THE C. P. INVESTIGATION.

WARDEN MASSIE AGAIN IN THE WITNESS BOX.

Evidence as to Obscene Language Regarding Nunneries—The Case About to Close.

At the Central prison investigation yesterday John Hague testified that he had visited the prison as a grand juror last year and had found everything in a satisfactory condition. The food was good and the prisoners seemed to be contented.

William Bradt, foreman for Brandon & Company in the paint shop at the prison, denied using the obscene language about nunneries that he had been charged with using by prisoners Kelly and Haselin. He had merely said there was "a number of fine-looking young women in convents who ought to be outside."

Prisoner Alexander Macdonald corroborated Bradt's statement.

License inspector Awde swore that he could not remember who had given him the information about the bad meat which he had seized in Park's warehouse in July 1883. The meat had been spoiled in the pickling.

Warden Massie recalled, said that the instructions given the guards are never to report a man unless it is absolutely necessary. The guards first report the prisoner and on the second offence the warden looks into the man's previous record at the prison. He thus very soon got a knowledge of the man's character. The warden is not always informed as to the time of the inspector's visit. Sometimes when the inspector has not finished his work he says, "I will be back to morrow." The punishments were all entered in the punishment book at first, but they soon became so numerous that he adopted the system of filing printed punishment cards. The warden gave his version of the alleged excessive punishment of certain prisoners, in most cases directly contradicting their evidence, and characterizing them as incorrigibly bad men. In regard to the Fay case, he said that on investigation it was understood that the theft of the extra ration of bread by Fay was premeditated, for the purpose of raising a disturbance. The surgeon testified to Fay's fitness to undergo the punishment, and was present during the administration of the lashes. Five of the twenty strokes were remitted by the warden on Fay's promising to behave himself properly in future. After the lashes were given Fay's back was not cut, and he immediately went to work of his own accord. He is now in the Central on another charge and under a different name, and is a well-behaved prisoner. In regard to the removal of pictures from the cells, Mr. Massie said that obscene pictures had been discovered on the backs of the frames and that consequently he had ordered them to be taken away. The rosaries and crucifixes were all left in the cells.

The prisoner McCarthy, who claims to have had a secret understanding with the warden, desired to become a sort of prison spy, but the warden would have nothing to do with him.

Mr. Massie's counsel expect to finish the evidence for the defence either to-day or to-morrow.

The U. S. Consul at Toronto.

From the New York World.

The other day Secretary Bayard flew into a great rage during an interview with two Missouri congressmen, Stone and Hurd. They called upon him for the purpose of asking him to give western Missouri some representation in the diplomatic service. They presented the name of a prominent democrat and urged his appointment upon the ground that the party in western Missouri had not yet received any notice. Mr. Bayard at this flew into a great rage. He said: "I appointed not long ago one W. C. Wagner, of Kansas City, consul at Toronto, Canada." Both congressmen said that they had never heard of the gentleman, and that if he were a democrat not one of the party workers in that state was aware of it. Their statement of fact was given in the quietest possible way, but it only seemed to increase Mr. Bayard's rage. He became furious. He said that it was perfectly shameful the way the heads of departments in Washington were imposed upon. An entire community would apparently indorse a man, then every individual of that community would swear afterwards that he had never heard of the man he had indorsed. He then sent out for the papers of Wagner, and he was chagrined to find that he had always lived in Buffalo, but had been employed for a short time as clerk in the railroad office in Kansas City. He was backed by Buffalo and railroad influences. The two Missouri congressmen grinned when Mr. Wagner's Missouri record was produced.

Newspapers and Politics.

Editor World: In your issue of Aug. 18 in a short article on the late editorials of the Mail you say: "Neither wholesale vilification nor snobbish depreciation of opponents is called for in Canada." I am sorry I am unable to agree with you. I fear that a large proportion of the population of Canada gives its hearty support to those evils. If the conservatives disapproved of the tone of many of the editorials of the Mail, it is to their credit that they did so, but did any person ever yet hear of the grit who felt ashamed of the abusive language held by the Toronto Globe and the London Advertiser towards their opponents? It is said the editors of those papers are brothers. They are certainly kindred spirits. The writer never yet looked over either of those journals just mentioned that her sense of justice was not offended by the vile epithets heaped upon the conservatives. Your paper, I believe, Mr. Editor, is conducted upon the principle of strict impartiality and fair play to all, which is my excuse for the above.

The Island Roller Rink.

The Island roller rink last night was a scene of gaiety. Over one hundred couples appeared on the floor in costume at the masquerade and fancy dress carnival. Every one present, both skaters and spectators, enjoyed themselves, and were very much pleased with the performance of Prof. McKinney of Rhode Island, who will appear every evening for the balance of the week and Saturday matinee. His marvelous feat of jumping over sixteen chairs is something never before witnessed on roller skates.

Where Women Gamble.

New York Letter to Philadelphia News.

There are seven gambling places in the city into which none but females are admitted. All of them are operated by men, whose wives or mistresses assist them in receiving their patrons. There may be many more, but these seven I know of. One on Fourteenth street is back of a very fashionable modiste's store, run by Hugh Simmons and Helen Davenport. This is patronized by the middle class. Another on Lexington avenue, not far from Twenty-sixth street, is a very quiet game, presided over by Phil Bloodgood and his wife, and so on down to one in Thompson street, run by a man named Sheekey, which is for the lowest class. The most aristocratic one is on Sixth avenue above Thirty-fifth street, run in the interest of John Perkins and Nora Brooks, who own the one for gentlemen on West Thirty-fourth street. Even young misses scarcely 17 years of age are welcomed here. The game is only played in the daytime. Hardly two years ago the wife of a prominent civil lawyer, whose office is in Wall street and who lived in comfort and luxury on Madison avenue, near Forty-first street, became so infatuated with this game that after pawning all her jewelery and rich garments during the absence of her husband, who was arguing the case in the Supreme court in Washington, sent her baby and nurse to her sister's, at White Plains, to spend the day, and then deliberately sold all her household furniture to play. She lost, confessed to her husband, who attempted to regain the money from Mrs. Perkins, but she was obstinate, consulted a prominent firm of criminal lawyers on Centre street, and the unfortunate husband, fearful of a public scandal, dropped the matter. This is not an isolated case.

Before the surrogate not long ago a contested will case was being tried, a daughter being the contestor, and evidence was adduced showing that she had lost nearly $6000 in this and other games in two years, and her father, knowing it, had simply left in trust for her use during lifetime a sum of money, the interest of which was to be paid to her every month.

The Death of Princess Second.

From the Baltimore Sun.

Mrs. Samuel M. Shoemaker has lost by death from inflammation of the lungs the world renowned cow Princess Second, which astonished the world by giving in seven days a yield of forty six pounds and ten and a half ounces of butter. The test of her butter qualities was completed April 10, 1885. Some time after the test the blankets were taken off rather suddenly, it is thought, and she took a cold, from which she never recovered. She was a magnificent animal, of great vitality and force, as well as a fine butter producer. One of the secrets of her immense yields of butter was her great vitality and appetite. During the very height of the test, when she was fed as large quantities of butter-producing food as it was thought she could safely bear, she broke loose one night and consumed over 200 pounds of prepared food in a box in the stable. About two years ago Mrs. Shoemaker refused $25,000 for her. She was 8 years and 6 months old when she died. She was an imported cow, and was bought at auction in New York for $4800. She was of the celebrated Coomassie strain. Her last calf was sold during an absence from home of Mrs. Shoemaker for $10,000, but the sale did not stand, Mrs. Shoemaker refusing to ratify it on her return.
