The hand that rocks the cradle IS the hand that rules the world

The hand that rocks the cradle is usually the hand that does the buying of household necessities and luxuries. The head of the house in most cases cannot attend to these matters, and leaves them to the really superior judgment of his wife. She shops around and generally knows very quickly where she prefers to buy her

A December Sale.
Many people when they hear the words "special sale" shrug their shoulders with incredulity.
Perhaps they are not to blame. The "great clearing sale regardless of prices" and the "selling under cost" business has been over-done.
Our Position is This:
The season has been unusually warm—too warm to create much of a demand for heavy goods, and we have a very large stock of this class of goods on hand. It will pay us better to make some sacrifice of profit than to carry them over; therefore, we are prepared to make generous reductions in all departments of winter goods.
We will commence this sale Saturday morning.
A Bit of Counsel.
Don't buy Flannels, Underwear, Dress Goods, Mantle Cloths, Ready-made Mantles, Etc., until you see our stock and get our reduced prices. It will mean money in your pocket.

MCINTOSH MILLS.

MONDAY, Dec. 14.—Mr. John Coby is home again. He has been working for Mr. McNish of Lyn. We are pleased to have John in our midst.

Ira Mallory is about to move to Elbe Mills. We have learned that he has rented and is to take possession of the mills on the 15th. We are sorry to part with Ira and everybody joins in wishing him success.

Some of the farmers have commenced ploughing again.

FRONT OF YONGE.

MONDAY, Dec. 14.—Our municipal election racket so far this fall is very tame.

We notice this winter that the old horse dirge is "poor old horse let him die to the dogs, let him go."

Mr. William Wilson of Caintown is doing a good trade in apples this fall. He buys them from farmers and ships them north to Newboro, Smith's Falls and Westport.

Mr. Thomas Flood of Waxford sold all his farming utensils last week and will return to the McIntosh Mills and resume his trade, which is that of a blacksmith.

Mr. Alexander Tennant of Junetown has rented the farm of Mr. Z. Purvis, who is now in California, for a term of two years. Mr. Purvis will be absent for three months.

We have had the crow, the blackbird, the robbin and the black squirrel, playing and fluttering in the bush, all of which forcibly reminds one of spring.

Mr. Joseph Hall of Junetown is making many improvements on his extensive farm. He has erected this fall a large and commodious drive barn 50x80 feet. This is all nicely clapboarded and lined with felt.

MALLORYTOWN.

MONDAY, Dec. 14.—The boys are fervently praying for sleighing. May their prayers be speedily answered.

Mr. Arthur Monroe has started a photograph gallery and the work executed by him will compare favorably with that turned out by any establishments in the neighboring towns.

The social given by the members of the Epworth League on Friday evening last passed off very pleasantly. Refreshments were served by the young ladies after which the meeting was called to order by the chairman, Mr. Chas. Service, and an excellent programme was furnished by members of the League.

Mr A. W. Mallory lost a fine horse one day last week. While driving slowly along the road it stopped suddenly and on examination it was found that one fore leg was broken above the knee.

T. M. Purvis, V. S., Belleville, is spending a few days in town visiting friends and relatives.

Earl Bros. of Lansdowne are still in this section with their steam thresher.

NEWBORO.

MONDAY, Dec. 14.—The farmers are ploughing again.

On account of the warm weather and high winds the lakes are open again.

The Annual will be a success this year as new members are being daily admitted.

The joyful sound of wedding bells is distintly heard on Drummond St. I suppose it means better times.

The female population have plunged into civil war.

The assembly held in the barrack on the evening of the 12th was a a howling success. Ez is the stuff to manage affairs of that kind, on account of long experience.

A series of violin exercises will be given this week at Medical Hall by M. Pear, late from Michigan. This will be a treat only met with in a life time in the back country. All lovers of music should not fail to put in an appearance. Doors open at half past eight. Performance to last only one hour.

The Sunday school children of the different denominations are busily preparing for the Christmas concerts shortly to take place in our midst.

Mr. Patrick Fahey has returned home from the high seas, after putting in a successful season.

From another Correspondent.

MONDAY, Dec. 14.—We regret to chronicle the loss of one of our esteemed citizens Mr. Willard Lee. Willard quietly came among us last summer, from Westport, where he did an extensive business in horses, rigs, etc. He was always anxious to keep the stone rolling and lost no opportunity to engage in any enterprise that would put an honest dollar in his pocket. Being a gentleman of unusual foresight, he was probably the first to "catch on" to the declining boom, so he immediately disposed of his property and removed to Newboro. Being of an independent and retiring disposition, he was looked upon as "high toned" by a certain class who are ever ready to chum in with the latest arrival; but on a more intimate acquaintance this delusion quickly dies away,—with others, his business caused a few enemies and luke warm friends, which is nothing more than occurs to all business men. Our loss will be Portland's gain, and it is to be hoped he will find the strangers he has gone among a little more friendly and homogeneous than those he has left behind.

Morgan Pear of Oklahoma is in town. He is a dealer in violins, plug hats and plug tobacco in the Indian Territory.

Elija Bedor living near Bedford Mills was shot and killed last week by the premature discharge of a gun, while he was engaged in loading it. His remains were placed in R. O. Leggett's vault on Friday.

One of the young men who attended the party on Wednesday night appears to be somewhat dissatisfied with the affair in general. The magnet of his affections is evidently lessening its power of attraction and another man is getting the inside track. Education forms the human mind but education does not necessadily win, so cheer up, old boy, and I'll see you through.

The ball in the warehouse on Saturday night was all that could be desired. The evening being "just lovely," the gents were out in full force. The soul-stirring strains of the Arkansas Traveller, played in G. Minor inspired them with an apparently supernatural energy, and they tipped the time with a precision and seriousness that was simply demoniacal. As each became incapacitated by over-exertion he betook himself to the coal-bunker where in a very short time the weary reveler was darker than his bed of diamonds. Every guest thus "knocked out" had to have his face washed before he could be identified. Even "Chollie" kept time to the Irish Washwoman just the same as if there had been no camp meeting in the place for 100 years. The music was furnished by Morgan in that sublime and inimitable style so peculiarly his own and which proved so captivating at the residence of Jane Cain. After they "came too" and got acquainted once more, the oracle was consulted as to where they would meet again. It answered, "at Whalen's, Clear Lake, on Tuesday night."

Mr. Wells of Delta has taken charge of the bakery business lately managed by James Trousdale, who has gone to Harrowsmith where he thinks pastures are always green.

Mr. J. R. Wight has suspended work on his building on the corner of Harlem and Drummond for this season. He intends pushing the work to a finish when the robins sing again.

Mr. Mckian lost his gate the other night. "Midnight assassins," I understand, will have to shoulder the blame.

FRANKVILLE.

FRIDAY, Dec. 11.—The members of the Sabbath school are preparing for their annual Christmas tree.

Rev. Dr. Saunders of the Wall st. church, Brockville, preached a missionary sermon here last Sunday morning to a large congregation from 2nd chap. Gal., 20th verse.

On Tuesday last, Dec. 8th, Mrs. Hesekiah Brown, one of the oldest residents of the township of Kitley, passed over to the silent majority. Mrs. Brown was in her 81st year, was born in Ireland and came to this country when about 14 years old, and since that time has continuously resided in this vicinity. She was the mother of six children. Those living are Mrs. Wm. Wood of Morion; Mrs. Thos. Gilson of Collingwood; Warner and Wellinton of Michigan and Wesley, who lives at home. Rev. A. A. Radley preached the funeral sermon from 1st Samuel xx. 3.

Mr. J. B. Leverette of Brockville spent Sunday with friends here.

The Conservative voters' list got a bad shaking up on Friday last, Judge Reynolds acting very fair with both parties.

DEER HUNTING OUT NORTH.

Ye Scribe of the Reporter Recounts His Many and Varied Experiences While Hunting for Game in the Wilderness.

The Machine Agent went to the lake to which the canoe had been taken, the Rabbitt Hunter to the Narrows, the Historian to an island in the same lake, while the Fox Hunter, Butcher Boy and the Smith took up positions on runways upon the hills, and Josiah let loose the dogs. A Canny Scott named McKenzie and his son had come into the lake on hunting intent and also stationed themselves at the Narrows. About ten o'clock the deep baying of the hounds gave indications that game had been started, and all parties were on the lookout. The Historian from his point of observation saw a fine large doe take to the water at the lower end of the lake and swim across a small bay and again take to the hills on a direct line for the watchers at the Narrows. Although the distance was fully half a mile, the game could be clearly discerned as it sprang from rock to rock on its onward flight. As the island watcher could do nothing towards capturing the game, he concluded to put the other party on their guard and commenced to shout "Look out there!" "look out!" They dropped the thread of the naratives they were unraveling as well as their guns, and started towards a point a few rods higher up the hills which commanded a better view of the lake. Instead of looking to the runway on land they were intently gazing at the Historian who was waving his hands and still shouting "Look out!" suddenly the doe emerged in front of them and not more than three rods away. The Historian was uncharitable enough to divulge to the rest of the party at the supper table that evening that he could distinctly see the three men tumbling over one another in their eagerness to reach the spot where the guns were stored. The frightened and hunted doe stood looking on until they reached the vicinity of the firearms when she gave her tail a gentle wave which seemed to say "ta, ta, I'll see you later," turned and fled on the back track. Whether it was in hopes that a stray bullet might possibly reach the retreating game, or to remove the stigma of allowing a deer to stand for fully two or three minutes within as many rods of them, that the men began firing, some of them in an entirely different direction from that taken by the doe, the Historian was never able to find out; but certain it is that when he reached the spot where the men were standing, he found them vainly endeavoring to account to one another for their stupidness in allowing such a fine opportunity to escape of securing the game. The Historian had a good joke on them by pointing out the appearance of the ground on arrival. In their haste to get to their guns they had partially diverted themselves of their superabundant clothing. The line of Napoleon's celebrated retreat from Moscow did not furnish more convincing proof of his haste to get away than did the ground over which the party sped for their fire arms. An overcoat here, a pair of mittens there, and a muffler in another place, while logs were displaced, rocks loosened and bushes bent down and trampled in the ground. It was nearly dark when the party all got to camp and the broad smile that lit up the Machine Agent's face, as he swung himself down the trail towards camp, indicated that he, at least, was pleased with his day's work. In answer to the eager enquiries of the party, he informed them that dame fortune had smiled on him that day and that he had two fine carcases hung up on the shore of the lake. He recounted the events of the day with an animation born of success. The first deer was shot soon after his reaching the lake, and seemed to be a clear case of offering itself for sacrifice, as there did not appear to be any dogs in pursuit. The last one was observed coming down an incline to the water, followed by the hoarse bark of "Jumbo." When near the shore a couple of curs struck in on the trail, evidently put on track by a party who were on the lookout for game on the sly. Two rifles cracked simultaneously shortly after the animal struck the water and the birch bark with the agent glided out and towed the dead animal to his landing place on the opposite side of the bay. A demand to surrender the game was hallooed over to him from the main shore, which was treated with silent contempt. Soon a skiff containing two hunters was observed in the offing, and the demand was more forcibly and pointedly made. The Agent was alone but his pluck and just right to the venison made him equal to the occasion. He pointed out to the other men the form of Jumbo on the other shore and charged them with putting their dogs on the track between the deer and his dogs in order to steal a march on him. They stormed, threatened, and finally jumped on shore and laid hands on the carcase, to put it in their boat, but in language more pointed than polite the Agent told them to attempt to remove the animal at their peril. The two men told the Agent and party to leave the vicinity, as they hunted there for years and would brook no interference with their "vested rights." The Agent sneeringly enquired if they owned the country roundabout, intimating at the same time that he, too, had done some hunting on the same ground and water and considered his rights equal to theirs at least. Seeing they could not browbeat the Agent into giving up the dead deer, they offered to compromise the matter, by making an agreement to allow each party to hold all the game shot no matter whose dog was running it. This proposition was also rejected, and warning given that if anything of a like nature as putting dogs between his dog and the deer occurred again they would not get off with a whole hide. That night after tea, the route for the morrow was laid out, and when the cloth had been removed and all the party except Josiah and the Historian (who did not indulge) had retired to the smoking room for the evening, Josiah being in a talkative mood, was requested to relate some of his many hunting adventures on former trips to the wild woods.

McIntosh Mills.

A correspondent sends us a letter this week re McIntosh Mills school affairs, the gist of which is as follows: Through the influence of a couple of ratepayers a public meeting was held on the 8th inst. to investigate matters connected with the building of the new school house. F. Fortune was elected chairman. By request the secretary of the board read the accounts dating from the year 1888, and when the chairman asked the audience if they believed them to be correct, they answered "yes." The trustees were invited to address the meeting and D. C. McClary and John Leeder responded, defending their course as trustees. A vote of thanks was tendered to the secretary of the board, and on motion the meeting adjourned till the annual school meeting.
