SANGUINARY DUEL!

Butcher and Cook in Chicago Fought With 18-Inch Knives.

Chicago, April 16.—A savage duel with eighteen-inch butcher knives, which will probably be followed by two deaths, took place in the kitchen of the Union League Club Monday night. The principals were Emil Colton, butcher, and Jules Kuntz, chef. They cut and slashed ferociously, until both fell from loss of blood.

Colton's left hand was almost cut off at the wrist, and Kuntz received four wounds which severed eight arteries, his skull also being fractured.

The combat lasted fully ten minutes, and was witnessed by several other employes of the club, none of whom dared to interfere. The men were not separated until both fell to the floor, weak from loss of blood, and still trying to strike each other. Both were unconscious when removed from the kitchen.

Colton had been discharged from the club, and the trouble arose through his having accused Kuntz with being responsible for his dismissal.

AT LAST

A Remedy Has Been Found That Will Cure Diabetes Permanently and Completely.

Quebec, April 14.—A very positive and advanced case of Diabetes has been cured.

Mr. Sam Desrochers, of this city, was dying of Diabetes four years ago, and today he is strong and well. No one believed he could ever recover.

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him, and although he seemed to be all right, yet many thought that it was not a complete cure, but only a temporary relief.

Now, however, after four years have elapsed, Mr. Desrochers stoutly declares that he has not since had the slightest symptom of his old trouble. Everyone is convinced that Diabetes is curable, and that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Last night Raymond appeared before another large house at the London, and gave an even more entertaining exhibition than that of Monday. In magic, Mr. Raymond did several clever feats, while his spiritualistic cabinet proved one of the most laughable, unique and incomprehensible exhibitons of the kind ever seen in Canada. A well-known business man, one of a committee of three on the stage, was taken on a trip to Spiritland, and when he returned to this terrestrial sphere he had a red nose, a black eye, a tambourine and sleigh bells around his neck, a tin pail over his head, his coat and vest almost off and his attire generally dishevelled. At tonight's performance Raymond will do his famous challenge handcuff test in which he will defy the police to keep him handcuffed.

The Tyrolean Yodlers Give a Good Entertainment.

Franz Reilhoffer's Tyrolean Yodlers gave the closing number of the Metropolitan course at the Auditorium last night, the entertainment having been transferred to that house from the Grand. Franz Reilhoffer gave some clever facial impersonations of celebrities, and the company furnished an enjoyable programme of music, including echo and yodling songs, tyrolese melodies, and selections on the zither, the xylophone, the alpine, violin and the mountain flute. The entertainment deserved a larger audience than it received.

"THE EVIL EYE" TONIGHT.

"The Evil Eye," which comes to the Grand tonight, is one of the big events of the season. Mr. Sidney R. Ellis, the author, has entirely re-written the play, introducing many new ideas, scenes and situations, while Chas. H. Yale gives special attention to this part of the performance. A small army of scenic artists, theatrical mechanics, makers of stage properties and papier mache, costumers, designers, wigs, tights and shoemakers spent months in painting, making and manufacturing the scenery, properties, mechanical effects and hundreds of costly costumes that are necessary in such a large enterprise.

"THE BONNIE BRIER BUSH."

John Kendrick Bangs, author of "The House Boat on the Styx" and editor of Harper's Weekly, has this to say of "The Bonnie Brier Bush": "The play has intrinsic elements of success. Mr. Stoddart's Lachlan Campbell would have made a reputation for this actor even if he had hitherto lacked it. The role fits him with that precise nicety that has made Jefferson's 'Rip Van Winkle' the perennial attraction." During the long run of the piece in New York, similar encomiums were elicited from other publications, and a rare treat may therefore be anticipated in the presentation of the piece here. Ian MacLaren's beautiful stories of Drumtochty life are as well known here as is Mr. Stoddart, and this veteran actor is to be congratulated upon having secured so fine a vehicle for his dramatic powers. Mr. Stoddart, with his entire original supporting company, will be seen in a return engagement at the New Grand next Friday evening. The sale of seats opened this morning, and the house promises to be a record-breaker.

OTIS SKINNER ON MONDAY.

In his production of "Francesca da Rimini," which comes to the Grand on Monday, April 21, Otis Skinner appeals to the public with a strong, poetic play, a splendid production, and a company that would carry a drama of less value to success. There are four conspicuous and half a dozen subsidiary characters in "Francesca da Rimini," all requiring sympathetic and artistic treatment, and Mr. Skinner's company this season has been engaged for the special purpose of securing fitting interpretation for the poetic beauty of the play. "Francesca da Rimini," the master work of George H. Boker, was written during the formative period of the drama in America, and the time was not ripe for its full appreciation. Mr. Skinner has now demonstrated that "Francesca da Rimini" is still one of the best acting and most picturesque plays written during the latter half of the nineteenth century.

"MAN TO MAN."

A 400-pound mountain bear, which stands five feet on his haunches, is carried with the Butterfield & Bromilow melodrama, "Man to Man," for use in the most thrilling scene in the play, which shows a fight for life in a mountain cave between the bear and man. The bear has, of course, been trained to fight unmuzzled, but even at that there is invariably the danger that his animal instinct may overcome his training, and a much more realistic battle than is announced on the programme may result. The play comes to the Grand for matinee and evening performances on Saturday next.

AN INTERESTING GIRL.

Miss Florence Bates-Horsfall, who plays the part of Lucy in Miss Kathryn Kidder's revival of "The Country Girl," has some aristocratic connections in England. She is a niece of Sir Edward Bates, member of parliament for Plymouth, and a cousin of the late Earl Fitzwilliams, whose magnificent estate in Wentworth is always an object of interest for tourists. Miss Horsfall was educated for the stage, under the tutorship of Stephen Caffrey, and John Coates wrote a play especially for her, called "A Broken String." Plans were made to produce this play at the Criterion Theater, but her family objected to her appearance on a London stage. Shortly afterwards Miss Horsfall came to America, and was engaged to support Miss Kidder in her revival of "The Country Girl," which will be seen at the New Grand on Thursday, April 24.

IN MATTER OF A BRITISH PREFERENCE.

against which the British people have fought, but which was forced upon them, and today the principle item on the British budget is expenditure for naval and land armaments, and now Mr. Maclean says Canada should follow the same course.

Mr. Maclean—Nobody has said so.

"Sir," the premier resumed, "Canada is in a different position, Canada is a nation, with an immense territory—one with a sparse population of five and a third million souls scattered over an area 3,000 miles in extent, east to west. The principal items in the budget of Canada are public works, the development of the country, the construction of railways and harbors, the opening up of ways of transportation. This is the work to which we have to devote our energies, and I would look upon it as a crime to divert any part of that necessary expenditure to the supply of guns, cannon and military armaments generally."

Lieut.-Col. Sam Hughes—Did the right honorable gentleman say, "any part of the expenditure?"

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—I have no hesitation in saying that I have altogether the views which have been expressed by Sir Charles Tupper more than once, by Sir Charles Tupper more than once, that Canada has done more for the defense of the British Empire by the construction of the I. C. R. and the C. P. R. than she could have done by spending that money in military armaments. (Hear, hear.) Certainly, we must improve on our militia; we have a scheme before us today for that purpose. We must look after our own defenses. But there is all the difference in the world between undertaking this domestic military expenditure and embarking in the vast scheme which is embraced in my honorable friend's conception. I do not share his views, and so long as he wants to line war and commerce he will find me unalterably opposed to him. I cannot agree to anything of the kind. We are going to London simply to discuss the commercial question. It seems to me our decision in that is a wise one. Great Britain, as it appears from the budget, which was delivered yesterday, has entered upon a new line of taxation. I do not care whether you call it protection or not, but for the purpose of this discussion it is sufficient to say that England has opened up new avenues of taxation, she has gone back to the old duties on corn.

"It is very true," continued the premier, "that this tax which has been imposed on the English people is not large. I do not complain of that; I rather rejoice at it. But at all events, there is an opening, and since the British Government has adopted this new line of taxation, the field is clear now for negotiations in a new direction at London next summer. I do not despair that we may be able to lay down next summer in London the basis of a system that will improve the relations between Great Britain and the colonies, and will establish freer trade between all sections of the British Empire. (Ministerial cheers). That is what the people of Canada are looking for at the present time—the improvement of the trade relations between the mother country and the colonies. There is every reason to believe that we are nearing the dawn of a new day, that peace is going to be restored at last to the British Empire, that this cruel war will soon be over, and if that be so, with conditions more favorable than they ever were before for securing the improvement in our trade relations which we have in view when we come back from England next summer it will be time enough for my honorable friend to find fault with the government, if the government shall not have done what he thinks was their duty." (Liberal cheers.)

Dr. Sproule spoke strongly in favor of the position taken by Mr. Maclean.

Mr. R. L. Borden said that he for one would always maintain that so far as this country is concerned Canada herself must deal with the question of imperial defense. The country must deal with it and control that subject, but he could not agree with the premier that it was altogether out of the question to discuss it when we are invited in a courteous way to do so. It must also be recollected that much of the enormous expenditure of the British people for warlike armaments were to some extent for the benefit of Canada. That being the case, it did not sound very well for the premier to talk of the liability of the people of the British Isles while he shrank from discussing the defenses of this country as part of the British Empire. He said that for three years the opposition had been asking the government to endeavor to secure for Canada a preference in the British market, but their only answer was that it was supremely ridiculous to think that the mother country would impose a tax on foodstuffs, and that justified their course in taking no steps whatever to secure a preference. But when recently it became imminent that the British Government would tax foodstuffs, had this government awakened from its sleep, and made any representation on the subject? Mr. Borden trusted the premier would let the country know if he intended to ask Great Britain to exempt Canada from the tax.

Mr. Fielding declared it was not a serious proposition to say that Sir Michael Hicks-Beach had not exempted Canada from the operation of the breadstuff tax because of the action of the present government of Canada.

"Have you ever asked them?" Dr. Sproule asked.

"That," replied Mr. Fielding, "is not the point. Up to the present it has not been opportune to do so." The tax was essentially a war tax, and while everybody in Canada agreed that a preference would be beneficial, the Liberal party had taken the ground that the preference would be a benefit to Canada, and at the same time to induce Great Britain to look favorably upon the idea of a preference to Canada in return. In 1896 nobody looked seriously upon the question of getting a preference in the British market.

Mr. W. B. Northrup, in reply to Mr. Fielding, referred to the eloquent speech which Sir Wilfrid Laurier made in London, Ont., in 1896, when he dilated upon the benefits of preferential trade, and said that when the chance came, in 1897, Sir Wilfrid went to London and declared we did not want a preference.

The ministers of interior and customs followed, and the debate was adjourned.

FERROZONE

Will Give You an Appetite, and With Appetite and Good Digestion Comes Health and Strength.

Ferrozone will in one week give you a splendid appetite, and will so improve digestion and assimilation, that full benefit will be derived from everything eaten.

There is nothing like Ferrozone to create a keen, healthy relish for food for the blood, and a tonic for the nerves and brain. To those leading a sedentary life it is a perfect boon.

The Rev. Dennis O'Brien, D.D., the well-known evangelist, says of Ferrozone: "I have pleasure in saying that I have found Ferrozone a remarkably good preparation. It keeps up one's appetite, cures nervousness and sleeplessness, and perhaps is the very best tonic I have used. Being in the form of chocolate-coated tablet, it is both pleasant and convenient to take and is well worthy of my highest recommendations."

This is an example of the way people speak of Ferrozone who have used it, and should be convincing evidence of its unusual merit. It is warranted to cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Lost Appetite, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver troubles, Catarrh, and all other diseases arising from impairment of blood and nerve tone.

Refuse to accept a substitute for Ferrozone. Every druggist sells it, 50c per box, or three for $1 25. Prepared by N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., and Kingston, Ont.

HOW DO YOU SPELL "JONAS?"

An Odd Turning of the Name of Alberto Jonas, the Brilliant Spanish Pianist.

Spelling his name, so far as English type is concerned, "Jonas," there would appear to be but one pronunciation to the name of this famous Spanish pianist, who recently visited this city. But we learn that the correct pronunciation is Ho-nass—quite a difference. The music-loving people of the leading cities of Canada, who have become admirers of this remarkable artist, will be interested in this bit of information. With the playing of "Jonas" is inseparably linked the famous Heintzman & Co. Grand Piano, which was used exclusively by this artist in his Canadian tour, and helped so largely in his brilliant executions.

London branch of Heintzman & Co. is at 217 Dundas street
