THE GREAT SHOW.

Preparations for the Western Fair Booming.

Entries for Four Speeding Contests—Excellent Special Attractions and Musical Organizations Engaged—Entries Away Ahead of Preceding Years.

Everybody is hustling at the Western Fair offices. A week from Thursday everything will be in readiness for the opening of Canada's great exhibition. On the following morning the show will be opened to the public. Saturday will be children's day, and the bicycle races promise to be unusually good. Monday will be Citizens' day, Tuesday, Germania day; Wednesday, Western Ontario and Farmers' day; Thursday, International day; Friday, Stockbreeders' day, and Saturday will end the Western Fair of 1893. On Wednesday excursions will be run from points throughout Western Ontario.

The Twenty-ninth Battalion (Berlin), Chatham, Seventh, "D" School and Indian bands and other musical organizations have been engaged.

Mr. W. J. Reid, the energetic chairman of the attractions committee, with his colleagues, has spared neither time nor money in securing the best attractions possible. Everything that has been engaged is of a high-class character, designed to educate both old and young.

Thirty thousand official programmes have been issued and distributed throughout Western Ontario.

Already the entry receipts are $1,500 ahead of any preceding year. The machinery space is completely filled, and applications for space in the main building have had to be refused.

Entries for four of the speeding contests have closed. They are as follows:

Three-minute trotting stake, Monday, Sept. 18. Entries—General Sprague, Wm. Wilson, Rodney; Dunmore, John Lankin, Granton; Rumor Jun., Wilson & Bell, Seaforth; Ellis Medium, J. Craig, Hamilton; Mack Wilks, J. W. Prangley, Strathroy; Lone Star, H. Overmeyer, St. Thomas.

DEAD BY THE RECORD, YET ALIVE

Mrs. Quinn Buries Her Husband's Body Only to Find Him in a Hospital.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Marcus A. Quinn is dead so far as the records go, yet he is alive. He was entered as dead in the books at the morgue and at the bureau of vital statistics; a body was buried in consecrated ground in the Calvary Cemetery as his, and yet on Thursday he was found alive in the hospital of the almshouse, a pneumonia patient. Mrs. Marcus A. Quinn intered a body as that of her husband after it had been dragged out of the East River on the evening of Aug. 11. She had the body exhumed from the potter's field and gave it a decent burial on Aug. 21. She wept in sorrow and donned widow's weeds. She and her friends believed that she was a widow for full two weeks.

Then her son-in-law, John McCarthy, discovered that it was all a sad mistake. In a visit to the hospital on Tuesday, McCarthy saw a patient who he was sure was the missing Quinn. He told Mrs. Quinn of his discovery and Wednesday morning she was at the bedside of her husband, reproaching him for sending her no word of his whereabouts. Quinn was formerly engaged as a teacher on Hart's island, where he met his present wife. He has been connected with public institutions of the city for several years and of late has been occupied as messenger in the office of Warden McNamara in the almshouse. He visited his wife's home every four or six days and then returned to the island, but she had seen little of him of late. His last call on her was on May 30. He came to the city on leave of absence on Aug. 7. Having been long away from his friends they gave him a warm, enthusiastic welcome, and it is said he imbibed freely and afterward wandered about aimlessly. One of his stepsons saw him and told Mrs. Quinn of it. She became alarmed when time passed and he did not call on her. She sent to Blackwell's Island and learned that he had been away a number of days and there was no clew of him.

Then she went to police headquarters and saw a description of the body of a man found off pier 9, East River, Aug. 11. To Mrs. Quinn this description tallied with the description of her husband in every particular. She had the body reinterred, and after burial applied at the office of the Continental Life Insurance Company for insurance money amounting to $165. The claim agent of the company locked the matter up and was satisfied. Mrs. Quinn got her money and went into mourning. But Quinn was not dead. He had contracted pneumonia in his wanderings about the city, and presenting himself to Superintendent of the Poor Blake was promptly returned to Blackwell's Island, where he arrived last Tuesday. He had been away nearly three weeks. The insurance company learned of Quinn's resurrection and demanded the return of their money, which was promptly complied with.
