examining that copy, as were the judges resident at the Capital, and that a great deal of inconvenience had resulted from the Goverment's failure to keep its promise in reference to the printing of the work.

He was always interested when listening to the speeches of the hon. gentleman from St. John, (Mr. Elder) who seemed to be the Gatling gun of the Government, but he thought the hon. gentleman had gone to far in the exercise of his power, on the present occasion. He (Mr. Tweedie) was sorry about the St. John fire, but he never realized how bad it really was in its effects until he heard his hon. friend drawing the pathetic picture which made his tender-hearted friend, the Provincial Secretary, cry. He objected to that kind of thing for he looked upon it as inconsistent on the part of the hon. gentleman from St. John to be guilty of using undue "clerical influence." Joking aside, he admired the hon. gentlem an's speech, while he could not help feeling that he was prostituting his talents and great powers of oratory in an attempt to delude hon. members with the fallacies of argument which he placed before them. There was no great necessity for talking at any great length over the matter, for even the hon. gentleman knew there was no analagy between the printing of the Dominion Statutes and that of the consolidated laws of New Brunswick. The fact was that the Government made a mistake when they assured the House and country that they would have the laws printed in May. They knew, no doubt, at the time that it could not be done, yet they were willing to come to the House and pretend they could do it and go back, as usual, and keep pushing their work ahead of them. As they failed to keep their word, and inconvenienced the judges, legal profession and the public, it was not wrong or unfair for the House to express regret in reference to the matter, especially when there was no particular necessity for the promise of the early printing of the Statutes being made, because the old ones as they stood were sufficiently good to serve for the administration of justice until 1878. He agreed with the Government that it was well to postpone the holding of the proposed exhibition for one year, on account of the St. John fire; but he also agreed in the regrets expressed in the resolution on the subject of the Statutes of the province, therefore, he would vote for it.

TUESDAY, Sept. 4th

There was considerable discussion yesterday on several measures, none, however, on the bill providing for the expenses of the session, involving $7,340.

The Secretary committed a bill relating to debentures, Mr. Flewelling in the chair. The measure was similar in its provisions to that introduced by the Secretary on Wednesday last. The portion relating to the issue of duplicate debentures and coupons to replace those lost by the fire, passed without question. The sections relating to the selling of railway debentures at not less than par and expenses of selling, having come up, Mr. Davidson objected, claiming that the Government had already power to issue the debentures under the Act of 1875, and it was only necessary that they should now be authorized to sell them and devote the proceeds to the purposes set apart for them, and Railway Subsidies Act. He moved an amendment to that effect.

The Secretary argued, however, that the Davidson amendment, which was to strike out several sections of the Government bill, was open to the construction that the net proceeds of the sale of debentures were to be paid to the railway companies instead of the profit that might arise by reason of the premium, which the securities commanded, going to credit of Provincial treasury. The bill as he (the Secretary), proposed to have it, if it passed, would provide in terms that the proceeds were to be paid to the Receiver General and become part of the ordinary revenues of the Province, and it being provided already by the Subsidies Act that the Government could pay the railway companies in money at the rate of five thousand dollars per mile, or by handing them debentures at six per cent, the Government, in selling the debentures and paying $5,000 per mile were only exercising an option which was given to them already.

The above formed the subject on which a lively three hours' debate was held. With two or three exceptions, it was admitted by all that the Province had a right to take advantage of the fact that its credit was so good as to secure a premium for its bonds, the main difference of opinion being as to whether Mr. Davidson's amendment of the sections of the bill, which he proposed to supersede by it, presented the most desirable form in which to make the provisions sought.

Messrs. Covert, Willis, Burns, Davidson and others, in opposition, said that the Government had passed a bill the other day which gave them most extraordinary powers. It provided for the issue of debentures to any amount and to run any length of time the Government pleased, while there was no restriction as to the disposition that was to be made of the money. Now, after the bill had been defeated in the Upper House, the Government was willing to come back and seek the enactment of another bill, limiting the time the debentures would run to thirty years, and restricting the use of the proceeds to the payment of railway subsidies.

Mr. Pickard thought the railways were entitled to five thousand dollars a mile, as provided by the act of '74; but as the companies would do no more than fulfil the letter of the law, while they might fall short in complying with its spirit, there was nothing that ought to require the Province to forego the benefit of its own credit when it would do no wrong to any one. He thought it should be made clear that the debentures should only be sold to meet payments to which companies were actually entitled, and that debentures were to run for thirty years.

The Secretary said Mr. Pickard had only anticipated him, as he intended to make the provisions suggested in the form of amendments.

Mr. Swim thought the bill sought no injury to contractors or railway companies, because the Government had already the option of giving either money or debentures. If they sold their debentures and thus provided the money required, where was the wrong

He thought the matter was one which ought to be looked upon in a common sense business-like way, and as all were agreed that it was well to give the Province the advantage of the credit, the bill, as proposed to be amended by the Secretary, should be accepted.

Mr. Tweedie thought the Government had a right to make money out of their credit but he deprecated the careless preparation of the former bill and this bill also which the Secretary proposed to amend. Notwithstanding what the judge lately appointed for the Parish Court of Blissfield, Mr. Swim, said, he believed Mr. Davidson's amendment sound and would vote for it.

Mr. Elder, the Attorney-General and other members took part in the debate, and there being a division on Mr. Davidson's amendment the names were Yeas—Covert, Willis, McLeod, Burns, Ryan, Johnson, Davidson, Tweedie.

Nays—Fraser, King, Kelly, McQueen, Crawford, Perley, Murchie, Marshall, Phillips, McKay, J. Ryan, Robinson, Dow, Barker, Humphrey, Pickard, Elder, Swim, Rogers.

Mr. Burns suggested that the rate of interest instead of being put on the bill as six per cent, be made to read at a rate not exceeding six per cent. This was discussed for some time, but not being put in the form of a motion was not voted upon, and the bill was finally passed with some amendments proposed by the Provincial Secretary.

Drowned.

On Saturday last Patrick Keoghan, of Chatham, was drowned at Kerr's mill while working at the ship Director. From the testimony given at the inquest, held by Dr. Bishop, it appears that Keoghan and Kelly were on a stage at the bow of the ship and Kelly was preparing a strap for his companion to fasten a block to, when one of the lines holding the stage parted and it dropped, throwing deceased into the river. He struggled for a short time but soon sank and did not rise again. It is thought he must have struck something in his descent.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon and was largely attended.

Calls.

At a congregational meeting held at Tabusintac in the forenoon, and at Burnt Church in the afternoon, of Monday last, the Rev. W. Wilson, Moderator of Session, presiding, the Trustees and Elders of Tabusintac nominated the Rev. Mr. Fogo, and upon the nomination being submitted to the congregation, it was heartily agreed to, and a call was signed in accordance therewith, and a subscription list opened and very cordially signed by those present. At the afternoon meeting at Burnt Church the nomination and call were confirmed and signed by this section of the congregation. If Rev. Mr. Fogo accept this call, the union will, no doubt, be a happy and prosperous one.

We have much pleasure in directing attention of our readers to the advertisement of this institution in this week's ADVANCE. The public scholastic exhibition held at the close of last term must have given those who had the pleasure of seeing it, a good idea of the general efficiency of the pupils of the institution and appreciation of the teaching abilities of the instructors. The present term opens with a few changes and improvements in the already efficient management; including the direction of the classical course by the priest connected with the Cathedral, for the benefit of young men studying for the priesthood. The commercial course will be, as usual, thoroughly efficient in its management and give valuable aid to the aspirant to the counting room. In the imparting of instruction in all branches of a good education the staff of this institution will be found to be proficient.

During the vacation many improvements have been made in the external and internal arrangement of the building, in view of accommodating a larger number of boarders.

A PAINFUL ACCIDENT AT THE ALBION MINES.—On the 26th ult., as a group of ladies were inspecting the hoisting machinery of the Albion Mines near Pictou, N. S., one of them, Miss Saunders, entered the building and stood under a moveable beam which descended and crushed her head in a frightful manner so that it is thought she cannot recover.

THE "FREEMAN"—The St. John Freeman which was issued on Wednesday last, for the first time since the fire, presents a neat and creditable appearance. The following statement is made by it:

Circumstances have for some time rendered a change in the financial and business management desirable, and this change has also been made on such terms that Mr. Anglin, while he remains editor-in-chief, is relieved from the responsibilities of the business to which, owing to his long absence from the Province every winter, and the nature of the other duties he has to discharge, he found it impossible to give the attention absolutely necessary.
