PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMON.

Thieves in Paradise—Text: "Verily I Say Unto Thee To-day, Thou Shalt Be With Me in Paradise." (Luke xxiii, 43).

SEATTLE, Wash., July 25.—Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, addressed the Bible Students' Convention twice to-day. We publish one of his addresses as follows:

The theology which came down to us from the dark ages was wonderful in its extremes. It pictured divine wrath as unsatisfied with anything short of an eternity of torture for the sinner, and in the next breath assured us of a divine mercy which would take the vilest sinners to an eternity of glory without character development, merely at their request. One would suppose that neither of these doctrines could command support amongst reasoning intelligent people, but they do; and the only explanation of the matter is that by reason of the fall the balance of human judgment, on moral questions particularly, is sadly undone. It is fair, however, to suppose that the majority of intelligent people have never so much as given these subjects consideration. Receiving them thru the various creeds from childhood's hour, they have swallowed them without reflection, taught that to doubt them would bring the doubters under the ban of divine displeasure, and make sure that divine mercy should never reach them.

It is difficult to measure the bad results which have flown from the misinterpretation of our text. (1) The divine character and government have thereby been traduced and measurably brought into contempt as unphilosophical, unreasonable, arbitrary, instead of wise and just. Two vagabonds gambled and quarreled, drew their revolvers and shot each other. The more contemptible of the two killed his antagonist instantly, while he himself lingered in consciousness for a few minutes, during which he had opportunity to say, "God be merciful to me a sinner." The creeds of Protestantism tell us that the one who used the magical words was instantly ushered to heavenly glory and companionship with the pure and holy thruout eternity. The other, we are told, tho less vile, went instantly to eternal torture and despair, without a single ray of hope.

Is it any wonder that such unreasonable conclusions have driven many of the brighter minds of Protestantism unto infidelity, and led others back to the teachings of the Church of Rome, which, to say the least, is more consistent, in that it would put both of the culprits into "Purgatory," where after centuries of torture and instruction in righteousness they might be prepared, either or both of them, for heavenly glory. We are not advocating either infidelity or Romanism; we are defending the Bible, but incidentally must admit that our Protestant views of some portions of Holy Writ have been very unsatisfactory and very baneful.

(2) Who can measure the evil effects of this doctrine upon thousands, leading them to believe that whatever their crime, a few magical words of repentance will straighten it all out? Can it be doubted that this wrong theory is accountable for much of the wickedness committed by those who know better, who reside in civilized lands? First of all they doubt the doctrine of eternal torment, being unable to imagine how any one could burn forever and yet not be destroyed Secondly, if there be such a place of eternal torment, they reason, it is quite improbable that they will die so suddenly as not to have time to offer a petition for mercy—a petition which, if offered, will surely be heard and answered, and bring them to the regions of the blest.

The further reasoning is, that while heaven is certainly desirable, it is useless to seek it via the strait gate and narrow way and self-sacrificing experiences of Jesus and the apostles and all the saints. The reasoning is, that these saintly ones may indeed occupy a higher position in heaven than those who are saved after a life of sin and carelessness by a momentary prayer in the dying hour; but the philosophizing is, that the pleasures of sin for a season more than compensate for the higher glory of the saints, since even the sinners are to get to paradise at the small cost of nine words—the supposed teaching of our text.

Before proceeding to discuss the principles involved as between the right and the wrong interpretation of our Lord's words, let us notice what He really did say and really did mean and how it happened the true meaning was lost sight of and the erroneous one adopted generally. The Bible teaching that "the dead know not anything," together with the doctrine that the resurrection of the dead is the divine provision, has long been lost sight of. Our Lord's own words that "No man hath ascended up to heaven" have been overlooked, and so has His teaching respecting His kingdom—that the blessing of the church and of the world await His second coming, when He will establish His kingdom under the whole heavens in power and great glory. Losing sight of these truths has led directly to the acceptance of the general error respecting our text.

Let us begin the investigation by noting what the dying thief requested. He had heard his companion berating our Lord, saying, "If thou be Messiah, save thyself and us." He had sufficient character to realize the dishonesty of classifying our Lord with evil doers. He spoke up, reproving his companion; and then turned to Jesus, and, as a reward, asked, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." He did not ask to be remembered in heaven, nor that day, but when our Lord, who was then being crucified, should attain to His kingdom.

As the thief's request was a reasonable one, our Lord's answer was no less reasonable. He said, in the words of our text, Verily (truly) I say unto thee to-day (this day of my agony and rejection by Israel, and crucifixion by the Roman soldiers; this day, when I seem to be an imposter and not at all the Messiah; nevertheless, truly I tell you to-day) thou shalt be with me in paradise. I do not tell you when you shall be with me, nor have you even asked me to tell you. You have asked to be remembered when I come into my kingdom, when I shall have fully taken control of the kingdom under the whole heavens, when the speedy result will be the that entire world will boome a paradise, and you have asked my assurance that you will be there, and I will remember you as requested.

It will be noticed that this different interpretation makes necessary the changing of the comma from before "to-day" to after it. We remark that the punctuation of our text was surely not inspired, for punctuation was not invented until centuries after our Bible was written. Our intepretation with the comma after "to-day" makes this entire passage reasonable and harmonious—consistent with all the remainder of the Bible, and logical.

Further, be it remembered that Jesus was not in paradise on the day He died; nor has paradise lost yet been restored. Jesus was dead, and St. Peter declares He "arose from the dead on the third day." He then declared to Mary, "I have not yet ascended to my Father and to your Father, to my God and to your God (John xx., 17).

As a matter of fact, the other thief also will be in paradise. All mankind, redeemed by our Lord's sacrifice, will have the privilege of the millennial blessings. As we read, "All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth." The church will come forth to the heavenly glory and condition, for which they have been prepared by the trials, the disciplines, the lessons, the chiselings, the polishings of this present life. Theirs will be the instantaneous change, or resurrection, from earthly to heavenly conditions. Those of the spirit-begotten ones, all who wilfully walk after the flesh and not after the Spirit, having had their trial in the present life, will be accounted worthy of the second death. All the remainder of mankind, not having come to a knowledge of the truth, not having incurred, therefore, the responsibility of this age, will come forth during the millenium when Messiah's kingdom shall be established and His rule of righteousness shall have brought the earth to the condition of paradise. Both of these thieves, and all other, thieves and all other evil doers, all of the heathen, all who have not in the present life come to a clear knowledge of the truth, and sinned against light, against the holy spirit, will be there—there to be blessed, to be enlightened, to be brought to a knowledge of the truth, and if they will to be helped out of ignorance, superstition, sin, weaknesses—mental, moral and physical.

The attaining of eternal life will not be a matter of luck, but a matter of character. It is true at the present time that chance, or luck, would seem to be associated with many of our affairs, except as we are able to view them in the light of divine revelation. Some of us were fortunate to be better born than others—born of religious parents. Some are fortunate in being born in religious communities, and in a land of liberty and enlightenment. Some are unfortunate in being born in heathen lands, of heathen parentage, etc. But the Scripture shows that during this present time God is exercising His sovereign power in electing a special class of special characters, and assures us that a majority of these are being called from amongst the mixed peoples of Europe and America, and that proportionately few are being gathered from other nationalities.

If all of the non-elect were consigned to eternal torment, or even to purgatory, a grave injustice would be chargeable against the Almighty Elector. But this is not the case. The Lord is no respector of persons, but is taking out from the world of mankind, from every nation, those with suitable characters, those upon whom His truth and grace exercise a transforming influence. The non-elect, not worthy of a blessing amongst the faithful of the first class now being selected, pass at death to the tomb, to the prison house of sheol, hades, where there is no wisdom, knowledge nor device, as the Scriptures declare (Ecclesiastes ix., 10). Altho unworthy of a share in the blessings now being dispensed, God's love and mercy pursue after these thru Christ, and in their interest the millenial kingdom will be established. Under its domination Satan will be bound, every influence of evil will be restrained, and every good influence will be brought into captivity, to the intent that all those at present non-elect, and unworthy of the present salvation, may be brought to a savable condition thru the rewards and punishments (judgments) of the millenial age. The result of the purifying influences of that time upon the willing and obedient will be full human perfection and the reward of everlasting life in paradise restored—world-wide, under the whole heaven. The result to the unwilling who will resist God's grace and merciful provisions will be eternal death—extinction—the second death—gehenna (Revelation xx., 14, 15).

The Bible, in harmony with sanctified common sense, teaches that character is a prerequisite of divine favor and eternal life. Whoever is called during this gospel age and fails to develop character, will fail to attain the reward of life eternal. Similarly, in the world's trial time, or day of judgment, the millennial age, character will be the test. All the influences of the great kingdom of Messiah will be exercised with a view to the development of character, and only those properly exercised thereby will get the reward of earthly life eternal.

The question properly arises here, What kind or character will meet with the divine aproval and be granted the reward of life everlasting? We answer that God has but one standard, which is fully set forth in the Scriptures. The law of God is the standard. That law standard is, "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy mind, with all thy being, with all thy strength, and thy neighbor as thyself." As our Redeemer testified, on these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets; all the divine blessings and promises and covenants are to those who develop the character here described.

DEATH LIST TOTALS 41

Two Millions Property Loss in Texas Hurricane.

NEW ORLEANS, July 24.—With definite reports to-day of thirteen additional deaths as the result of the hurricane in Texas and Louisiana Wednesday, the death list to-night totals 41. Also six previously reported are still unaccounted for.

Despatches to-day from Angleton, Texas, confirmed the report that Maurice P. Wolfe, his wife, six children and negro servant had been drowned at Christmas Bayou.

While the various towns and cities which suffered damage in the hurricane have reported property losses aggregating in the latest reports over $2,000,000, the absence of crop damage makes impossible anything like a correct measure of the total damage.

91st to Play.

The Hamilton Steamboat Co. has engaged the 91st Highlanders' Band to play on the afternoon trip of the Modjeska again next Wednesday. That these afternoon concerts are being appreciated by the patrons of the Hamilton steamers is evidenced by the large numbers who are taking advantage of the trips. Modjeska will leave Yonge-street wharf at 5.30; back at 11. Tickets are on sale for the trip at 50 cents.

Balloonists Collide.

NEWTON, Ill., July 24.—During a balloon race here to-day, Clarence Duncan and Roy Eastman, both of Vincennes, collided in the air. They had just cut loose from their balloons, which probably saved their lives, as they were about 2000 feet above the earth. Eastman's leg was badly crushed.

KINGSTON OLD BOYS

Thousand From Toronto Welcomed by Home City.

KINGSTON, July 25.—(Special.)—Old boys and girls from Toronto, with their friends, to the number of about a thousand, arrived Saturday night and are in possession of the city. There were two trains, one arriving at 8.30 and the other coming in 20 minutes later.

The weather was cloudy with a few scattered showers, but in spite of this several hundred people gathered to welcome the visitors, and as the train arrived the Kilties' Band played Home, Sweet Home.

Mayor Couper and members of the council extended an official welcome.

The weather to-day was fine and warm and many enjoyed the trip among the Thousand Islands. In the churches special services were held for the old boys and girls.

Monday is Kingston's civic holiday and the home guard will join with the visitors in sports at the athletic grounds. Two hundred Ottawa old boys came down to join in the festivities.

Will Prosecute Chong.

Chinamen, over 150 in number, meeting in the Chee Kung Tong Club house, at 192 York-street, have organized their society under the supervision of their counsel, Louis Heyd.

Four years ago Joseph Pang, prominent in connection with the Chinese Masonic Societies, went around and collected enough money from the Chinese of Toronto to build the club house. A charter was secured under the Friendly Societies Act, but outside of appointing the first trustees, the society was not organized.

Not long ago Aung Chong borrowed $300 on the property by putting a mortgage on it. When this was found out it was decided to organize and prosecute Chong. They also decided to serve notice on 25 Chinamen who live at the club, but who do not work.
