SECRETARY TAFT STARTS LAST LAP

Republican Candidate Tells of Work Done in States He Expects to Carry.

New York, Oct. 27.—William H. Taft reached New York last night from Gary, Ind., where he closed the campaign in that state. The eighteen-hour journey afforded the candidate complete rest from talking and he took advantage of the opportunity to the fullest extent. Upon arriving he said he felt in first-class physical condition, although somewhat hoarse.

Henry W. Taft met his brother at the station and took him to his residence, where he will spend the night.

The first lap of Mr. Taft's eastern campaign will begin with a run to New Haven, Conn., which will begin at 10:30 o'clock. The Taft special will again be in New York at 4:30 o'clock, and in the evening Mr. Taft will address a meeting in Brooklyn.

After the election is over Mr. Taft is planning to take a brief rest.

"I have campaigned in 21 states," said Mr. Taft tonight. "I expect to carry all of them with the exception of those south of Mason's and Dixon's line, and possibly Maryland and Missouri. The situation looks better than at any previous time, and I shall enter upon the last lap of the campaign with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm."

The journey from Gary to New York was made without incident. Stops were made only to change engines, and the record speed of the 18-hour trains from Chicago was maintained.

Mr. Taft talked freely during the evening to various callers, in all cases expressing confidence in the outcome of the campaign. Asked to particularize as to the results in various states, Ohio, for instance, Mr. Taft said he hadn't a doubt but that Ohio would be strongly for him.

"If I couldn't carry my own state I wouldn't deserve to be running for president," he said.

The presidential candidate expressed great appreciation of Governor Hughes' service in behalf of the national ticket. The New York governor's work in the west, Mr. Taft thought, had demonstrated beyond all question Mr. Hughes' right to a distinctive place in the national political field, and had been of great value to the Republican cause.

TORONTO PAPERS ON RESULT SLANDER CAMPAIGN FAILED

Says the Globe—Conservative Party Misled By a Bad Press—World Says Borden Must Shake Off Some of His Barnacles—Mail and Empire Professes to Be Pleased.

THE GLOBE.

The campaign of slander has utterly failed. If it had succeeded the politics of Canada would have been vitiated for a generation. If a Government could be vilified out of office there would have been a temptation to make that species of tactics a constant feature of our campaigns. Nothing could be more injurious to the fair fame of Canada than to substitute for frank and fair discussion of great questions cries of scandal, personal recriminations, and oceans of slanders.

But the people were not deceived. The election returns throughout the Dominion furnish a stinging rebuke to the instigators of this shameful campaign. The electors did more than that. They decided to leave the chief slanderers at home, Bennett, Fowler, Lefurgey, Cockshutt are left at home to reflect on their ways. The men they slandered, Sifton, Turriff, Pugsley, have been returned by handsome majorities, while Mr. Brodeur was returned by acclamation. Every cabinet minister has been re-elected. If there ever was a more striking example of the engineer being hoist by his own petard it has not come under our observation.

The Conservative party has been misled by a bad press. For the past ten years its leading organs have done nothing but curse and revile. So much so that the old Conservative mouthpiece in this city was recognized even by its friends to have lost all its influence by its steady torrents of Billinsgate. Abuse ceased to have any meaning in its columns. The only way it could hurt a public man was to praise him. In this crux it was thought necessary to enlist the services of a less sullied advocate. The pure-robed neophyte was instructed to sing The Mail's tunes with its sweet young voice. It was deemed that they would find more acceptance than from the old and battered leading basso. The experiment does not appear to have been a success. If advice might be accepted from the camp of the enemy, we would counsel a change of tune instead of a change of singer.

A gratifying feature of the contest in Ontario is the number of promising young men who secured election. A delegation consisting of such men as ex-Speaker Sutherland, F. F. Pardee, Hugh Guthrie, Chas. Murphy, Mackenzie King, Lloyd Harris, Manley Chew, F. L. Fowke, Dr. Morley Currie, A. B. McCoig—and the list might be lengthened—will do honor to Ontario. They form a guarantee that this Province will take its fair place in the councils of the nation.

MAIL AND EMPIRE.

Yesterday's encounter with King Graft did not result in the destruction of that evil. But it inflicted heavy losses upon the enemy, and that of itself is a good sign. In the great centres of thought—Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Winnipeg, Victoria and New Westminster—enormous gains were made by the opponents of dishonesty; and the majorities in most cases were overwhelming. Throughout the West, the people, although fettered by the ruling faction, entered their protests against the policy of greed, and succeeded in weakening the influence of Sifton, in defeating Mr. Templeman, one of the ministers, and in purging Parliament of Burrows, the man who holds so large a proportion of the timber berths.

Yesterday's verdict is somewhat similar to that recorded by this Province just before the great awakening, which brought the carnival of crookedness to an end. It is an indorsement of unworthy politicians extorted by promises that are corrupt and by practices that are illegal.

THE WORLD (CONSERVATIVE).

The moral of the federal contest of yesterday, if it has any lesson, is that both parties must reorganize, must reconstruct, must reform.

The people have told Sir Wilfrid that they disapprove of extravagance, of scandal, of maladministration in some departments and of inefficiency in others.

The people have told the Conservatives that they, too, must reconstruct, drop the men who have handicapped them, get a more progressive platform, before they will be intrusted with the management of public affairs.

Mr. Borden is a better and stronger man today than ever before. He has grown. But he has been hampered by an effort more or less marked for twelve years to maintain the Tupper tradition, a very ancient and decadent cult. He has been hampered by men who grew smaller and smaller, and more and more picayune. The Plum Tree Club, as the Montreal Star called the landseekers, were a drag on his party. He has been hampered most of all by a dread to call a great federal convention to promulgate a platform in keeping with the ideals of younger Canada. An opposition should delight in holding conventions, in laying down advanced platforms.

He was also hampered by men in his party who were known enemies of the public ownership planks that he professed. The La Presse-Russell episode cost him more, perhaps, that he yet knows, by the secret power that it gave Sir Wilfrid over certain of those who had claimed to be Mr. Borden's friends. This whole incident is a story yet to be told.

Sir Wilfrid has passed through the fire and has come out not unscorched. He is in power for another term. What will he do to get in line with public opinion? Will he discard anyone, will he insist on more efficiency in the conduct of public business, will he drive out, will he scourge the men who have defiled the temple of state? The public have given him a new lease of power on the express stipulation that he clean his house, and fumigate his corridors.

The voice of the people is for sweeping reforms in both parties.

DETROIT FREE PRESS.

The Detroit Free Press says: A feature of the returns which will have considerable interest to Americans is that the business depression does not seem to be much of a factor in elections this fall. Times have been hard in Canada, as well as on this side of the line during the last six months. Many political prophets believed that this influence would be found powerful in the Dominion contest and that Laurier had made a mistake in calling the contest before next summer. It was argued on both sides of the international border that no government could succeed in an election in such times.

The Liberal success, therefore, should give our own prognosticators matter for reflection. Conditions in both countries are much the same, and it is reasonable to look for similar results on this side next week.

DESPITE WIND AND WAVE

Seven Men Swim Ashore From Stranded Boat in Heavy Sea.

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 27. — Kenosha had the third serious marine mishap in a week late last night, when the steamer William Engle, fishing from this port, went on the beach off Camp Logan.

Captain W. J. Barnett, Engineer Cornell and five members of the crew left the stranded boat and swam to the beach to save themselves.

Today the members of the life-saving crew and two tugs made an effort to release the boat, but she is so firmly grounded that the efforts were abandoned on account of the heavy seas, and it will be necessary to wait for a change of weather. In the meantime the vessel, which is valued at $9,000, may be torn to pieces by the heavy seas.

MILNER TALKS ON EMPIRE PROBLEMS

He Would Have a Uniform System of Military Training.

Toronto, Oct. 27. — A tremendous crowd gathered in the convocation hall of the University of Toronto tonight to hear Lord Milner deliver an address under the auspices of the Canadian Club.

His lordship's theme was that of "The Empire and Its Problems." On his stepping to the front to address the gathering everyone in the hall rose and cheered him, and a similar demonstration was accorded at the close of his address. In part he said that the conception of the empire as an organic whole was gaining ground throughout the British Isles and the self-governing colonies and other possessions of the crown. For his part he did not believe that it was necessary in order to bring this about that there should be first agreed upon some sort of council for the whole empire. Every one of the self-governing states could take the first practical steps by putting its own house in order and making itself strong enough to bear a proper share of its responsibilities in the empire. By this he did not mean to raise the question of shifting the burden from the shoulders of the motherland, but rather that there should be established new centres of strength in the empire.

One way in which this could be done would be in the shape of sound military organizations with training arms and equipment on a similar basis, so that there would be no confusion or chaos when combination was needed or found necessary. There should not be any rigid mold about this, however, as conditions naturally varied, and what would be applicable in its carrying out in one country would not fit another. He suggested interchange of civil service, as well as of military officers, throughout the empire, and believed in a common system of naturalization for the empire, that was to say, that once a man had become a British citizen his citizenship should be recognized in all countries under the British flag.

In an address to the Empire Club tomorrow night it is understood that Lord Milner will deal with trade and tariff matters.

TIMELY WARNING TO ROOSEVELT

President Has Small Chance of Surviving Perils of the African Jungles.

New York, Oct. 27.—When President Roosevelt allowed it to be annouced that at the end of his presidency he would go to Africa with his second son, Kermit, a boy still under twenty, in search of big game, the American people, knowing little of Africa, took it as another phase of the president's many-sided character, without considering more than "big game" chances.

Baron A. B. d'Altomonte, who for nearly four years was commandant of the police forces in the Congo Free State, and later headed the six months' hunting expedition of Prince Elie Zurnikoff in British East Africa, believes that it is folly for a man of President Roosevelt's age to tempt the fevers and miasmas of Africa. He says it is exceedingly dangerous to take a boy of Kermit Roosevelt's age into the jungle.

The baron says: "How will President Roosevelt hunt in East Africa? Will he take a train at Mombasa, put himself in an open car in front of the engine and shoot, while passing, at herds of wild elephant or antelope? No, surely. He will be forced by his own very daring nature to hunt following the precepts of Nimrod, in the only grand way, with all the trouble and all the dangers of the grand battue.

"This will necessitate camping at night in the damp plains, among high grass, full of insects and mosquitoes, or on the border of the muddy and pestilential river —home of the tsetse fly—or in the tenebrous and treacherous forest, full of miasmas and dampness. He will be forced to the long wait lying in ambush for the approach of the elephant; he will have to face the torrid heat of the rocky and naked altitudes to hunt for the lion and the antelope; he will have to cross the putrid bottom of the valleys to watch for the rhinoceros, and with this last one some time he will be compelled to find the running strength of his youth.

"These are the general and particular dangers of a hunting party in Africa, without mentioning the miseries of the daily life—bad water, the rainy season, the fly pests, the inflammation of the skin caused by perspiration, the nights without sleep on account of the heat, and a hundred other things.

"To be short, I come to this conclusion, that whoever suggested or did not dissuade President Roosevelt from going to Africa has erred. He is 50 years old, and at his age he would encounter many dangers in Africa merely as a traveller; but as a hunter he will face the greatest perils of his life.

"Apart from the African fever and dysentery and other tropical diseases, President Roosevelt has another great enemy in his constitution, which is far from being perfect, though the average man may believe it is.

"1. The African sun is death-dealing to highly excitable and full-blooded men.

"2. A man who so quickly loses his temper, as does the president, is subject when confronted with the miserable difficulty of the African life to a special form of bilious fever, which decomposes the blood and causes death in twenty-four hours. It is known as Hematurique' fever.

"Here is the percentage table of mortality in Central Africa, as compiled by the African Travelling Association of London.

Age.	Death.	Life.
Twenty-five to thirty years.....	50	50
Thirty to thirty-five years.....	60	40
Thirty-five to forty years.....	65	35
Forty to sixty years.....	70	30
Fifty to sixty years.....	85	15
Under twenty and over sixty.....	95	5

"The mortality of Congo Free State which employees is 35 per cent in Lower Congo and 60 per cent in Upper Congo, as recognized by Commandant Charles Lemaire, the famous Belgian explorer and authority on all African questions.

"The real, the terrible, the unavoidable danger is the African fever. Very few white people can say that they have visited the centre of Africa without having fallen ill with this terrible disease. Among thousands of explorers and hunters hardly any have been spared from it, and these for some special reason or for an extraordinary physical constitution.

"Dr. Henry Drummond, one of the most intelligent African travellers, speaking of this, says: 'I never knew of a white man who lived in Central Africa three months without a dangerous attack of the fever.'

"The same is repeated by Major Charles Lemaire, the famous Belgian explorer, and by James Edward Alexander, Henry Rowley, C. D. Lamphugh and William Walter Fitzgerald—men that have crossed Africa several times and have explored East Africa. All agree to the fact that nobody, under normal conditions, can be spared from the fever."

President Roosevelt celebrated his 50th birthday on Oct. 25.

DUCK-SHOOTERS MISSING.

Toronto, Oct. 27. — John Devins, a confectioner at Sunnyside, and Edward Exton, a motorman on the Mimico division of the York' radial, are missing and great anxiety is felt for their safety. The two men went duck-shooting yesterday morning in the Devins punt, and it is feared they may have capsized and a double fatality resulted. Searching parties composed of friends of the missing men have been out ever since uneasiness was evinced by the families of the latter.
