ADVANCE TIPS FOR BIG ONES

Steel Trust Financiers Were Protected, It Is Charged.

THE PUBLIC TO SUFFER

Wall Street Men Were Enabled to Sell Out Their Steel Stocks.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

New York, Oct. 29.—If a crime was committed by the organization of the U. S. Steel Corporation, United States Government is a party to that crime, for not only did it neglect to enforce the law, but it actually indorsed some of the things now complained of. If the crime committed was a great one, then the greater crime has been committed by the Government in attacking the Steel Corporation now for present purposes.

Only a year ago the decision was reached to permit the Steel Trust to adjust itself to what the Federal authorities conceived to be the law and thereby to avoid ligitation. But after long and mature deliberation the conclusion was reached that more voters could be gained by bringing suit for dissolution.

Advance Tips.

This was bad enough, but either by fair means or by foul, leading financiers got advance information that the suit would be brought and they were able to sell stocks and prepare for the market collapse, which has found the great body of Steel Trust shareholders and investors in general utterly unprotected. Investors will be properly punished for the crime of owning stock in a corporation that had the approval of the United States Government from the first day of its organization. It remains to be seen whether the men responsible for the outrage involved will also be punished by being retired from the positions of trust they have dishonored. The time is past for discussing the morals of trust breaking. The deadly results must now be considered.

Speaking at Chicago, President Taft said: "The law will be enforced to the letter. Now I hope that is understood."

At Milwaukee, the President said: "We shall enforce the law against everyone high and low, whether it be a trust or a trade union, the law shall be enforced. Then if the law works iniquity the law can be changed."

In the same address at Milwaukee, the President made it clear that by a "trade union" he meant organized labor.

After these statements by President Taft no one can doubt that the suit against the Steel Trust is only one of a long series against corporations, labor unions, jobbers associations, trade clubs and dinner parties. The administration can not back out. Nothing will save business men from prosecution but the amendment of the Sherman Anti-Trust law or the passage of a new law by Congress to replace it. President Taft says he will not favor amendment unless the law works iniquity through the prosecutions he has pledged himself to carry on. He can not be sure that the prosecutions will work iniquity until they are completed and therefore the campaign of wholesale prosecutions must continue for several years unless the Democratic party takes the whole matter out of the President's hands by putting a new law on business through Congress with such heavy majorities to pass it over his veto. Judging from the reported sentiments of the leaders in Congress, there is no prospect of this being done. Therefore investors are foe to foe with a condition demanding urgent attention.

Perhaps the most important thing for the general public to realize as stockholders is that the great financiers by reason of their advance information of what was being done at Washington have had an opportunity to project themselves by selling their stocks. The positive information that the suit will be brought against the Steel Trust may have been obtained by them through the dishonorable methods but they obtained it. They stand to lose nothing in the stock market, but rather to gain vast fortunes by snatching bargains on days of demoralization when the general public is frightened by sensational developments in the suits that will soon be under way.

Directors Informed.

The steel suit was filed after two months of secret preparation, but secret preparation only as regards the public, for it now appears that speculative directors of the Steel Trust had full knowledge of what was coming. It is only fair to say that the treachery of stenographers and printers at Washington is notorious, and the responsible officers of the Government may be perfectly innocent of stock market alliances in connection with this litigation. Anybody with sufficient money can purchase advance copies of most state papers long in advance of their publication.

The next important thing for investors who are not so fortunate as to be in touch with some treacherous private secretary at Washington is to remember the Government has not accomplished anything yet in its attempts to destroy the Standard Oil and the American Tobacco companies. Judging from conditions ruling at present in those two companies, nothing will be accomplished, or if anything the oil and tobacco trusts will come out of the struggle stronger than ever. All signs point to a year or two of depression. Stocks would have gone down even if the Government had adopted a different policy in connection with the trusts.

Any wholesale attempt to sell stocks will cause unnecessary panics in the market and enable the insiders to pick up bargains with the cash they were enabled to accumulate by reason of their advance information of the Government's plans.

FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Wall street, closing letter.—There was a more orderly irregular opening to the market this morning, followed by a stronger tone, in which prices rose ¼ to 1 point, the latter in Union Pacific. Steel gained ¾ and the preferred 1. Southern Pacific gained one point. After the first hour the rally petered out, and quotations dropped to or below opening figures in some cases, with but little feature of interest being shown. Rumors of a coming million for the D., L. and W. stockholders are in the air. Fears of attempts to prevent payments in future on Steel common by injunction are considered groundless. Some estimates have been made that the Morgan interests have bought 200 000 shares of Steel to protect the market. In the last half-hour prices strengthened, and the closing was at near high, with a better feeling prevailing. We still believe that better class of rails pay profits if bought on recessions.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The London market this morning indicated that today's session would be without unusual events. Were it not for the complex situation in the United States, growing out of the construction of legal proceedings as a vehicle to convey politicians into office, the improved foreign situation would attract investors from abroad to our market and we would be exchanging our securities for their gold. Despite the experimental form, the Government has conceived, by the action on the legal end in its contention against business corporations, it is evident that a distinction in all speculative and investment commitments will be drawn as between seasoned railroads and industrials which have to contend with this new form of political economy. We therefore advise the confinement of operations to railroad stocks for the present. We are of the opinion that purchases, followed with patience, will show fair rewards.

PRISONER FIRES ON PAL AND JUDGE

Wounds Fellow-Culprit Before Being Shot Down by Police Chief.

Mason City, Ia., Oct. 29.—Brought into court without being searched for weapons, Bob Gable today opened fire on his alleged partner in crime and on the Judge, prosecuting attorney and police who were in the court room.

Only one of his bullets took effect, lodging in the spine of Rex Kibbling, his fellow-prisoner. Before he was shot down by Chief of Police Lock, Gable succeeded in firing all the cartridges in his revolver.

Gable and Kibbling are at a local hospital, and attending surgeons say both probably will die. Gable's bullet penetrated Kibbling's intestines and liver before finding lodgment in his backbone. Chief Lock's single shot perforated Gable's lung and it is expected that hemorrhages will cause his death.

Defies Police For a Day.

The shooting was the culmination of an exciting 24 hours, in which police reluctance to arrest Gable enabled that young desperado to swagger about town, displaying a weapon whenever a patrolman approached him. When he finally agreed to go to the court room to be present at the trial of Kibbling on a charge of larceny, the policeman who had made the "arrest" was so relieved at his acquiescence that he waived the formality of disarming his "prisoner."

Kibbling, when placed on trial, said he had received a revolver from Gable with instructions to realize at least $1 50 by its sale. He was unable to sell the weapon, he said, and so had returned it to Gable.

"That's a lie," shouted Gable, as Kibbling finished his story.

"All right, Bob, have it your own way," Kibbling replied.

"This is my way!" Gable cried, drawing the revolver in question. He was only a few feet from Kibbling, and his first shot felled the 17-year-old boy, unconscious.

Shoots Wildly at Officers.

Gable then began shooting promiscuously, one of his bullets striking a photograph on Judge Rankin's bench and narrowly missing the jurist's head. The other shots were aimed at the policemen and court officials, but all went wild, and when the revolver was empty Chief of Police Lock's single shot was found to have found a mark.

Gable's defiance of the police started yesterday, when he was asked in the police station if he had a revolver.

"I have," he said, drawing the weapon. "Here it is, but none of you will see it out of my hands until it is empty."

Chief of Police Lock, Patrolman Speight and Desk Sergeant Hyde were in the station at the time, and Gable backed out of the door, holding them all covered with his weapon. The police conferred and decided not to go after Gable until today. This morning Assistant Chief of Police Snyder accosted him, but was covered with the weapon and decided not to make an arrest.

The crime with which Gable and Kibbling were charged was the larceny of several boxes of cigars and $3 in cash from a local tobacco shop.

PROTEST PETITION IN WEST KENT

Conservative Asks Disqualification of Liberal Member.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, Oct. 29. — Party politics and local option seem to have got much mixed up in the city of Chatham, hence a petition filed at Osgoode Hall on Saturday afternoon, against the election of Mr. A. B. McCoig, M. P., the Liberal candidate for West Kent in the general election of Sept. 21.

According to an interesting inside story going the rounds in political circles, the primary aim of the petitioners in launching the action against Mr. McCoig's election is to secure the carrying of local option bylaw in Chatham city. It is represented to certain of the Liberal workers in the constituency, whom it is desired to swing into line for the forthcoming local option campaign, that the hotelmen of Chatham and certain of the liquor interests are behind the effort to unseat the successful Liberal candidate.

The protest petition, which is filed by Mr. Wm. Roberts, jun., a plumber, acting on behalf of Mr. Ward Stamworth, the unsuccessful candidate, alleges the usual grounds of bribery, corruption, etc., set out in some thirty-three paragraphs. In addition to the petition to locate the seat, the disqualification of Mr. McCoig is asked.

Origin of Thanksgiving.

Rev. W. L. Steeves preached a special anniversary sermon in Egerton Street Baptist Church yesterday morning. He touched upon the origin and historical significance of Thanksgiving Day coming down from the Puritans in 1621, about one year following the landing of the Mayflower, and he pointed out the need of thanksgiving on the part of the home, the church and the state. In the evening the pastor's sermon was on "A Man Who is a Professional Kicker." Special anthems were rendered morning and evening by the choir and Miss Emma Graham sang a solo at the evening service.

Kisses Offered Santa Fe Manager in Exchange for New Depot.

Guthrie, Okla., Oct. 29.—C. W. Kouns, general manager of the eastern lines of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad system was yesterday offered kisses from 20 of the prettiest girls of Perry, Okla., in exchange for a new depot. When Mr. Kouns, with other officials of the Santa Fe who are on an inspection trip arrived at Perry, nearly all of the city's inhabitants visited the special train. Among the visitors were 20 of the city's most handsome young ladies. They asked for the officer who had to do with the construction of the new depots. When Mr. Kouns was identified the young women promptly made their offer. Mr. Kouns refused to enter into the trade, but it is understood that word has gone to headquarters recommending a new station for Perry.

PICTURE COWBOYS CHASE DIRECTOR

Moving Film Man Has Thrilling Adventure in the West.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Oxnard, Cal., Oct. 29.—Pursued by a band of moving picture cowboys mounted on horseback and firing into the air and at the tires of his automobile, Director Chas. Goodman, of the Melies Film Co., taking pictures between this city and Santa Paula, was forced to flee last night from the picture camp to this city, later leaving on a southbound train to take up the matter with the company. The scene presented eclipsed any motion picture plot the company has ever acted in and aroused the entire Santa Paula section.

The trouble started several days ago, when members of the company objected to several stunts the director had asked them to go through with. Dislike of him gradually increased, particularly among the cowboys employed to give versimilitude to Western scenes and the old "shooting getaway method" was finally decided upon to rid the camp of Goodman.

WILSON---SISKIND

A Pretty Jewish Wedding in Horton Street Synagogue.

A pretty Jewish wedding was celebrated in the Horton street synagogue at six o'clock Sunday evening when Miss Ada Siskind, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs Solomon Siskind, of 461 Simcoe street was united in marriage to Mr. Michael Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Wilson, of Detroit. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rabbi Joseph Chassey.

The bride who was given away by her parents, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Sarah Leff and Miss Ethel Leff. The groom was assisted by Messrs. Israel and Samuel Leff. Little Miss Ethel Leff, niece of the bride, made a very charming flower-girl. The bride was very beautifully gowned in white China silk, trimmed with medallions, and wore a bridal veil with orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet consisted of white roses and carnations. Miss Ethel Leff wore a charming gown of salmon-colored silk, trimmed with old gold, and carried pink carnations. Mrs. Sarah Leff was dressed in pale green silk, with gold trimmings. The flower-girl wore a pretty dress of pink silk. Following the wedding ceremony a dainty wedding dinner was served in Cullis Hall. Among the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Wilson, of Detroit, parents of the groom; Miss Wilson, Detroit; Mrs. Hubert and Mrs. Bloom, Detroit; Mr. L. Stein, Watford; Mr. and Mrs. H. Wilson, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. H. Siskind, Boston; and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Reshetskay, Thamesville; and others. Telegrams of congratulation were read by Mr. Julius Siskind, from Boston and Toronto. A part of the evening was spent in dancing, Mr. H. Kurtzma, acting as floor director. A pleasing incident was the crowning of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Siskind by all their children, in honor of the wedding of their youngest and last unmarried daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left this morning on a short wedding tour to include Buffalo and other eastern points. On their return they will reside in London.

U. S. NAVAL REVIEW

Taft to Look Over the War Fleet in the Hudson.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

New York, Oct. 29.—One million people, mainly New Yorkers, today viewed from every point the most gigantic fleet of warships America has ever seen, resting at anchor in the Hudson, awaiting review on Thursday by President Taft. Only a few of the 102 vessels to be in line are yet to arrive. It was Sunday on the warships, but there was little evidence of it elsewhere. Hundreds of river craft were passing and repassing, each bearing its burden of humanity for a nearer view of the great fighting machines, while thousands surged along the water front and Riverside Drive. Sunrise brought the first spectators, and each hour added its quota.

Fifty thousand persons viewed the vessels from close range. The majority of these engaged passage on the huge excursion steamers which left at frequent intervals. There were several small-sized riots in the vicinity of One Hundred and Twenty-Ninth street, when passengers who had embarked on the small boats with the understanding that they were to be taken aboard the ships were simply taken around one or two ships. If the passenger protested with sufficient spirit he got his money back.

HOME-LOVING QUEEN AND HER KNITTING

Have Set Fashion in Aristocratic Circles—Revival in Hand Embroidery Work.

London, Oct. 29.—Some society women are finding a new pleasure in the art of fine needlework and embroidery, a revival that is claiming fresh converts every day. Artistic ability of a high order is needed to reproduce with needle and thread the works of old masters, but Lady Carew has lately finished a large needlework reproduction of the well-known painting, "The Meeting Between Beatrice and Dante." A clever exponent of old Italian embroidery is Lady Ashburton, a daughter of J. C. Donnelly, of New York. Her boudoirs and reception rooms at the Grange, Arlesford, are full of beautiful specimens of her handiwork.

To Queen Mary is due, not only the revival of embroidery, but other old-world acomplishments. Only those outside the immediate court circle know with what enthusiasm Princess Mary is following in her mother's footsteps. The princess is already an expert at tatting and drawn threadwork, and she contentedly sits by the hour with her work in her lap, with what at one time would have been called old-maidish persistence. Strange to say, she has developed quite a passion for composing old-time "simplers," a favorite occupation of Queen Victoria in her girlhood. The smart set find such things dull, but the number of those following the royal lead is wonderful.

Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, has also done much to revive interest in the art of needlework among women of leisre. And in a more practical fashion the Countess of Mayo is an enthusiast in handicraft.

EAGLE SOARED OVER AUTOMOBILE PARTY

Huge Bird Appeared Ready to Swoop Down on Passengers.

Although autoists have ben accused of perpetrating many Baron Munchausen stories, they have never been placed in a class with Dr. Cook, of North Pole fame, or other nature fakirs, so it is possible that two stories reported by motorists after trips yesterday afternoon will pass unquestioned.

The first comes from Thamesford, a village about fourteen miles east on Dundas street, or, rather, the Governor's road. As a party passed over a bridge at the east end of the village, three or four people gathered and gazed intently at the stream below. Before the motorists had gone a city block the entire population was on hand, so the travellers "'bout shipped," as mariners say, and put back to learn the cause of the commotion.

"What's the trouble?" asked one as the care reached the scene.

"Pike," came the reply from a young fellow, who perched himself in a perilous position on the edge of a bridge, just above the water.

Taking this as advice to look for himself, the visitor scanned the bed of the stream, but could "pike" nothing.

"Come again! I didn't get you," he suggested ,addressing himself to the person who first answered him.

By this time some person had procured a fishing pole, to which was a pliable wire in the form of a loop-snare. Then the most expert anglers proceeded to display their skill, but despite the best efforts of the men of the village, the huge fish, for that proved the cause of the trouble, refused to allow the wire to be placed about his middle. He slipped about the stream for half an hour or more, but his elusive manner tired the inhabitants, who gradually dispersed to procure Sunday recreation in some other form. The motorists say the pike was three feet long.

The second tale has a rather melodramatic touch and actually occurred on the Proof Line road a half mile or so north of the village of Birr.

As a party proceede toward London late in the afternoon an eagle circled down to within a few yards of the car, and apparently deliberated as to which of the passengers would afford the finest Thanksgiving repast. All prepared for combat, however, and while the bird, whose body appeared easily as large as that of a goose swung in the air a few feet above the car, considered what Theo. Roosevelt would have done under the circumstances.

However, the eagle apparently thought a second time and disappeared in a clump of trees at the roadside. It is said to have been about five feet across the wings.

time in the public libraries. Now he had an opportunity to display his wonderful energy in a field that suited him. He was a success as a reporter, and rose to the editorship.

Successively he became a legislative reporter, editorial writer and part owner of the Post. An inheritance from a member of his family in Hungary gave him the means of purchasing a share in the paper.

In 1869 Mr. Pulitzer was elected to the Missouri Legislature. He had found time to study and be admitted to the bar. He became a member of the Missouri constitutional convention.

He was a delegate to the national convention which nominated Horace Greeley in 1872. In 1874 he sold his newspaper stock and went to Europe, returing at the time when the Tilden-Hayes campaign was beginning. He joined in the campaign and made 70 speeches in 16 states for Tilden. He went to Washington to correspond for the New York Sun and thus made his trenchant pen first felt in the metropolis. In Washington he met Miss Kate Davis, a niece of Jefferson Davis. She was one of the most beautiful women of Washington society, but the young correspondent triumphed over many suitors and won her hand in marriage.

After another trip to Europe he returned to St. Louis in 1878, and purchased the Evening Dispatch for $2,500. In a few days he consolidated it with the Evening Post, athus founding the Post-Dispatch, which became one of his largest properties.

It was in 1883 that Mr. Pulitzer came to New York, intending to purchase the Daily News. Negotiations fell through, but on the same day Jay Gould offered to sell him the New York World. The offer was finally accepted, and Mr. Pulitzer got the paper for $348,000.

The paper was in a bad way, but its new owner took hold with a vigorous hand and an inventive brain. He made many innovations in all branches of the newspaper field, and usually they were successful. Three years ago there was a celebration of the 25th anniversary of Mr. Pulitzer's control of the paper.
