This Man's Efforts to Corner It Stirs Up Sweltering Passengers.

New York, July 19. — There was every prospect of a riot yesterday on a northbound Third avenue "L" train during the hottest part of the afternoon, because a couple of men, each built on the lines of a telegraph pole, persisted in standing in the aisle in the front of the open door of the first car in defiance of the fact that the men in the seats declared the air was all being shut off from them by the two who would not sit down.

First one slim little chap stood in the aisle and held out his coat to catch as much as possible of the rushing wind, which was hot as if off a furnace as the train passed through the Bowery. Then another stood beside him.

"Aw, set down there, can't you?" yelled a big German, who wore a gorgeous white alpaca summer shirt and no waistcoat. "Can't you let us fellers in the seats have a little air? What do you mean by shutting it all off?"

The wind was whistling past the thin men at such a rate that the women were holding their hats on their heads with both hands. The feminine part of the crowd, therefore, began to laugh. But the men in the seats were scowling fiercely.

One of the men in the aisle sat down promptly. The other sneered at the man in the alpaca shirt. A dozen men then yelled "Sit down and give us a chance at the air!"

Then the thin man turned his back on the car with a bored air, caught some more of the wind in his coat, and a big Italian with a fierce mustache hissed wickedly. More yells of "Sit down!" followed. Then the wicked-eyed Italian, jumped from his seat and stood in the aisle between the thin man and the wind, his jaw set grimly. That act relieved the tension and prevented a fight. Even the men saw the humor of the situation and in an instant they shouted with laughter. Even the thin man, who would not be intimidated, smiled faintly.

"Now, be a good fellow, come and sit down," coaxed a big German. "We want some air, too."

And the little man walked to the nearest vacant seat and took it, the Italian following grimly.

The congress was attended by 225 delegates. Count Heyden, leader of the deputation, representing the congress recently received by the Emperor, presided.

M. Foloyine, president of the organizing committee, had barely started a statement dealing with the obstacles placed in the way of the congress, announcing that Governor-General Kozloff had promised there would be no recourse to extreme measures, when the chief of police, backed by a large number of police officials, entered the room.

The chief announced that the prefect had prohibited the meeting of the congress and ordered the seizure of the documents.

Count Heyden protested against the proceedings, but the chief of police began taking the names of the delegates.

Then cries were raised of:

"Write in the whole of Russia."

Many persons present, who were not delegates to the congress, requested that their names also be taken.

The police then departed in order to draw up summonses, and the sitting was resumed.

The scheme of a national assembly on the basis outlined by the commission presided over by M. Bouligin, Minister of the Interior, was minutely and critically discused and denounced as totally inadequate to remove Russia's internal grievances because, including a property qualification and an electoral system by classes, it prevented the assembly from truly interpreting the will of the nation, while the exclusion of numerous categories of citizens from the franchise was a contradiction of the principles of equity and reasonable state policy.

At the same time, it was recognized that the proposed assembly would compromise a considerable portion of the forces of the empire and serve as the center of a social movement which would tend to secure political liberty and regular national representation.

Therefore, it was considered to be desirable that, in the event of the carrying out of the Bouligin or a similar project, the delegates of the Zemstvos and municipalities should participate in the assembly to the greatest possible extent, with the object of forming a compact group and to obtain a guarantee of individual and public liberties.

Numerous resolutions embodying the foregoing criticisms were adopted unanimously, as were sections complaining of excessive administrative and police control of elections and asking that publicity be given to the proceedings of the proposed assembly without interference from the council of the empire.

THE SHIP TRUST LOSES MILLIONS

Morgan's Combine Shows a Shortage of $2,939,895.

NOW CONTROLLED BY ENGLISH

Rate War Between the Rival Lines Is Blamed for the Decrease in Earnings.

New York, July 20.—The International Mercantile Marine Company, otherwise known as the ship trust, one of the giant corporations organized by J. Pierpont Morgan, confessed in its annual report Tuesday to a loss of $2,939,895 for the year ending Dec. 31 last. The story is a most astonishing one, for it deals solely in big figures, and tells a tale that can scarcely be equaled of a three-year struggle to make the concern a paying investment.

When Mr. Morgan went abroad and scooped into his big net a steamship company here and another one there, Americans did a lot of boasting about the strength of native genius and capital. Everybody was proud of Mr. Morgan and of his many accomplishments in the way of big financial deals, and the word went around the world that within a short time the entire commerce of the world would float in American bottoms. Now one of the biggest of the many ventures of Mr. Morgan is in such a bad way that there will have to be another extension of the period allowed for the underwriting of the bonds of the company.

An interesting feature of the situation is that the New York Life Insurance Company has $3,200,000 worth of the bonds of the company, which it bought at par, while the Equitable Society has only $500,000 worth that it paid only 89 for. George W. Perkins, a partner of Mr. Morgan, is vice-president of the New York Life Company at a salary of $25,000 a year, and he is also chairman of the finance committee of that company.

The International Mercantile Marine was organized in December, 1902, with a capital of $120,000,000 divided equally into preferred and common stock, and $50,000,000 worth of bonds were sold at 4 per cent interest.

The new company, under the direction of Clement A. Griscom, president, had a hard time of it to earn enough money to meet the dividends. But they were religiously met and the company went along without any talk of a kind that would injure its stock.

English Took Control.

The steamship lines taken in by the company were the White Star, the American, the Dominion, the Atlantic Transport and the Leyland. Nearly all of these lines had English registry and there was a large amount of English capital invested in the enterprise. Mr. Morgan had an arrangement with the English holders that guaranteed the payment of a certain dividend upon their stock, and when a failure to pay resulted the English would have the right of managing the concern.

To pay the interest on the 50,000,000 worth of bonds was all the company could do. It could not earn another cent, and so the English interests complained a lot and finally insisted upon putting one of their own men at the head of the company. They had their way and Mr. Griscom was retired, and J. Bruce Ismay elected president.

But the situation got worse and there was a prospect that even the interest on the $50,000,000 would be in default. The net earnings decreased from $4,000,532 in 1904 to $1,806,407 in 1905, so that in place of a surplus of $1,797,797, which the books showed in December, 1903, there was a shortage of $1,142,098 in December, 1904, making a total loss in one year of nearly $3,000,000.

Mysterious Rise in Stocks.

With the news of the company's loss, came a good deal of speculation as to why there was a bull movement in the company's stock about three weeks ago that resulted in lifting the common three points and the preferred about seven points. But when the news of the actual situation struck Wall street Tuesday, the common fell half a point and the preferred one-quarter of a point.

President Ismay said that the poor showing of the company was largely due to the depression in freight rates in the North Atlantic during the latter part of 1904. While the traffic had been large, the company's ships carrying 26.51 per cent of the total, the earnings were effected by the cut in passenger rates.

"The unfortunate situation was occasioned," said Mr. Ismay, "through the unexpected establishment, by the Cunard Line, of a new service to the continent, which seriously menaced the business of the continental lines. The latter, in reprisal, made a counter attack upon the Cunard.

"Though rates have been restored to a more remunerative basis, no permanent agreement has been reached, but an adjustment may be expected at any time. The fact that a good many of the securities are held abroad gives the company an international character, and this should bring about a better understanding among the great steamship companies."
