Answer to the Cry of Mothers and Fathers Is Locked in the Deep

Graphic Story of How Terrific Impact of Collier Drove Empress of Ireland Down in Fourteen Minutes.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]

QUEBEC, May 30—The grim and harrowing tale of the latest marine disaster which has shocked the world into a realization of the perils of the high seas unravels hour by hour. Every syllable is black with tragedy. The Empress of Ireland, Queen of the C.P.R. transatlantic liners, freighted with human souls and rammed to her very vitals by the collier Storstad, lies 50 fathoms deep in Ct. Lawrence Gulf. Half a continent this morning is plunged into an intensity of grief as the horrifying nature of the tragedy grows more apparent. Every word that comes, every flash of the wire brings a stab of poignant grief to men, women and children scattered all through America and the United Kingdom. Messages and appeals are crowding the wires to Montreal, Quebec and the bleak shores of Rimouski. Fathers are asking for their sons, mothers are crying for their children, but thus far answers of comfort to the vast majority are locked in the deep.

Terrifying Awakening.

The setting of the tragedy itself was fearful in its dramatic moment. The Empress, lying dead still off Father Point, was wrapped in the repose of midnight. A dense, suffocating fog lay about the liner like a woollen blanket. Every moment the great fog siren on the liner opened with a long rendering boom, and far across the water came the responding bellow of the horn on the old headland. Suddenly, without warning, a huge black bulk loomed through the fog and in a moment the crash came. Simultaneously with the shout of the officers and the command from the bridge, rose one long, piercing scream from the throats of more than a thousand who slept below. That cry was heard on the mainland, thirty miles away.

In the dimness of their cabins women snatched for their children and valuables and rushed for the deck.

A Mortal Blow.

In a moment the fate of the Empress was known to all. The one smashing blow had done for her and the great bull nose of the 3500-ton freighter had crashed through the ribs and bulkheads. The one pithy sentence of Capt. Kendall summed all. "The ship is gone," he said, "Women to the boats."

Fourteen minutes settled the whole affair. With the decks careening, the captain, officers and crew strove like fiends to release the boats. One after one, laden with a mass of humanity, sped away. The Storstad followed suit with as much ability, but the time was too brief.

Prow Twisted Skyward.

Boats there were a plenty, but time there was none.

When the listing increased and the nose of the ill-fated liner twisted skyward, panic seized upon the harde of persons, and once more a loud, prolonged burst of agony from several hundred throats vibrated through the fog. or a moment the decks were awash, and then with a spasmodic heave as if giant hands from below were pulling her down the massive sea castle tilted to the bottom. Wreckage, spars and bobbing heads, and the few small boats fleeing on sides from the vortex with the slow heaving bulk of the collier in the background alone marked the scene of the catastrophe.

With the City Police

John Howard, an Eagle Place resident, was this morning charged at the police court with a heinous offence against the laws of morality. He was undefended and entered no plea, saying he did not comprehend and desired t oengage a lawyer. The case was therefore adjourned until Monday.

Meeting Tonight

There will be a meeting tonight of the relatives and friends of those who lost their lives in the wreck of the Empress of Ireland, at the city hall, to elect a representative to go to the funerals of the deceased.

City News Items.

Offer Signs.

The Ontario Motor League have offered the city signs at 25 cents each, bearing the inscription, City of Brantford, Speed Limit, Fifteen Miles.

Plants Stolen.

Several residents of William street are indignant at the destructive capers of some unknown person who has lately been pulling flowers and carrying potted plants away. Yesterday a beautiful rubber plant was taken from one lawn, while geraniums were stolen from another. A watch has been kept and not yet unearthed the offender who, the residents say is either youthful or malicious.
