International morality.

In spite of boasted civilization, in spite of two thousand years of Christianity, in spite of the preaching of altruism and of the Sermon on the Mount, in spite of the cult of chivalry, in spite of the innumerable declarations of the Rights of Man, the relations between nations and nations in many cases are as greatly influenced by considerations of justice and morality as are the relations between alligators in tropical rivers. The nations of Western Europe stood calmly by and watched the ferocious Turkish border capture the key of the continent, Constantinople. Later when the brave Hungarian nation stood as the bulwark of Europe against the all-conquering Moslem, the defenders were assailed on flank and in the rear by the French and Germans. Still later, after Hungary had temporarily succumbed, Poland alone actively and triumphantly withstood the Turk. But even while in the act of saving western civilization, she was attacked on the north, the east and the west by German, Russian and Austrian, and the covenant against her was begun which eventually blotted that gallant nation off the map of the continent she had saved. Later, when the great and villainous partition came, England was on the side of Frederick the Great, the prime mover in the atrocious transaction. In 1905 the great civilized nations of the world looked on calmly and without making any efforts at prevention while five hundred thousand Armenians were murdered amid immeasurable horrors by the Turks. None would stir because of mutual distrust and the possible loss of a few hundreds of thousands in commerce. For five hundred years and more all the greater nations looked on while the Greek, the Serb, the Bulgar and the Montenegrin were trampled ruthlessly under the Moslem heel. When, driven to desperation, they would turn in ineffective fury upon their oppressors, Western Europe generally would hold up its hands in horror and profess disgust at their lawlessness and contempt for order and quiet living. At length, however, out of mere shame and a momentary sense of national honour, they helped the Greek to freedom a century ago. Many years afterwards Russia, for very evident and selfish reasons, did help to free the Roumanians and a part of the Servian and Bulgarian nations, but immediately recouped herself by annexing the Caucasus country from Turkey and by calmly taking over Bessarabia from Roumania, a territory inhabited by two million Roumanians. At the same time, Austria took over Bosnia and Herzegovina, comprising one half the entire Serb population of the Balkans and thus making the formation of a strong Servian kingdom very difficult if not impossible. But yesterday, the Bulgar, the Serb and the Greek forgot for the moment their mutual hate and formed an alliance against the common enemy, the Turk. After a desperate war of three months or more, Turkey was beaten to her knees and surrendered practically all her European territory. Then the "Great" nations set about to weaken the heroic victors. Austria, Italy and Germany declared that the main conquests of the Servians and Greeks must be made independent, thus snatching from these the fruits of victory. Then Bulgaria was prompted to refuse all compromise of the original allotment, and attacked Greeks and Servians both. The result was a second war marked by a ferocity unequalled in modern times. Bulgaria was beaten, and just at the critical moment, Roumania, hitherto an onlooker, instigated apparently by Austria, suddenly invaded and annexed four thousand square miles of Bulgarian territory. Thus all the Balkan Allies were terribly weakened while the 'great' surrounding nations and Roumania gained proportionately. No compassion, no feeling of pity, no sense of right or wrong, justice or fairness, ever seem to have touched the hearts or minds of the rulers of the selfish Powers. The ethics of the alligator prevailed in full purity. "Woe to the weak and the vanquished," was the exclamation of Brennus the Gaul when Rome fell before him, and the exclamation of the savage chief seems to be the motto of the nations ever since, despite the Sermon on the Mount and Calvary.

How well has Richard Le Gallienne expressed all this in the following lines:

THE CRY OF THE LITTLE PEOPLES.

The cry of the Little Peoples went up to God in vain;
The Czech and the Pole, and the Finn and the Schleswig Dane.
We ask but a little portion of the green and ancient earth;
Only to sow and sing and reap in the land of our birth.
We ask not coaling stations, nor ports in the China seas;
We leave to the big child nations such rivalries as these.
We have learned the lesson of time, and we know three things of worth;
Only to sow and sing and reap in the land of our birth.
Oh, leave us our little margins, waste ends of land and sea,
A little grass and a hill or two, and a shadowing tree.
Oh leave us our little rivers that sweetly catch the sky,
To drive our mills and to carry our wood, and to dispatch by.
Once, long ago, like you, with hollow pursuit of fame,
We filled all the shaking world with the sound of our names;
But now we are glad to rest, our battles and boasting done,
Glad just to sow and sing and reap in our share of the sun.
And what shall you gain if you take us, and bind us and beat us with thongs,
And drive us to sing underground in a whisper our sad little songs?
Forbid us the use of our heart's own nursery tongue;
Is this to be strong, you nations; is this to be strong?
Your vulgar battle is fight, and your shopman conquests to keep;
For this shall we break our hearts, for this shall our old men weep?
What gain in the day of battle, to the Russ, to the German, what gain
The Czech and the Pole, and the Finn and the Schleswig Dane?
The cry of the Little Peoples goes up to God in vain,
For the world is given over to the cruel sons of Cain.
The hand that would bless us is weak, and the hand that would bind us is strong;
And the power of pity is naught but the power of a song.
The dreams that our fathers dreamed to-day are laughter and dust,
And nothing at all in the world is left for a man to trust.
Let us hope no more, or dream, or prophesy or pray!
For the iron world no less will crush on its iron way.
And nothing is left but to watch, with a helpless, pitying eye,
The kind old aims for the world and the kind old fashions die.

While the dealings of individual man with man have vastly improved in practically every way, yet the dealing of nation with nation seems but little influenced by time and change.

Well done, Darmouth.

Yesterday Darmouth celebrated her natal day. Stores were closed, the grind of every day toil was suspended and the people one and all threw themselves heart and soul into the laudable effort to make the date memorable. An elaborate and varied programme was carried out with enthusiasm and the Ambitious Town did itself proud. All this is as it should be. The town that takes no interest in its own history, and forgets its founders or the story of its foundation, is painfully lacking in civic pride and in civic patriotism.

Darmouth has set a bright and shining example to Halifax in this regard, for if there is a city in Canada whose foundation ought to be made memorable for many reasons, it is the Capital of Nova Scotia. It was the foundation of English Canada, long before either the pre-Revolutionary settlers, the Scottish Highland pioneers or the Loyalists came to our shores to help forward the good work. Years ago the day used to be fitly celebrated even as Darmouth celebrates her natal day, but a generation has grown up or come to the city, to whom our civic history has no meaning, and who seem determined to oppose any such celebration. One suggests that it be celebrated on Dominion Day, which, of course, means that it would not be celebrated at all. Another suggests the holding of a general civic holiday celebration in August, which would only be an unfair and unjust interference with Natal Day in Darmouth, which has the prior claim by some years. Yesterday thousands went from the city to the function across the harbour and were glad of the opportunity. But why should so many of our citizens be so ready to attend and enjoy the event in our sister town and yet so many of the same people turn a cold shoulder to a similar function here?

It is to be hoped that our City Fathers, Councillors and Controllers, all brand new, will, during the succeeding three or four months, definitely decide upon the question of Natal Day so that before the arrival of the date next year, all may know just what is to be done. Let them set seriously at work and settle the question at once and for all.

Why not quote them also?

The Tory press is ever ready to quote with alacrity every word which may drop from American lips, no matter how obscure or unimportant, against Reciprocity. Why do they not quote some of the statements made by prominent men in Congress during the present tariff debate? For instance, Senator Borah, of Idaho, said the other day that the Wilson tariff proposals were more dangerous to the United States than was Reciprocity. "That was a disaster, a treacherous betrayal of an loyal constituency as a party ever had," said the Senator referring to Reciprocity.

Senator Gronna re-echoed Senator Borah's words, and declared that he feared Canada if she were given free entrance for her wheat in the markets of the United States. And these men are from wheat-growing States and understand the situation thoroughly; and they can see clearly what a tremendous advantage it would be for Canada to have her wheat admitted free in our neighboring markets. Why do not the Tory papers print these utterances merely as news if nothing else?

— A young man walking through a foreign quarter stopped with an amused smile in front of a small eating place, the window of which had a sign, "Lam stew." The proprietor, from his doorway, asked what the joke was, and the young fellow explained about the missing "b" in "lamb." The next day he found that, while the bill of fare had changed, the spelling-lesson had not been forgotten. The proprietor was now offering "clamb chowder."

— At one time it was the practice to give five shillings ($1.20) to the finder of a dead body in the Thames, but nothing for saving life from drowning. The "mud larks" and other riverside characters were credited with always making sure of their reward by waiting till a drowning man had sunk the traditional three times before pulling him out of the water. In Austria it behooves one to be careful when rescuing people from death. Not long ago, a Viennese tradesman, while taking an evening stroll, found a man hanging from a tree. He promptly cut the rope, and by taking strenuous measures brought the would-be suicide back to consciousness. His act of benevolence was rewarded with a summons for effecting the rescue so carelessly as to raise severe bruises on the body when it fell to the ground. The court decided that the defendant was liable under article 335 of the Austrian code, which enacts that any person injuring another through want of due care must pay a fine and damages.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CO., LIMITED.

GENTLEMEN,—In June, '98, I had my hand and wrist bitten and badly mangled by a vicious horse. I suffered greatly for several days and the tooth cute refused to heal until your agent gave me a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT, which I began using. The effect was magical; in few hours the pain had ceased, and in two weeks the wounds had completely healed, and my hand and arm were as well as ever.

Yours truly,
A. E. BOY,
Carriage Maker.

When Dartmouth starts in to celebrate it certainly does things in first-class style. Favored with perfect weather yesterday, from the clanging of bells and blowing of horns at 8 a. m., which opened the day's proceedings of the celebration of its Natal Day, under the auspices of the Bancock Club, to the end, everything went with a swing. Hundreds of people were on the move early to see the road race, and the largest crowd yet witnessed the baseball match and base running contest. At the ferry, special arrangements were made to accommodate the large crowds, and early in the afternoon three boats were put on the service, and all were handled in good order, everything running without a hitch. While the crowds from Halifax were not so large as on former occasions, there was a great attendance, and the cabbies were kept busy throughout the afternoon and evening driving to and from the lakes. The committee worked hard for the success of the day, and are to be congratulated on the manner in which the events were pulled off. No better officials could have been chosen for the different departments of sports throughout the day and for

THE WATER CARNIVAL.

B. T. MacIlreith was an ideal referee, while D. Kelleher performed the duties of starter in a manner which could not be improved upon.

The events of the day in which the public were deeply interested were the shell events, particularly the senior singles. F. R. Hart, the Maritime Province champion, showed his class by winning both events. Slevert won the junior singles, and St. Mary's the junior fours. Slevert defeated a good field, including Hinch, St. Mary's; Shea, St. Joseph's; Purcell, Lornes. Slevert showed better form than the others; he rowed in good style, steered an excellent course, and led throughout. Hinch, however, made the race interesting for him, coming particularly strong at the finish, and he kept Slevert extended right to the end.

It was a splendid field of scullers who met in the senior singles, and the spectators were treated to a most interesting contest. Hart had the speed of the party, but Holland, who recently made such a splendid showing at Boston in the intermediate class, made a great race with him, as well as rowing a splendid course throughout. Cogswell led the field on the home-stretch, but his stomach troubled him and he had to retire. Scallion, who was in next position to Cogswell, rowed hard after him, and was just in his rear when he gave up, and then came within a short distance of the others. Cogswell was first away, with Hart right next, Scallion a moment later, with Holland on the extreme outside last to get away. Cogswell was leading at the ice house, with Hart, a half length behind, and Scallion and Holland almost on even terms. Hart drew up on Cogswell, with Scallion on the inside going somewhat inshore, with Holland on the outside rowing perfectly straight. Cogswell, however, soon again led Hart, and they were all close together, particularly the Arm representatives, so much so that while the officials near the turn gave the honors to Hart, the competing oarsmen declare Cogswell was around first. Holland was not a length behind, and Scallion came right after him. Cogswell, however, struck a great pace home and for several hundred yards led all the others, but was suddenly seized with a severe pain in the stomach, and he fell back in his boat, but soon recovered. In the meantime, Hart and Holland had gone to the front, with Scallion coming up from behind Cogswell. The two on the eastern shore were having a grand struggle; Hart and Holland were practically on even terms, rowing stroke for stroke, but an eighth of a mile from the finish, Hart began to draw away and crossed the line less than a length of clear water ahead of Holland, who was over a length ahead of Scallion in 8.30.

The same quartette were entered in the ½ mile dash, and all agreed to allow Slevert to start at a post entry. With the gun, nearly every oarsman bent himself to the limit, and nearly all made for the western shore. Slevert on the outside came in towards Holland, and the latter, to escape him, got over towards Hart, with the result that Holland's boat came in contact with the stern of Hart's, tearing the washboard off Holland's craft, while he was upset into the lake, and was later picked up by the referee's boat. Hart continued on without difficulty, and led Cogswell over the line by a couple of lengths, while Slevert finished ahead of Scallion. Holland's mishap spoiled any chances he had, and it is worthy of note that the same might not have occurred if Holland had started from the position he was on the programme. He was down as No. 3, and Hart No. 4, but they started with these positions reversed, and as it is with the positions on the course the referee has to deal with, Hart was in his own water and therefore not to blame for anything that occurred, so that the men were placed as they finished.

With no senior fours, there was more than usual interest in the junior fours which was won by St. Mary's, who rowed a good course, and showed excellent form, and were always in front. The North West Arm four were their main opponents, and they rowed such a straight course that they landed right on their buoy. St. Mary's, however, had too much speed for them, and won by about five lengths. The Lorne's had the inside course, which drew them inshore.

As is usual at a Dartmouth regatta the canoe events were a prominent feature in the afternoon's programme. The races were closely contested, and the hurry scurry and pillow fight created much amusement, and in the latter some of the contestants showed much skill in defensive work, blocking and dodging blows after blow from the pillow and balancing in good form.

In the single canoe J. W. Johnston steered badly going to the buoy and lost control entirely. J. Carson and T. Creighton had a close contest, but their canoes got too close together and the former fouled the latter, but this did not keep Creighton from winning with Carson a close second.

The tandem canoe event brought out the closest contest of the day, and two beginners at racing were the winners. H. Wambolt and W. Forsyth, who were behind at the start but paddled well, straight for their buoy, and turning first, kept their canoe in front until the finish, winning from J. Carson and T. Creighton by 2 feet.

The four in a canoe was also a pretty race. J. Carson, T. Creighton, J. Nutting, and L. Van Buskirk gained a slight advantage from the start, and at the finish lead over a length. The best contest was for 2nd place, with J. Johnston, R. Harris, G. Harris and G. Harrison taking the position by only a few feet.

In the hurry-scurry, the contestants start kneeling in the canoe, and at given signals change their positions to standing—then in the canoe, then on the gunwale, jump overboard and swim and finish sitting across the bow of the canoe, paddling and propelling the canoe home. G. Harris soon had the advantage when the last position was reached, and was being closely pressed by A. McLarren when the latter fell overboard. Harrison winning with T. Creighton 2nd.

The mixed tandem brought out three starters—G. Creighton and Miss Ethel Harrison, G. Harris and Miss Florence Harris, J. Carson and Miss Geraldine Harris. The former were the winners, with the latter second. The ladies showed themselves to be proficient paddlers and made a fine race.

The pillow fight was the most amusing event of the day, in which there were nine canoes entered. Some of the contestants managed to dodge and balance for more than ten minutes, while others were overboard at the first blow from the pillow. The event was finally won by G. Harris and R. Johnston, and came out in the final with G. Lohs and A. Hill. Johnston and Lohs handled the pillow in their respective canoes and each did clever work. Previously, Lohs and Hill defeated Wambolt and Forsyth, with Wambolt handling the pillow, in one of the best contests of the event.

There was much interest in the race between the Halifax and Dartmouth Letter Carriers. Being unable to present athletes, they doubled up in fours with coxswain. In this event was P. Davis stroke, and R. L. Berringer stroke, Smith, of Halifax, as the coxswain of the Halifax department, finished first, with F. Crimp, stroke, and J. Behan, with J. Boutilier as coxswain several lengths behind at the finish, but the former were disqualified for turning the buoy the wrong way and the race went to Dartmouth.

AT NIGHT

The scene at the Lakes was very beautiful. The Bancock Club House presented a handsome picture in a blaze of electric lights, while on the water the scene was very pretty with the myriads of boats and canoes afloat, and the splendid fire-works, all combining to make the scene one to be remembered. At usual, box fires blazed along the borders of the Lake, while colored light, sky rockets and the other fireworks on land and water were very pretty.

The residences of ex-Mayor Notting, Mr. Rosenberg, Mrs. Baker and Arthur Scarfe, at the foot of the lake, were prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns, while on the Lake road the residences of C. E. Peverill, A. Patterson and Mr. Balcom were also lighted very prettily with Chinese lanterns. The colored lights added much to the beauty of the scene, which was up to the usual standard of former years. The band of the R. C. R. performed excellent programmes of music, afternoon and evening, while in the evening the Bancocks were "at home" to the tennis players taking part in the tournament at Halifax, at a dance in the dance hall of the club house.

Mayor Williams presented the prizes for both the road race and the regatta.

A dance took place to-night on H. M. S. Northampton, given by the officers of the ship, which was handsomely decorated. The canopy over the deck was trimmed with the flags of all nations. A large chandelier was suspended from the quarter deck and shed its light all around, while a row of bow lights around the bridge added to the illumination. The main gangway was surmounted by an arch, and on either side stood the figure of a diver, the head pieces being illuminated, and holding in their hands salvers and programmes.

On every advantageous spot were placed stars and semi-circles of bayonets and rearrods, which dazzled with the lights thrown on them. On the main deck was placed a torpedo, flanked on each side by a rocket tube, all decorated with evergreens, etc. In the after engine room hatch a decorated Guardine gun was placed. A star of bayonets and cleaning rods ornamented the front of the staff commander's cabin. The supper room was very tastefully arranged on the starboard side of the main deck, and on portside a private saloon was arranged for which the select were admitted. Prince George of Wales was the centre of attraction and danced during the evening with several of the ladies.

PRESIDENT WILSON

Publicly reprimands U. S. ambassador at Mexico

For attack on British Foreign Office and sends apology to Sir Edward Grey.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—President Wilson last night publicly reprimanded Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson for his recent attack on the British Foreign Office. Ambassador Page was instructed to express to Sir Edward Grey the regret of the American government that a diplomatic official of the United States should have been guilty of such an impropriety.

The action of the administration here followed receipt of a cablegram from Ambassador Page, officially confirming the associated press despatch which had quoted a statement from the British government that it had recognized the Huerta regime in Mexico, along with France and Germany, after "a congratulatory speech" to President Huerta by Ambassador Wilson on behalf of the diplomatic corps in Mexico city.

The official interpretation of the statement here was that Great Britain at the time believed from ambassador Wilson's act that the U. S. intended to recognize the Huerta Government. Ambassador Wilson in an authorized interview declared that if the statement really emanated from the British foreign office, it was "a pure subterfuge, unworthy of the British foreign office, and at variance with its traditions and with the character it has maintained before the world for two centuries."

Secretary Bryan, after a conference with the President, then sent the following cablegram to Ambassador Page:

"The interview given to the Press yesterday by Mr. Henry Lane Wilson, whose resignation as ambassador to Mexico, has been accepted, to take effect at the end of his vacation, October 15th, having been brought to the president's attention, he directs me to ask you to call at the British Foreign Office, and say to Sir Edward Grey that he disclaims all responsibility for Mr. Wilson's action in the matter, and for the language employed by him in his interview, and that he regrets exceedingly that a diplomat in the employ of this government should have been guilty of such an impropriety."

BARING WINS $2,500 MORE.

Cleveland wins first game with Philadelphia.

Remarkable winning feat of children.

BARING WINS AGAIN.

Horsemen throughout the Provinces will hear with delight that the former Halifax trotter Baring won the $5,000 stake at Augusta, Me., yesterday. This makes two firsts and a second in $5,000 stakes he has won within three weeks, and deducting his entrance fees his earnings in three events total $4,705. He won a comparatively easy victory yesterday. The summary was as follows:

$5,000 2.18 Trot Stake.

Baring (Conkley)	1	1	1	1
Banner Wilkes (Smith)	2	2	3	2
Billiken (Nuckles)	3	3	2	3
El O Kinney (Rathbun)	4	4	4	4
Lady Tilly (Rose)	5	5	5	5

Time—2.16¼, 2.14¾, 2.16¼.

The success of Baring is bound to attract more attention to the horses of this section. He was brought to Halifax as a colt, being purchased from the Allen Farm, Springfield, Mass., for $600, and was developed, trained and handled by Frank Boutilier, who deserves every credit for the great prominence the horse obtained in attracting attention abroad, as well as Mr. Edwards, who purchased him, and Mr. Corbett, who negotiated the sale.

A VALUABLE FOAL.

R. A. Corbett's mare Daisy DeWitt, 2.20¾, by Red Lake, foaled this morning a fine bay colt by Baring, 2.12¾, winner of the $5000 stake at Augusta yesterday. With the rich breeding, the speed of both sire and dam, and the handsome conformation of both, this colt should prove a most valuable yearling.

REMARKABLE YOUNG SWIMMER.

These are the days when youth will be served in sports. We frequently have astonishing examples of this fact, but the feat of Edward J. Snyder, a 13 year-old youngster of Brooklyn, son of Commodore Charles Snyder of the United States Volunteer Life Saving Corps, who on Sunday swam from the Majestic Hotel, foot of Twentieth street, Coney Island, to the
