TOOK THE ADVICE OF HIS FRIEND

Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism Relieved By "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. L. LABRIE

594 Champlain St., Montreal.

"I have been restored to health by taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I became very weak, had frequent dizzy spells and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints and my hands swollen.

A friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and from the outset, they did me good. After I had started the second box, I felt I was getting well and I persevered in the treatment. I can truthfully say that 'Fruit-a-tives' is the only medicine that helped me.

Advertising Axioms.

The following sayings re advertising have been acknowledged as axioms or facts. You cannot deny them. Experience, observation and experiment have removed them from the doubtful class to the certain:

1. A business not worth advertising is not worth having.

2. A dollar judiciously spent in advertising will always double itself.

3. No man ever went broke by advertising; but there are thousands who go into bankruptcy annually because they don't advertise.

4. The suburban merchant who blames his neighbors for going into the city, is himself responsible for the exodus.

5. It is a pity that the non-advertising merchant cannot see the fact that he is paying the bills of his advertising competitor.

"You look very smiling this morning, Toner," said Bailey.

"I guess I ought to be. I went to a fortune teller last night and she prophesied immediate financial reverses," chortled Toner.

"I fail to see anything very joyous in that," said Bailey.

"You would if you knew anything about my finances," said Toner. "I tell you right now if they don't reverse pretty quick, I'll be busted."

New Strength in the Spring.

NATURE NEEDS AID IN MAKING NEW HEALTH GIVING BLOOD

In the spring the system needs a tonic. To be healthy you must have new blood, just as the trees must have new sap to renew their vitality. Nature demands it and without this new blood you will feel weak and languid. You may have twinges of rheumatism or the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia. Often there are disfiguring pimples or eruptions on the skin. In other cases there is merely a feeling of tiredness, and a variable appetite. Any of these are signs that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has lessened your vitality. What you need in spring is a tonic medicine to put you right, and in all the world of medicine there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new rich, red blood—your greatest need in spring. This new blood drives out the seeds of disease and makes easy tired men, women and children bright active and strong. Mrs. Eugene Carcarette, Amherstburg, Ont., says: "I suffered for a long time from dizziness, pain in the back and sick headache, and nothing I took did me any good until I began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These cured me after taking six boxes and I now feel better than ever I did in my life. I had fallen off in weight to 82 pounds, and after taking the Pills I had increased to 100 pounds."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or can be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The chauffeur never spoke except when addressed, but his few utterances, given in a broad brogue, were full of wit.

One of the men in the party remarked: 'You're a bright sort of a fellow, and it is easy to see that your people came from Ireland.'

'No, sor; ye are very badly mistaken,' replied Pat.

'What!' said the man, 'didn't they come from Ireland?'

'No, sor,' answered Pat, 'they're there yit.'

The Merry One—Cheer up, old man! Why don't you drown your sorrow?"

The Sad One—She's stronger than I am, and besides it would be murder."

A Lumberman's Opinion.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble, wasted nerve cells.

SCUTARI

Scutari, whither the Serbian Government was removed, is one of the oldest cities in Europe. The date of its foundation is lost in the mists of time but it claims to have been the capital of the old Illyrian kings 2,000 years before Christ. Though for centuries ruled by its native kings and always inhabited by the Thrako-Illyrian tribe, who are now represented by the modern Albanians, the city has known many a change of masters, and has passed under the domination of Romans, Byzantines, Gauls, Goths, Bulgars, Serbs, Venetians and Turks. Even after its capture by the Turks however, in 1477, it continued for a long time to be ruled by native Albanian chieftains, and it has always retained a degree of independence.

EASTERN DONNYBROOK

Dialects and Tongues A-plenty in Wartime Salonica

A young British subaltern writes from somewhere in the Eastern Mediterranean as follows: Before you have been in Salonica half an hour you will have learned the equivalent of "Get out of the way" in half a dozen languages. "Attention!" "Bros!" "Destour!" "Varon!" "Hey-Oop!" Unless you can interpret the warning in French, Greek, Turkish, Jew-Spanish (a peculiar local tongue), and every British dialect from Western Irish to East Yorkshire, you will not go long without a collision. It may be a great French or English motor lorry, bumping fiercely over the uneven flagstones; it may be a string of wizened little horses, with untidy Greek soldiers perched sideways on their heavy wooden pack saddles; or a motorcycle, pitching like a channel steamer on the uneven roadway; or a party of officers, who have ridden in from the camps; or a local cab, with two such pitiable wrecks of horses in the shafts that it would be worth a month's imprisonment to their owner to work them in London; or a Jewish hawker, with a bunch of turkeys hanging head downwards in each hand; or a patrol-work patrol of French, English and Greek soldiers, looking very self-conscious and awkward in each other's company—the streets of this Levantine Donnybrook Fair are not the place for a quiet stroll.

Acid Keeps Out Cold

A foot covering which proved of great value in resisting the cold in the Alpine fighting is a square of linen, prepared in a solution of salicylic acid and sterilized fat, over which may be worn either a woollen or a cotton sock. The prepared squares are enclosed in small waterproof envelopes, and are thus easily carried in the pocket. Thousands of these squares have been sent to the front.

My England.

(BY WILLIAM WINTER)

The following stirring poem, from the New York Times, is by the dean of American dramatic critics. Mr. Winter, in his old age, continues to write brilliantly both in prose and verse:

My England! Not my native land,
But dear to Me as if she were—
How oft have I longed to stand
With those brave hearts who fight for her!

Bereft by Fortune, worn with Age,
My life is all I have to give,
But freely would that life engage
For those who died that she may live.

Mother of Freedom! Pledged to Right!
From Honor's path she would not stray,
But sternly faithful, used her might
To lead mankind the nobler way.

Her task was hard, her burden great,
But round the world her edict ran
That reared and ruled a Sovereign estate
Securely on the Rights of Man.

No vandal foot should tread her land,
No despot hold her realm in awe;
The humblest peasant should command
The shelter of her righteous law.

In vain her lion port was braved!
Her pennant streamed o'er every sea,
And wherever her ensign waved
All fetters fell, and Man was free.

Today be all her faults forgot—
The errors of her nascent prime,
Or wily politicians's plot,
Or blunder that was almost crime.

Today, when desperate tyrants strain
By Greed and Fear, and Hate combined,
To blast her power and rend her reign,
She fights the fight for all mankind!

She fights for us—for this clime
Our home beloved, where freemen dwell,
Columbia, grandest born of Time,
That Teuton malice burns to quell.

My England! Should the hope be crost
In which she taught the world to strive,
Then all of virtue would be lost
And naught of Manhood left alive.

But 'tis not in the Book of Doom to fail,
That Justic, Honor, Truth, should
That earth be made a living tomb,
And only brutal Wrong prevail.

It cannot be the human race
Long struggling up to Freedom's sun,
Is destined to the last abase
If vassal to the murderous Hun!

In every land that knows the ills
Of Bondage and has felt its aches
The deathless pulse of Freedom thrills
And Reason's noble rage awakes.

See splendid Italy advance,
And grimly issuing from his lair,
To grasp the hand of glorious France
Stalk forth the intrepid Russian bear!

My England! Patient, valiant, true!
Nor foes without, nor frauds within
Will shake her purpose to subdue
The cohorts of embattled sin.

The swinish horse, the gilded beast
In whom no touch of truth survives
Who ravish women, murder priests
And strew the sea with infant lives.

The Lords of War, who kill and maim,
Exultant, while their people groan,
Steeping themselves in crime and shame,
To keep a despot on his throne,

That pigmy, to whose wildered brain
Himself an Attila appears,
Who takes the name of God in vain
And drowns the earth in blood and tears!

My England, strike! Droop not, pause,
Till triumph on your banners shine!
Then take a grateful world's applause—
Millions of hearts that beat like mine.

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to lie in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I thought I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ARTILLERY USELESS IN VOSGES BATTLES

Land of the Machine Gun and Bayonet—Sniping a Fine Art Among French Alpines

H. Warner Allen, who is official representative for all the British newspapers with the French armies, sends the following description of the desperate struggle in the Vosges Mountains: In the mountains of the Vosges men still fight in the open, with the cold steel, as they fought in the days before machines of scientific destruction drove them underground. The Vosges are the country of the bayonet and the machine gun. Among their precipitous pine-clad hills the obstacles set by Nature in the way of the invader from the East are proof against the puny artillery of science. A 17-inch shell makes no more impression on a mountain than a raindrop on a paving stone, and under cover of the forests and the rocks whole armies can lie hidden in perfect security from the enemy's guns. The aviator's eye cannot pierce the dense canopy of evergreen foliage, and the guns, as a rule, can only fire at random, blindly wasting their shells among the trees and holders. The rifle has its part to play in the fighting, but it is handicapped by the abundance of cover, and it is with the bayonet and the machine gun that the issue rests. It is only in the valley that the guns are dangerous.

Helping Nature

For half a mile our road lay exposed to the view and shells of the Germans just a thousand yards away and the cars worked up to full speed to get past the danger zone as quickly as possible. The enemy maintained a prudent silence, being well aware that the French in this section had definite orders to reply to every German projectile by four shells of the same calibre, aimed unerringly at his most vulnerable points—his depots and cantonments in the rear. Sometimes one may catch a glimpse of a pale blue uniform, but an instant later it has faded away into the all-pervading green, and the mountain seems as lonely and as peaceful as if there were no war. Yet if one looks more closely, one sees that human ingenuity has been hard at work doing its utmost to reinforce the obstacles that Nature has set against the German. Blockhouses built of stout pine trunks with deep loopholes, are dotted all about the woods.

Sometimes a great boulder has been pressed into service, and, topped with a breastwork of tree trunks, it makes an almost impregnable shelter. These rustic trenches and shelters are as much a part of the forest as a woodman's hut, and the pollus who built them have adorned their work with soft beds of bright green moss. The main defence is the barbed wire which is twined in an inextricable network round tree trunks, fallen branches and wooden stakes. It runs along the hill slopes, and down into the ravines, extending in all directions its impassable barrier. On the other side of the barbed wire it is debatable ground. The French sentries lie hidden in shallow holes with their rifles at their shoulders, listening intently for a stir or a rustle that might betray the approach of a German patrol.

Sometimes a French patrol will make their way through a narrow zig zag passage in the barbed wire entanglement and cautiously glide down the hill towards the enemy. Perhaps they will reach the German line of wire unnoticed, and watch there for a while to see what the Germans are doing, and if occasion serves, risk a shot or two at any of the enemy who may show themselves. The most propitious moment is when the German sentries are being relieved. Everything is silent, and not a leaf is stirring. One German, glad that his duty is over leaves his shelter and turns back towards the rear; the other, who is taking his place shows himself incautiously for a second. There is a little movement behind a rock on the hillside, the silence is cut by two rifle cracks that echo through the valley and there are two Germans less in the world.

WOULD ABOLISH GERMAN

Kultur Must be Isolated, Declares the French Press

The French press almost unanimously demands that the study of the German language shall be forbidden forever in the educational institutions of France. Many papers express the hope that the same step will be taken not only by England, Italy, Russia and Serbia, but also by the United States and other neutral countries. The provincial press wants not only all German books thrown out of the schools and public libraries, but also all French translations of the works of German philosophers, poets and scientists. One of the strongest advocates of this policy, the "Petit Provencal" of Marseilles, says editorially: "The influence of Germany must be done away with for all time and this can only be accomplished by practically killing the German language. All nations should be impressed with the fact that it is below their dignity to learn a language which is only spoken by a race of barbarians and murderers. No sane man thinks of wasting his time in studying the languages of the Zulu-Kaffirs or the head-hunters of Borneo, and it is hard to understand why anybody should try to learn German.

"There is no doubt that the morbid German philosophy has greatly influenced certain intellectual circles in all countries. Many of the persons whose minds have been thus contaminated are actually dangerous to their own races, because they have lost all patriotism. The Allied nations should unite in a crusade against everything that is German after the war. A lasting and general boycott against all German products is sure, but this is not sufficient. The German language and literature must be driven from all civilized parts of the world. That alone will rid civilization of the unhealthy and dangerous influence of the Boches. If all commercial and mental intercourse with them is broken off they will be no longer able to do any harm."
