifice Blessed Madeleine Sophie conceived the holy purpose of planting and nourishing in the hearts of the daughters of the nobility a sweet love for everything pertaining to the Holy House of Bethlehem, and while all this was in her mind she became fully apprised of the importance, nay the necessity, of also training her precious charges in all those accomplishments and grace of manner which ennobles womanhood in that society where superiority of mind and of character and of commanding excellence became a distinguishing characteristic. The daughters of Blessed Madeleine Sophie are doing the same work in our midst in this country to-day and with the same result. Doubtless some thought of their past history was in the mind of His Lordship the Bishop of London when he exhorted the young ladies, after leaving school, to go out into the world and become exemplars of all that is chaste and refined and ennobling in the homes of the land. Their equipment in all that glorifies womanhood is complete. Let them make the most of it for Christ and His Church, the family and the country. At the end of the present school year there were three graduates, Miss Margaret Rowena Burns, daughter of Mr. R. Muir Burns, of London; Miss Marie Wilson, daughter of Mr. James Wilson, Toronto; and Miss Margaret Flynn, daughter of Mr. John Flynn, of London. The valedictory was read by Miss Burns. The following is a list of the honors awarded the pupils:

Closing Exercises at St. Joseph's Academy, Toronto

Owing to the death of His Grace, Archbishop McEvay, the Fifty-seventh Annual Closing Exercises at St. Joseph's Academy, held on Tuesday last, were semi-private. Only the relatives of the graduates and the Academy Alumnae were present. The exercises were for the first time held in the magnificent new auditorium forming part of the splendid collegiate wing lately added to the convent and academy.

The new building is located south of the east wing of the convent. It fronts on Breadalbane street, its extreme dimensions east and west are 156 feet and 110 feet north and south. It is four stories high and is used for educational purposes only. In plan it resembles the letter T, the top bar of which would be the west wing (running north and south) and the "stem" the east wing (running east and west). On the end of this wing, in the near future, it is intended to erect one similar to that on the west. On the ground floor are situated the entrance for the public and pupils, also the auditorium, reception, cloak, toilet lunch and recreation rooms, etc. The first floor is taken up with the upper portion of the assembly hall, offices, vocal studio and three classrooms. On the second floor there are nine classrooms and lecture rooms and two science rooms, while on the third floor are located the Study Hall (with desks for 200 pupils), the library, three art rooms, lace and china and two sewing rooms. On the ground and first floors the new and old buildings are connected by a cloister 16 feet wide and 90 feet long. It has a panelled ceiling and moulioned windows filled with leaded cathedral glass. The roof of this corridor is flat and paved with red tile, thus affording a useful promenade, as well as an uncovered balcony connected between the two buildings at the second floor level. The corridors throughout have vaulted ceilings, are twelve feet wide and well lighted; the staircases are of oak in broad easy flights. The class and lecture rooms are 24 feet wide and of various lengths to accommodate the different size of classes, are lighted from one side only, have slate blackboards on three sides, and conform in every respect to the requirements of the education department. The science rooms are fitted up in the most efficient manner with individual desks supplied with sinks, gas, water and electricity, etc. The art and sewing rooms are lighted from the top and sides and have every requisite needed for these large and important departments.

The auditorium is one of the best (if not the best) of its kind in the city. It occupies the whole of the ground and first floors of the west wing, is 72 feet wide and 90 feet long. There are no columns to obstruct the view, the ceiling being carried on steel girders which are encased with moulded stucco work forming the ceiling into panels; while the pilasters supporting these girders divide the wall surface into similar panels, in which are places great triple mullioned windows, while those on the opposite wall will afford spaces for appropriate mural paintings. The stage, flanked by ample rooms of generous size, is placed on the northern end, while a gallery runs across the opposite end. The stage is raised 3½ feet above the floor of the auditorium from which it is separated by a richly moulded proscenium arch. It is fitted with "Border" and "Foot" lights, etc., and easily gives room for a chorus of two hundred and fifty persons. The gallery is for the use of the community and is entered by a private corridor on the first floor; it will seat one hundred and sixty-five. The auditorium proper will seat six hundred. The floor from the front of the stage to line of gallery front is level (to allow for social purposes) while the rear portion rises so as to give an unobstructed view of the stage. The entrance for the public is from Breadalbane Street through a beautifully moulded doorway of Indiana limestone, which leads into a vestibule 16 feet wide by 45 feet, on the right of which are cloak and reception rooms and on the left the auditorium, and so arranged that those entering or leaving do not mingle or come in contact with the intimates of a convent or academy. During the day the auditorium is lighted with a softened and mellowed light flowing through the tinted cathedral glass of the great windows, while at night it is illumined by numerous electric lamps effectively placed on the ceiling and walls.

The floors throughout the building are of hard maple waxed and polished. Hard wood has been used for all internal wood work—doors, doorframes, wainscoting, casings, etc. Electricity is used for lighting, to which special attention has been given so as to cause little or no damage to the eyes of pupils. The fixtures are of brushed brass of special design. Thorough ventilation is obtained by means of a fan driven by electricity, which delivers to every room pure air warmed to the proper temperature and in sufficient volume, while the vitiated air is drawn off through ventilation in the roof. The plumbing and other sanitary arrangements are of the very best. The floors and walls of the toilet rooms are laid with white enamelled tiles; the partition separating the fixtures are polished pink Tennessee Marble, while the fixtures, such as basins, sinks, etc., are of the best vitreous ware.

The heating is by direct steam. In order to eliminate all danger, noise and dust it was decided to erect a central plant which would furnish heat both to the new and old buildings. A new boiler house was built in another part of the grounds and the boiler pumps, hot water heater, filter, etc., placed therein. A subway of concrete connects the buildings and through it are run the steam and water mains, electric conduit, etc. The design of the exterior is late English Gothic, modified to suit present day requirements. It is simple, severe and dignified, and, while harmonizing with the other buildings, it tells at once from its old associations with Catholic Education that religion and science are taught therein. Cream colored bricks are used in the walls and Indiana limestone for the trimmings, such as sill coarses, doorways, copings, etc. The roofs are carried on steel trustees and are covered with black slate. The whole of the works have been done in the most thorough manner and reflect credit on the various contractors. The plans, etc., were furnished by Mr. A. A. Post, Architect, under whose very capable and constant supervision the works were carried out.

The splendid programme was artistically and effectively carried out. The choral singing was faultless in its intonation, expression and finish. The final beauty and brilliancy of the lovely part song by eight young ladies was much admired, as was also Miss Croteau's vocal solo "La Vision de Ste. Cecile." The beautiful salutatory, read with perfect modulation and tender feeling by Miss Coghlan, was in the nature of a welcome to the Alumnae. As each exquisite paragraph fell from the reader's lips, there was no doubt of the living lessons it conveyed to pure and true womanhood, while mingled with its "welcomes" was struck the minor chord of sorrow for "one who left us but one short month ago, our reverend Archbishop, who dug the first sod for the building he was not destined to enter; the Shepherd who so loved the little lambs of his flock, the kindly Father.

"Who laboring long and patiently aweary grew at last,
Then sank to rest so silently we scarcely knew he had passed."

As the lists of honors and prizes were read by the Misses Isabel Cassidy and Olga Wallace, the stage was a perfect dream of loveliness—tier upon tier crowded with youth and beauty to receive upon the last schoolday, the well-merited awards of the scholastic year.
