YORK COUNTY AND SUBURBS

Notice to Toronto Railway Co. to Remove Woodbine Avenue Tracks Expires To-Morrow.

SOME TROUBLE IS CONTEMPLATED.

Storm Paralyzes Suburban Street Car Service—Reception to a Strathcona at Junction.

Toronto Junction, March 13.—Pte. H. H. Scott of Strathcona's Horse surprised his friends and relatives by turning up to-day. It had been reported that he would go thru to the point of enlistment; but this appears to have been a mistake. Trooper Scott was born at Lambton Mills, and will stay around the Junction and at Lambton for a month before going west. The committee appointed by the Town Council to arrange a reception met this evening, and decided upon holding the public demonstration in Kilburn Hall on Saturday evening. Besides the medal which he wears on his breast, and which was given him by King Edward VII., fresh laurels are in store for him on Saturday night in the form of a gold watch and an illuminated address. Mayor Armstrong will occupy the chair; speeches will be given by Capt. Ross, A. Campbell, J. W. St. John and others, and a program of patriotic solos and recitations will be furnished by local talent. Every effort is being put forth to make the reception a hearty one.

Rev. Mr. Jones of Royce-avenue Baptist Church will preach a funeral sermon upon the death of the late Mrs. Kennedy next Sunday morning.

Rev. Rocco addressed a fair-sized audience in St. John's Schoolhouse to-night, in which he gave a history of his conversion and why he left the Church of Rome. Rev. Rocco is working in the Italian mission in Toronto.

To-day's storm was the most severe of the season for the Suburban Electric Railway, the drifts in some places being very deep. Men are working to-night, and by to-morrow it is expected the Weston and Lambton lines will be open.

North Toronto.

Reeve Duncan contemplates trouble with the Toronto Railway Company over the tracks on Woodbine-avenue. The notice to the company to remove the tracks expires on Friday morning, when the township engineer is instructed to remove them, if the company fail to do so. Township Solicitor Bull has impressed the reeve with his idea of the outcome, which is a suit for damages, and a special meeting of the Council has been convened for Friday at 2 p.m.

Dr. Yu, a native Chinese missionary, entertained the Women's Missionary Society of the Eglinton Presbyterian Church at the manse yesterday afternoon with a talk on Chinese missionary efforts.

The Metropolitan Railway was disabled for a large portion of yesterday, owing to trouble with the machinery and drifting of snow along the road.

Mr. C. W. Lea of Leaside, an old student of socialistic problems, will lecture on the subject to-night at the Town Hall.

Newmarket.

Mr. J. D. McKay of The Express was away yesterday attending his father's funeral at Berlin. Mr. McKay's father died on Sunday last, at the advanced age of 84 years.

The final hockey match of the season will be played here to-night between the Newmarket team and Parkdale.

Cane's factory has again resumed work after an enforced closing down by reason of a broken shaft.

On Sunday next anniversary services will be held at the Methodist Church, the special preacher being Rev. W. J. Hunter, D.D., Ph.D., of Montreal.

The township of Whitchurch has collected every dollar of liability on the 1900 tax roll for the first time in 26 years, and it is doubtful if any other municipality in the province is so fortunately situated.

Figs and Thistles.

That which is false can never be scientific.

When we cast our cares on Him it does not mean our care for others.

Any fool can run the universe; the wise man is he who can run his own house.

One is not in the land of the living till he has passed from this world of the dying.

God's blessings come back to us in the baskets in which we send our gifts to others.

The buzzing of a fly in the meeting may make more trouble than the howling of a mob.

Every man bears his own burden, but not every one has the blessing of bearing another's.

God's pardon waits for your penitence, but his punishments will not have the same patience.

When our wills conflict with Christ it is poor policy to seek peace by casting out the peace-giver.

You will find an angel on the back of some cards, but you will find the devil on the front of them all.

Some people think to get heaven in their hearts and glory on their heads while their hands gather the pickings of hell.

It is generally believed that the expression "trumpet of the Lord" does not refer to the deacon who sleeps in the meeting. —Ram's Horn.

Other People's Money.

Mary Ann Phillips yesterday applied for power to administer the estate of her husband, Henry J. Phillips, brickmaker, who died leaving property worth $3950 and $3200 cash. Elizabeth Lyons, a widow, died last month, leaving $1798 cash, which she willed to her near relatives.

STRANGE MAN IN THE ROOM

Mrs. Martin and Her Daughter Had an Unpleasant Early Morning Experience.

OF COURSE THEY BOTH SCREAMED.

Constable Lawrence Heard and Captured George Kent, Who Told an Odd Story.

The terrors of a strange man in the room were experienced by Mrs. Martin and her daughter at Oulcott's Hotel, North Toronto, shortly after the clock struck 2 yesterday morning. The consequent thoughts of thieves and possible murderers surged thru the minds of the ladies as they mentally speculated on how much longer they had to spend in enjoyment of the beauties of North Toronto and adjacent places, and wondered whether the intruder carried a 38-calibre revolver, a 12-inch bowie knife, an ordinary bludgeon, or all three.

They were doubtless inclined to the latter belief, and with great presence of mind they both emitted violent screams, which floated thru the shaking window panes and took the wireless telegraphy route to the eager ears of the ever watchful Constable Lawrence, who, with all the natural instinct of an officer of the law, scented a knowledge of something wrong, and he repaired to the scene with a hop, step and a jump.

Constable Lawrence took charge of the intruder, and appeased the fears of the ladies. He spoke kindly, but firmly, to his captive, and asked him for his pedigree, for future reference.

The prisoner was quiet and apologetic. He explained that his name was Robert Kent, and in a naturally abashed way said that he came from Montreal. He explained further that he had been plunging in mining stocks, and could not explain his escapade unless his mind had become deranged as a result of his plunge.

The constable doubtless concluded that the man's mind must have been in the wrong place, or he would not have plunged in mining stocks, and with all the astuteness of a crime preventer he made further enquiries of his prisoner, which called forth the addresses of a number of friends in Montreal and Toronto.

Constable Lawrence took Mr. Kent before Mayor Davis, and a remand was made until to-day. In the meantime the man's story will be enquired into.

CITY DAIRY MILK.

All Are Invited to Visit the Company's Premises.

The announcement made in yesterday's issue with reference to the City Dairy Company's products, indicating, amongst other things, the decision of the company to sell clarified milk at the rate of 20 quart tickets for one dollar, will be found of interest to the people of this city. This company was formed for the purpose of supplying good, clean milk and cream to the citizens of Toronto at popular prices. All the modern appliances for doing the work scientifically and expeditiously are now in successful operation at the company's splendid plant on Spadina-crescent., which is admitted by the best milk experts in America to be the most perfectly equipped plant of its kind in the world. The building is open to the public during business hours every day, and the whole operation of clarifying, cooling and bottling may be seen through a glass partition surrounding the antiseptic milk room.

One feature of the company's plan of operation which will be much appreciated by the citizens relates to the inspection of farms. Dr. William Mole and Dr. F. J. Gallanough, two eminently qualified veterinary surgeons, have been employed by the company, and their whole time will be devoted towards inspecting the farms and the cattle where the milk is produced, thus ensuring a gradual improvement in the quality of milk as it is supplied from the country. The retail department at the dairy building is now open, and all the company's products may be purchased over the counter at the regular prices.

The company have adopted the plan of selling cream, based on definite percentages, and this only needs to be understood to be thoroughly appreciated. Three grades of cream are sold, guaranteed to contain not less than 16 per cent, 24 per cent. and 32 per cent. of butter fat respectively.

The order department is well equipped, and a large staff of young ladies is engaged all day receiving the orders as they come in over the telephone or otherwise, and distributing them amongst the different routes.

The Old Church at Ciudad Juarez.

From The Denver Post.

For ages there has the old bell hung,
Calling the brown-skinned devotees
With the wakening clang of its iron tongue
To meet their God on their bended knees,
The generations have come and gone,
Old cycles faded at new ones' dawn,
Yet the old bell ever swings on and on,
Tireless thru all the centuries.

The beggar in rags and sandals old,
The don in his jacket laced with gold,
The senorita with siren eyes,
The old senora in sombre guise,
The caballero in gaudy dress,
The young muchacha of raven tress,
Ever swinging,
Ever ringing
The old bell calls and along the street
The worshippers move on reverent feet
To the black-robed priest at the altar's side
With sins they'd confess and sins they would hide.

For ages there has the old bell hung
Calling the brown-skinned devotees
With the wakening clang of its iron tongue
To meet their God on their bended knees,
The generations have come and gone,
Old cycles faded at new ones 'dawn.
Yet the old bell ever swings on and on,
Tireless thru all the centuries.

Littleness.

A little bit of sorrow
And a little bit of fun;
A little bit of resting
And a little bit of run.

A little bit of laughter,
And a little bit of weep;
A little bit of waking
And a little bit of sleep.

A little bit of hoping
And a little bit of fear;
A little bit of lonesome
And a little bit of cheer.

Why be apprehensive
As to what the day may bring?
Where's the use of kicking
Over such a little thing?

ANOTHER GREAT AMERICAN GONE

ever, being indistinct. "Doctor" and "my lungs" were the only words understood. Almost the last words he uttered were addressed to his wife, of whom he inquired shortly before he became unconscious, if the doctors were present.

A Pathetic Incident.

One of the most pathetic incidents of the whole illness of the general occurred Tuesday before he became unconscious. The general's little daughter, Elizabeth, was brought into the sick-room for a few moments to see her father, and offered him a small apple pie, which she herself had made. Gen. Harrison smiled his recognition of the child, and her gift, but the effort to speak was too much, and he could do nothing more to express his appreciation. To-day all efforts to arouse the slowly dying man to consciousness failed, and he died without a word of recognition to any of those who surrounded his bedside.

The funeral will take place next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, of which General Harrison was a member for nearly fifty years.

THE NEWS AT WASHINGTON.

President McKinley Will Issue Usual Proclamations To-Day.

Washington, March 13.—Deep interest was exhibited in all of the executive departments thruout the day in the reports that came in as to the condition of ex-President Harrison. As office hours had closed for the day before the end came, the first official information regarding the death will be deferred until to-morrow, when, following precedents, President McKinley will issue his proclamation to the people, notifying them of General Harrison's death and setting out, in becoming terms, his virtues and characteristics. He also will order salutes to be fired at the various army posts the day of the funeral and on shipboard when the news is received. The Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy will send out special notices to soldiers and sailors conveying the President's directions in this matter.

Secretary of State Hay said: "The death of Mr Harrison is a national loss. Independent of the great official position he has held, he was a man of extraordinary mental capacity and activity. He was a true statesman, lawyer and orator, and he has left few men his equals behind him. In character, as well as abilities, he was a man of very unusual force and value."

Benjamin Harrison was born in 1833 at North Bend, near Cincinnati. He claimed descent from Commissioner Harrison, who signed the death warrant of Charles I. He was a great-grandson of Benjamin Harrison, one of the signers of the declaration of American independence, and a grandson of General W. H. Harrison, who was elected President of the United States in 1840, and died a month after his installation. He was educated at the Miami University, at Oxford, Ohio, where he graduated at the age of 18, and distinguished himself as an extempore speaker. He subsequently studied law in Cincinnati, in 1854 removed to Indiana, and in 1860 was elected reporter of the Supreme Court of that State. After the outbreak of the civil war he entered the 70th Indiana Regiment as colonel, and during the Atlanta campaign greatly distinguished himself. At the conclusion of the war he returned for a short time to his post in Indiana. He subsequently became a partner in a law firm. In 1880 he was elected Governor of Indiana, and in the following year was returned by that State to the United States Senate. He was elected President of the United States of America in November, 1888. He was an ardent Republican. On March 4, 1889, he was formally installed, and delivered his inaugural message. During his tenure of office the Tariff Act of 1890 was passed, and the idea of reciprocity was put into practical working shape by him. He was busy during 1892 in promoting an International Monetary Conference. At the Republican Conference at Minneapolis in June he was again nominated for the Presidency by an overwhelming majority over Mr. Blaine and the other candidates. Universal sympathy was extended to him in the following months during the illness of his wife, who died of consumption Oct. 25. The result of the Presidential election, Nov. 9, was to deprive Mr. Harrison of power and to reinstate his rival, President Cleveland.

Why She Bicycles.

A woman of intelligence, being asked by a college professor why she rode a bicycle, gave the following reasons, which speak for themselves: "My reason for riding a bicycle can be easily explained. In the first place, I ride it because it makes me feel better, and in the second place it makes me look better. Riding exhilarates me much as champagne does. When rushing thru the air of a down grade I actually tingle with the excitement of it. I thrill with delight as I go flying along. I feel, as I often fancy, just as a bobolink does when he wings himself rapidly up from the fragrant meadow grasses and bursts into singing as he goes. I feel that I am the embodiment of delightful motion. Every nerve is responsive to the charm of it. I am fascinated with my own powers and glad that I am alive. I am happier on my wheel than in any other environment save when playing and romping with my children."

Carrie Nation Vice Mamie Taylor.

Last summer it was the Mamie Taylor. Now it is the Carrie Nation, the drinking of which causes a man to go home, break up the furniture and fearlessly "pass" his wife just to show that in this country, at least, women don't run things entirely. This is the recipe for a real hot Carrie Nation:

First half fill your mixing glass with cracked ice, the same as for a cocktail. That is to make it cool. Then put in a dash of Angostura bitters to make it hot. Next add a dash of lemon juice to make it sour, and a half-spoonful of sugar to make it sweet.

A small portion of sherry wine is next added to give the drink a flavor. Then the glass is filled almost to the top with good whiskey to make the drinker high spirited and devilish. Lastly, the mixer adds maraschino. This is carefully mixed and cooled and then poured off into a bar glass or a regular cocktail glass. Some also add either a cherry or an olive to the drink. It is a fine mixture of a punch and a cocktail, and is quite smooth. But a few of them will suffice for the ordinary individual. Several are dangerous.

A Battle-Ax for Carrie.

Conrad Stein, the well-known New York brewer, bought a battle-ax at the Sportsman's Show from Schoverling, Daly & Gales, and had the weapon, which is a beautiful antique of the time of King Henry IV., encased in a quartered oak box and shipped as a gift to Mrs. Carrie Nation, the Kansas joint smasher, with a request that if she comes to New York she will visit the brewery and try the weapon on the big plant.

Foresaw His Own Death.

The little country town of St. Eustache, Que., reports a case of second-sight, premonition or presentiment, which is scarcely equalled by any of those related by M. Camille Flammarion in "The Unknown."

One of the villagers, a healthy, middle-aged man named Legare, after rising one morning recently apparently in the quiest of health and spirits, said abruptly to his wife: "I am going to die to-night, but you must not trouble yourself about it. I am going to arrange everything in such a manner as to give you as little worry as possible."

Mrs. Legare believed that her husband was joking, and attempted to laugh off his remarks. Nevertheless, Legare proceeded to shave himself with care, changed all his clothing and put on clean apparel, placed all his papers and business affairs in proper order and made his will.

Then he calmly asked his wife to go for the parish priest, in order that he might make his confession and receive the last sacraments of the church before dying. Seeing that he was apparently in the best of health, his wife positively refused to go for the priest until Legare had insisted again and again that he was perfectly sane and knew only too well what he was about.

The priest went to the house with Mrs. Legare and consented to receive her husband's confession, but positively refused to administer the sacrament of extreme unction, reminding Legare that it could be given only to a dying person. In vain Legare insisted that he was about to die, altho perfectly well at that time, and that he would be a corpse that very night. The priest was obdurate and left him.

Legare continued to busy himself with the affairs of his estate until early in the evening, when he suddenly expired. The doctors say that death was due to heart failure and could not possibly, in the natural order of things, have been foreseen. The remarkable circumstances attending the death are, naturally enough, the wonder of the whole district.

The Poor Heathen.

Let us go and find the heathen; let us take him by the hand;
Let us take his evil from him; let us also take his land;
Let us break it to him gently that it's wrong to be so nude,
And inculcate proper notions of the style,
as it's pursued.
Let us show him all the glories of the white man's kingdom come,
And, by way of introduction, sell him lots
of white man's rum,

Let us seek our heathen brother in benighted lands afar,
And impress him with the wrongness of his habits as they are;
Let us guide him slowly, surely, till he's nobly civilized,
And has banished all his foibles, all his fancies, so despised;
Let us show him how he's destined to go forward with a jump,
Lest our grand, resistless progress take him
'midship with a bump.

Let us teach him that the bolo and the dagger are not right,
When the seven-shooter follows up its barking with a bite;
Let us bring to him the gospel of the shirt
and the full dress suit,
And the glad and glorious tidings of the proper shoe or boot;
Let us lift the poor old heathen from the bog wherein he sticks,
And explain to him the beauties of the game of politics.

Thus we'll labor with the pagan till he understands our ways
And will ponder with a shudder on his old unhappy days.
We will stock his land with clothing, we will dot it with golf links,
And he'll hail the architecture of the home
of fancy drinks;
And we'll get the glory for it—for the good
that we will do—
All the grand, impressive glory—and we'll get his money, too.

—Baltimore American.

Plea for the Birds.

God save the birds! Five million throats,
Alas, are yearly stilled;
Five million homes made tenantless,
Once with the young birds filled,
Five million precious choristers
Of God's own temple slain;
A world made tuneless, since but they Know aught of heaven's refrain.

Refrain so sweet that oft it seems
A fair angelic choir
Whose myriad chanters wake the dawn
With swelling voice and lyre.
The pouting brook, the sylvan glade,
The forest dim and old,
Within their tuneful heart of hearts
Our little songsters hold.

Oh, human mother, in whose breast
Love's message has been heard,
Know that the same sweet message comes
To every mother bird.
Then raise your standard nobly, with
A purpose, true, intense,
Against the cruel slaughter of These helpless innocents.

—Margaret Newell Goodnow.

Biggest Man in the World.

A young French-Canadian giant at present in Ottawa is believed by his admirers to be the biggest man in the world. His name is Edward Beaupre.

He is 7 feet 8 inches tall. His weight is 362 pounds, and his feet are 17½ inches long. Around the arm close to the armpit, his measurement is 54 inches.

Beaupre is only 20. He is a native of the Northwest Territory of Canada. His father was a French-Canadian and his mother a halfbreed.

Up to the age of 3 the young giant was no bigger than an ordinary baby of that age. From that time he grew enormously, until at the age of 10 he was 6 feet tall.

He is in excellent health. All his brothers and sisters are of normal size.

60 Specialists on the Case—In the ordinary run of medical practice a greater number than this have treated cases of chronic dyspepsia and have failed to cure—but Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets (60 in a box at 35 cents cost) have made the cure, giving relief in one day. These little "specialists" have proven their real merits.—72

Sir Archibald's Good Sense.

When General Sir Archibald Hunter heard that his friends in West Kilbride, Ayrshire, Scotland, had planned a public reception for him on his return from South Africa, he telegraphed: "It is only right that I should decline to receive any form of demonstration of a public nature, as so many of my best friends have been killed. The war is not over. The nation is plunged into grief for their great loss. These furnish more than sufficient reason. My health, I am thankful to say, is now almost all that can be desired. Please tell my friends and well wishers that I am profoundly grateful for their offer to display their good feeling toward me, and that I gratefully accept the will for the deed."
