A SHOT IN THE DARK.

"Of course she looks paler," answered Mrs. Clarence, willing to turn away the young man's anxiety. "It is only natural. A month's nursing after a great shock is not exactly the way to get roses. She will be all right again as soon as you get away from this ill-omened—do forgive me, Sir Kenneth—part of the world."

"I am quite up to traveling now," said Douglas, eagerly. "Mr. Stanford writes to me that he is coming down to Ilchemster on the 30th, a week from now. I should like to be there to see him."

"Mr. Jenkins says you may travel in a week," replied the widow, putting down her work and rising from her seat. "Do not look so doleful, Sir Kenneth," she added, with a gay glance at the young baronet, whose face had clouded over at the mention of departure. "Surely you are not going to bury yourself in these wilds much longer. For pity's sake leave the Hall to the partridges, pheasants and poachers, and return to civilized society."

"I should like to," he answered, ruefully, "but I really must not. Enough mischief has been caused by my absence and selfishness as it is. I must stick to it now, and try to make up for my evil deeds. Lancaster, I shall be wishing you a relapse."

"I'm not afraid of that," he replied, smiling; "but Mr. Jenkins——"

"Is here to answer for himself," laughed Mrs. Clarence, opening the window. "Good morning, Mr. Jenkins; your bird is talking of taking flight."

Mr. Jenkins—or the doctor, as the country folk called him—was a slender, well-looking man of five and thirty, well read and clever in his profession. His countenance was a pleasant one, except when a sneer crossed it, which was by no means seldom, for the medico piqued himself on his powers of sarcasm, which he was ill-tempered enough to prize.

"I am not sure whether his wings are strong enough," he replied, smiling. The gay widow, so witty and amusing, had quite bewitched him, and the kindness which had induced her to come down to the Maisonnette and help Andree in her attendance on her husband, had touched his better nature. "How do you feel this morning? Ah! there's a touch of fever! Have you been playing editor?"

"Not playing it—acting it, really," Sir Kenneth said, sulkily. "Did you ever hear of anything so Quixotic, Jenkins? Lancaster wants that fellow who shot him left alone."

"I did not know you had found him," said the surgeon, with his fingers on his patient's wrist.

"I mean if we do," flashed Sir Kenneth.

"Oh!" the other answered, slowly. "Well, after all, punishing him won't prevent the ill effects Mr. Lancaster will suffer from his act, and which he has suffered. You know the old proverb, Sir Kenneth—'let sleeping dogs lie.' If you come across him, well and good, punish him by all means; if you don't, better still—you will be forced to leave him alone."

"Will you agree to that, Lancaster?" said Donaldson, eagerly. "If I give up direct active search, give me permission to prosecute if I find him."

"If you discover him accidentally do as you think best," Douglas said, wearily. "I wonder where Andree is? I want you to see her, doctor."

Mrs. Clarence volunteered to go and call her, but she returned in a few minutes saying Andree had gone out, and the maid did not know what direction she had taken.

"I will call in the evening," Mr. Jenkins said. "I cannot wait now, as I have not yet been my rounds. You will leave us very disconsolate when you go, Mrs. Clarence. Indeed, I only know of two people who will be glad to see you gone."

"I know, I know," laughed she. "You mean the Kennys. I wish my husband had not asked me to leave them in the house; I should be charmed to turn them out."

"Not after Eliza's clever nursing," said Douglas, laughing.

"You owe her a good deal," said the surgeon; "but whether you owe a good deal to her husband and his chums is another matter. One debt quite counterbalances the other, that is my opinion."

"I am so sorry I let you come here," said Mrs. Clarence, regretfully.

"I am very glad you did," said Lancaster, with a glance at Sir Kenneth. "Friends are not so plentiful that one would not be willing to pay a tolerably dear price for the possession of such as we have found here. Are you going, Donaldson? Will you not stay and see Andree before you go?"

The baronet declined, alleging as an excuse an appointment with a troublesome tenant, as he made his farewell and walked down the garden with the surgeon, and when the latter had mounted his gig and driven away, Sir Kenneth set off at a round pace and walked rapidly down the lanes which lay between the Maisonnette and Wildlea Hall. He had not walked very far when he saw before him a graceful figure clad in a flowing morning dress, whose tasteful simplicity, unknown at Wildlea, spoke loudly for Andree Lancaster.

He hastened his steps, and in a moment was by her side. She turned to him, saying quickly:

"I was waiting for you, Sir Kenneth."

And while Sir Kenneth hurriedly expressed his pleasure at the rencontre, he noticed how deadly pale she was; how uneven and faltering her steps; how trembling the little hands; how full of fevered, frenzied anguish the sweet eyes.

"What is it?" he said, anxiously. "You are ill, Mrs. Lancaster. Good heavens! what is the meaning of this?"

She had sunk down on the road at his feet, and with her eyes, restless and glittering with the fever-light, raised to his face, and her hands clasping his arm in agonized supplication, she seemed to strive for sufficient composure to speak.

CHAPTER XIV.

"Good heavens!" repeated Sir Kenneth, "what is it? Mrs. Lancaster, rise—I entreat you, rise; I cannot speak to you thus; pray calm yourself. What has happened to agitate you thus? Have you been hurt—insulted? Has anyone dared to molest you?"

And, distressed to the highest degree by her passionate emotion, he pressed the little, trembling, burning hands in his, and, seeing that her shivering limbs could hardly support her, he made her sit down on the grassy bank which skirted the lane on either side. A burst of tears came to her relief.

"Will you let me call your maid?" he said, as she sobbed hysterically. "Nay; but I must get you some assistance; you are really ill, Mrs. Lancaster."

Unable to speak, she, with a movement of her hand, implored him to remain, and he sat down by her, waiting until the passionate emotion had partly subsided.

It must indeed have been a matter of the gravest moment which could thus agitate and distress the calm, self-possessed girl who six weeks ago would have scorned the very idea of showing any emotion before a comparative stranger; but it was evident that she could not control herself any longer, and that the anguish of mind she was enduring was intense. When her passionate tears had ceased she seemed almost too exhausted to speak, and Sir Kenneth was feeling rather vexed and nonplussed at the awkwardness of this adventure, and of his position, tete-a-tete with a woman who at first threatened him with hysterics, and then with a fainting fit, when she turned to him, and, in a voice faint and weak indeed, but quite calm, began:

"Forgive me, Sir Kenneth," she said, with a faint smile on her lips, which seemed to light up the intense mournfulness of her face and the deep shade lying in the sweet, dark eyes. "I must entreat your forbearance and your patience even before I apologize for troubling you with such a nervous attack; but I am in great trouble.

"If I can be of any assistance to you I need hardly say it will afford me great pleasure, not only for your sake, but for your husband's," he replied, kindly.

She shivered a little, and looked up at him with a weary helplessness on her face which struck him painfully.

"You are very good," she said. "Do you remember the first time we met you proved yourself a friend in need? It was on the day—that terrible night."

"Do not distress yourself by recalling those sad scenes," he said, soothingly. "If it be in my power to assist you, Mrs. Lancaster, I am ready and willing to do so for your sake as well as for your husband's."

YACHTING.

TRIAL RACES.

Chicago, July 23.—Milwaukee won the first of the trial races sailed Saturday to determine what boat shall be the defender of the Canada cup. Cadillac, of Detroit was second, 2 minutes and 33 seconds behind the Milwaukee. Nine boats sailed the course: Milwaukee and Orion, of Milwaukee; Detroit and Cadillac, of Detroit; Minota, Illinois, Briar, Yankee and Prairie, of Chicago. The Briar and Prairie were not in the race officially, and having regard to former events of this kind were out to try their speed against the newer boats. The original distance of 21 miles was observed. The race throughout was largely between Milwaukee and Cadillac.

TRIAL RACES FOR THE CANADA CUP.

Chicago, July 23.—The second trial race for the Canada cup was sailed yesterday afternoon in a northeast wind, averaging 20 miles an hour, and was won by the Cadillac, of Detroit; Detroit, of Detroit, second; Illinois, third; Minota, fourth, and Prairie, fifth. The last three boats are from Chicago. The Milwaukee, which won the first race, sailed on Saturday, lost her rudder 20 minutes after starting, and was compelled to drop out. The Yankee, of Chicago, and Orion, of Milwaukee, turned back, and did not go over the course. The course yesterday was nine miles to windward and return. The actual sailing time for the 18 miles was as follows: Cadillac, 2:29:32; Detroit, 2:41:50; Illinois, 2:42:15; Minota, 2:55:05; Prairie, 2:55:25.

CONSTITUTION AND COLUMBIA.

New York, July 23.—The race between the Constitution and Columbia on Long Island Sound yesterday again demonstrated that the Constitution is the swifter craft. In a light breeze and smooth water, over a 21-mile course, Columbia was defeated 4 minutes and 18 seconds, elapsed time.

THE OAR.

A HEARTY WELCOME.

With the band of the Bodyguards ahead, the victorious Argonauts, Winnipegs and Dons drove through the principal streets on their arrival from Philadelphia. The winning crews were in their four-in-hand drags, decorated with the club colors, with dozens of brooms, which gave a sort of "We sweep the sea" look to the procession. The reception was the most enthusiastic seen for many years—since Ned Hanlan came home. The westerners were as warmly greeted by the thousands at the wharf when the boat came in as the home men. A movement has been already set on foot to send the Argonauts to Henley next year. Major Harston, of the Argonauts, says they won easily, and were at no time hard pressed. After their victory over the Vespers, there has been no trouble in getting subscriptions to send them to Henley. Several of the Winnipeggers stayed over in Atlantic City, but all the Argonauts, except Goldman, were on hand. After the speeches of welcome by their reception committee, the oarsmen were entertained at dinner at the Argonaut club house.

TEN EYCK TO ALL COMERS.

Ten Eyck, the champion sculler, has concluded to retire from active participation in aquatics. The champion's decision has been approved of by his father, James A. Ten Eyck, and all officials of the Wachusetts Boat Club. In pursuance of his decision Ten Eyck gave out a statement, in which he says: "It is my wish before retiring to meet any and all amateur scullers in the world, provided I receive notice of their intentions before Aug. 1, 1901. I will impose but one condition, and that is that the race shall be rowed on Lake Quinsingamond, Worceser, Mass., over the old college course, the best and fairest course in the world."

BRITISH AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

London, July 23.—H. O. Blackstaffe, of the Vesta Rowing Club, won the Wingfield sculls, which carry the title of amateur sculling champion of Great Britain, in a race over the Thames championship course yesterday. Blackstaffe defeated his competitors in the event, G. Ashe and H. Cloutte, by 20 lengths. C. V. Fox, winner of the Wingfield sculls last year, did not defend his title in this year's contest.

The Bridal Feast

Is not infrequently followed by a long, lenten period of enforced fasting and fleshly mortification. The cheek grows hollow, the eyes are dull and deep ringed, and the step is slow and languid. There is an "all dragged-out feeling," which makes life an utter burden. The great functional changes which follow marriage are not usually anticipated, or the wifely suffering might be avoided.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best friend of weak and sickly women. It cures the womanly diseases that rob the eye of brightness and the step of lightness. It tones up the system and establishes the womanly organism on a basis of sound health.

LAY DOWN AFTER MEALS

Predicament of Mrs. Susan Coome, of Strathroy.

For the last fifteen years Mrs. Susan Coome, of this place, has been laboring under the heavy load of Dyspepsia. Her case has been long considered as hopeless by her friends, but strange to say the lady has at last found not only relief but a complete cure.

To say that those who know her are surprised but faintly expresses the general astonishment at the robust health Mrs. Coome now enjoys compared to what she has been for years.

For over fifteen years Mrs. Coome has had to lie down after meals. She could not eat any pastry, or if she did, she suffered for it. After every meal she was miserable with sour stomach and heartburn for hours. It seemed as though no food would digest.

Mrs. Coome tried remedy after remedy in vain. In fifteen years she tried every treatment for Dyspepsia within her means. Failure was the sole result in every case, and nobody but despaired of her ever again being well. But she is well. Her letter explains the whole matter.

"For fifteen years I have been afflicted with Dyspepsia," she writes. "I would suffer from sour stomach after the lightest meal and would have to lie down I felt so sick. If I ate the slightest bit of pastry I had to suffer for it. Nothing I ate would digest. I tried all sorts or remedies, but nothing gave relief until I heard of your Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. I used two boxes. Two boxes was all I took, and I am entirely cured. I can eat anything now without the slightest fear and feel as bright as a little child."

A dispatch from Eserpignan, France, states that a storm burst over the village of Halan yesterday, and the children, in accordance with the superstition that the church bells would drive away the lightning, went into the belfry to ring the bells. The belfry was struck by a lightning bolt, and four of the children were killed and five injured.

Disastrous Forest Fires—The Ottawa River Mystery—Escaped Convict Recaptured.

Ottawa, July 23.—The costliest and most extensive forest fire on record has raged this month in the Kippewa district. A gentleman familiar with the situation stated yesterday that the loss would at least total $500,000, and would probably run much higher. Heavy rains on Wednesday and Friday stopped the progress of the fire. As yet the owners have not had an opportunity to ascertain their losses. Gillies Bros., Braeside, are probably the heaviest losers. Their limits, 300 miles in extent, were burned over. Alex. Lumsden, M. P. P., who has limits near by, covering ten square miles, loses heavily. The fire seems to have centered on the Lumsden-Gillies' limits. J. R. Booth, 400 square miles; the Hull Lumber Company, 300 miles, are other losers. The fire was fought off these limits with success, and only small portions were burned. The limits of the Hawkesbury Lumber Company near by escaped. Part of the limits visited by the fires had been cut off, and the timber destroyed was only young pines.

OTTAWA RIVER MYSTERY.

Ottawa, July 23. — A new theory in the river mystery is gaining currency. It is that Miss Morrison was taken sick on the Saturday night before the body was found, and that she leaned over the cliff above the river, when she overbalanced and fell into the river. When the body was found the stomach was empty, and Miss Morrison's hand-satchel was found hanging on the fence at the place where it is supposed she fell over. A provincial detective is expected here to clear up the mystery.

ESCAPED CONVICT RECAPTURED.

Windsor, Ont., July 23. — Policeman Joe Elliott, of the Windsor police force, yesterday captured Andy Epperson, one of the Chatham escaped prisoners, for whom there is a reward of $500 offered. The identity of the prisoner was made known to the policeman by an employe of J. Piggott & Sons, lumber drawers, who had seen the fugitive in Chatham and recognized him as he was entering a small store on London street in the morning. The Chatham police have been notified.

A GALICIAN CONVICT'S SUICIDE.

Stony Mountain, Man., July 23.—A Galician named Wasyl, who was sentenced a couple of months ago to two months' imprisonment for attempting to shoot a woman, and when leaving the court room struck the woman and was given three years, in addition to his sentence for contempt of court, committed suicide in his cell in the penitentiary Sunday.

SYMPATHY WITH TRACKMEN.

Pembroke, Ont., July 23.—A public meeting in the interest of striking trackmen was held here last evening. The mayor presided, and the sympathy of the audience was strongly in favor of the trackmen. On the division of the C. P. R., from Ottawa and Brockville to Chalk River, all the trackmen but two went on strike on June 17.

SALE OF COAL LANDS.

Bathurst, N. B., July 23.—A coal deal of considerable importance was consummated here yesterday. David Mitchell, Pennsylvania Coal Company, Montreal, and Wm. Mitchell, of Drummondville, with others, have purchased the Chinoet and St. George mines, eight miles from here. The properties involve several miles of coal and 2,500 acres of land. The new company will be known as the Maritime Coal Company, and will expend many thousands in developing their newly - acquired property. They expect to have an output of 200 tons a day.

RUSH FOR OKLAHOMA

Fully 150,000 People Are After New Claims on Comanche Lands.

Fort Sill, O. T., July 23. — Disorder and distress will, it is feared, follow the actual opening of the Kiowa Comanche lands on Aug. 6. It is now said that fully 150,000 people will have registered for a chance to secure one of the 1,300 claims to be awarded by lottery when the registration booths close on July 26. Thousands of persons now on the reservations are neither mechanics nor artisans, and who have little or no money, but announce their intention of locating around Lawton if they shall fail to win a claim. Campers, who came in prairie schooners by the thousands, generally brought with them provisions sufficient to last only five to ten days. Continued drought has caused the water to be restricted, and for days a hot wind was blowing over the prairies, and the temperature has averaged above the 100 mark. With these conditions before them, many are already beginning to grumble, and when this shall be followed by failure to draw a lucky number the hopes of many will doubtless give way to more serious conditions.
