Unless a challenge for the American cup comes from England, Ireland or Scotland in a few days all hope of an international race in 1890 will have to be abandoned, for while the New York Yacht Club have the power to waive any and all condition as to time, it is not likely that they will meet a new boat from the other side without building one to compete with her, and that will take at least ninety days, with ninety more to get her in shape for racing.

Skating

CARSON WINS FROM CARROLL.

The three mile race at Palace rink last evening between Frank P. Carroll of Pictou, champion amateur skater of Canada, and R.W. Carson of St John, was unquestionably one of the most exciting ever witnessed here. It was the first event on the programme, and at the pistol shot Carroll took the lead, endeavoring in the first few laps to out-skate his adversary, but in vain. The little one stuck to his heels, with much less effort than the leader was making to get away. They soon dropped into a procession which was varied by frequent bursts of speed. Towards the end of the race Carroll spurted swiftly. Carson responded bravely and in an attempt to pass the other he struck Carroll's skate, tripping the latter up. Carson won in 11:06 2-5 but the judges after some consideration ordered the race to be skated over. Later in the evening they toed the scratch, and were off as before, Carroll leading, and going at a sharp pace. Forty laps were covered before a real spurt was made, then on the forty-first Carson slid under Carroll's arm at the upper corner and was ten feet in the lead before the spectators could realize the fact. Cheer after cheer greeted him, and as he covered the last two laps and one extra with long quick strokes, with the Pictou man at his heels, the applause was deafening. The little favorite won, and although the time for the three miles was slow 11:48 the last laps were terrific.

Both the contestants are fine skaters but Carson's strong point, and the one which secured for him the race, was his superiority in rounding the corners.

Carson now challenges Carroll for the championship of Canada, but as Carroll won the championship of Canada at the meet alone where it is possible to win a championship (the meet under the auspices of the Amateur Skating Association of Canada), it is not likely he will jeopardize his title by accepting the challenge, and he should not.

An amateur championship can only be won at an amateur championship meet.

Thomas Freeze won the Green medal, 8:28 4-5.

The first heat of the three mile race for the rink medal was contested by T. Irvine, W. Condon and F. Courtney. About ten seconds were lost on the start which was an extremely ridiculous one, no man wishing to take the lead, and no man wishing to be in the rear. Irvine, however, had a walk over, gaining a lap, and winning the race in 11.03½.

The reason why the second heat of this race was not skated is not known. It cannot be said that the entries failed to turn up, for one man, George Brown, was on the ice and ready for business. If the other entries did not appear the second heat should have gone to Brown by default. The medal, however, strange as it may appear, was awarded Irvine.

The professional race was won by Alcorn.

T. McDiarmid won a two-mile race from J. Nagle in 10:19.

The judges were: Messrs. Frank B. Ellis, Charles E. O'Reilly and Morton L. Harrison. Mr. James Berry officiated as referee, Mr. F. Craft as starter, and Messrs J. M. Barnes and Charles Coster as timers.

Presbytery of St. John.

At the afternoon session of the Presbytery yesterday, the selection of commissioners to the general assembly resulted as following: By rotation, Rev. Messrs. Macdonald, T. W. Coburn and Arch, McLean.

The report of the temperance committee submitted by Rev. T. Stewart, by adopted.

Rev. Mr. Fotheringham brought forward a proposal to engage a general secretary to do clerical work in connexion with the scheme of higher education in the Presbyterian Sabbath schools of the dominion.

After some discussion the following resolution was carried:—

"The Presbytery expresses its general approval of the scheme, but desiderates a full development of its application to the circumstances of our church and of the church's willingness to meet the necessary expenditure before committing itself to the appointment of a salaried secretary."

Mr. Wilson on behalf of the Carleton church, appealed to the Presbytery for encouragement in making a proposed call. It was the opinion of the members present that the Carleton church should be given all the financial assistance possible and necessary in the event of its extending a call.

In reference to the question of making it compulsory for every minister to subscribe to the aged and infirm ministers' fund it was resolved that it was not expedient.

A number of small bills were passed. Adjourned.

THE BOARD OF WORKS.

The Vote Given Yesterday on Engineer Holt's Report on the Leary Dock Plans.

The board of works met in the city hall yesterday afternoon to hear the report of F. W. Holt, C. E., on the plans submitted to the common council in January by James D. Leary.

Ald. Shaw presided and 11 other members of the board were present. After Mr. Holt's report had been read, Ald. McCarthy moved that it be received. Ald Robertson moved in amendment that inasmuch as Mr. Holt suggests many important changes in the plans the board recommend to the council that Mr. Leary's plans be not approved. An amendment to the amendment was then moved by Ald. Connor that the report be submitted to the council. After two hours discussion the amendment to the amendment was put and lost; the amendment carried.

The vote was for Ald. Robertson's amendment, Alds. Robertson, Blizzard, Chesley, Barnes, Vincent Horncastle; against it, Alds. Connor, Law, Smith, McCarthy, Baskin.

St. John Street Railway.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE GAZETTE:

SIR:—Will you kindly grant me space in your valuable journal to express the following views on the subject of the St. John "Street" Railway.

Ever since its institution some three years ago this enterprising Company of which Mr. H. B. Zebley is the manager and representation here, has conducted the service, particularly that on the route between Lower Cove and Indiantown, in a most thorough and satisfactory manner, through storm and sunshine, despite rain or snow, maintaining their trips by time table, with clock like regularity from early morn until midnight.

I know that very many of our business men and householders, particularly those of the North end, must highly appreciate the accommodation now afforded them by the Street Railway and an intimation of a return to the old "army worn" service would make the sensitive shivers and the rugged to probably swear. However, I think that it is unwise and impolitic, as well as unfair to the Street Railway company, that patronage should be given to the little sleighs that "guerilla" or "privateer" like, still spasmodically hover about on the road between Market Square and Indiantown. When the sleighing happens to be good they will dodge about at meal times often I regret to say, picking up full loads of the very people who have to depend upon the street cars in wet, stormy weather, and at times when the privateers do not deem it profitable to run. The business on the route is apparently quite limited, especially during the winter season, and it is to many a matter of surprise that Mr. Zebly and his efficient staff of associates continue to maintain so regular and frequent a service. I certainly think that it behooves the citizens of St. John, especially those residents of the North end who are employed in the old city bounds and who have to travel to and from their stores or workshops, frequently and constantly, to give their undivided patronage to the Street Railway, even when necessary to wait at the Market square a few minutes for the car to come along, rather than to be coaxed into an army-worm that may be in waiting.

I cannot close without expressing a few words of commendation for the way in which the horses of the Street Railway Co. are kept, evidently showing good care and plenty of food. This also might be cited as a good change from the old dispensation, but enough said. Hoping that this may be received in the spirit in which it is meant,

I am yours respectfully,

St. John, Mar. 4. NORTH ENDER.

THE DEFENCE OF PARNELL.

the whole benefit of which they took and have held ever since."

Mr. Gladstone pointed out that the action of the Conservatives in using the support of the Parnellites to oust the Liberal government, although they disapproved the acts of the Parnellites on the ground that they led to crime, was a parallel to the course of the Parnellites in accepting a donation from the American physical force party, although they disapproved their policy. The donation was accepted because that party would not have subscribed to a fund for parliamentary purposes." He admitted that there was a time when he himself did not recognize Parnell's endeavor to win the Irish from criminal to constitutional methods, but he has since come to regard Parnell as a Conservative force in the preservation of law, order, and peace in Ireland. He declared that the Carnarvon negotiations ought to have been considered a full, absolute and final condonation for the Parnellites, and an absolute closing of the book of controversy. The commission had taken a great mass of facts, and the judges said: "We cannot look to the right or to the left: we can look neither backward nor forward. All we have to do is to return a verdict on the dry facts." Was Parliament to act on such principles? It was the duty of the members as statesmen and legislators, to survey the whole range of circumstances and great historic forces which brought about the Irish crisis. Otherwise it would be impossible to do justice. A parliamentary vote of an adverse majority, delivering itself in consonance with its own views for the purpose of discrediting its political opponents, would tend rather to lessen than to add to the weight of the judges' verdict.

In conclusion he appealed from the Conservatives as a party to the Conservatives as individuals. He said: "I ask you as citizens and men to acknowledge the law of equal moral obligation. I ask you, man for man, to place yourselves in Parnell's position. Is it possible for you to do that without feeling that something remains due him? And can you make that something smaller than the amendment I propose? Give your judgment as men—not a judgment that may be sustained by a majority of this House, but a judgment that will bear scrutiny in the heart and conscience of every man when he betakes himself to his chamber and is still. I entreat—I might also say demand—that you pronounce such a judgment as will give late and scanty reparation for an enormous wrong."

SIR MICHAEL HICKS-BEACH

said that the report bore evidence of careful and impartial judgment, entirely devoid of political prejudice and passion. The least the house could do was to accept it as such. While there might be nothing in the proved charges to justify an indictment for treason, he was surprised that gentlemen who had been and might again be ministers could excuse and palliate such charges.

He cited Mr. Parnell as authority against the assertion that the Conservatives, before coming into office, had pledged themselves not to renew the coercion act, and he called upon Sir William Vernon-Harcourt to apologize for that calumny.

Sir William Vernon-Harcourt arose and said he had never heard such a statement. Then, declaring that he would not stay to be abused, he left the House.

Sir Michael, continuing, said he inferred that the Parnellites voluntarily supported the Conservatives in 1885 in order to equalize the parties and secure the balance of power. There was no reason for Parliament to condone the acts of the Parnellites, which had been first authoritively established by the commission. The charges on which the Parnellites had been acquitted were possibly more important to themselves and their personal honor; but the charges on which they had been proved guilty were more important to the community, because they related to practices, the revival of which would be fatal to the liberty and prosperity of the country.

Mr. Davis Did Not Write the Letters.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE GAZETTE:—

SIR:—The letters from Brooks ward correspondents that have lately appeared in your columns under various names have of late been, by a few, attributed to me.

Let me state that I did not write any of them including the one signed "No Gusto" nor am I in sympathy with the correspondent or his mode of attack. Let him sign his name and let him call on a convention and he will soon abandon his letter writing and devote his time to more profitable pursuits.

I am your ob't serv't.

On the 29th of January last a young lady named Miss Sophia Burgoyne, of St. Margaret's Bay, caused a writ of summons to be issued out of the supreme court against Andrew Dauphinee for $2,000 for breach of promise of marriage. Dauphinee, who is a young farmer, having learned of Miss Burgoyne's action made over all his property and took his departure from the province before the sheriff had an opportunity to serve the writ. Miss Burgoyne's lawyers are now figuring as to how they can reach Dauphinee, who is in the United States with the young woman whom he married immediately after breaking off his engagement with Miss Burgoyne.

Funeral of Andrew Cowie.

The funeral of the late Andrew Cowie took place at 1 o'clock to-day, from his late residence, Queen street. Informal services were held at the house before the casket containing the remains was carried to the hearse by the following pall bearers: Fred E. Sayre, W. R. Avery, C. E. Scammell, R. H. Simonds, R. Murray Boyd and Arthur Porter. Leaving the house the hearse was preceded by the members of the St. Andrews Hibernia Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and members of sister lodges. No regalia was worn. Following the hearse was a very large number of citizens.

The cortege proceeded to Trinity church, at the entrance to the grounds of which the procession in front of the hearse opened up allowing the hearse to pass through. Rev. Canon Brigstocke, rector of Trinity, and Rev. A. Golmer, his curate, walked in advance of the procession to the entrance of the sacred edefice.

The service consisted in reading the beautiful burial service of the Episcopal church and the singing of chant 39, and hymn 405. After the service at the church the body was taken to the Intercolonial passenger depot. The interment will be at Liverpool N. S.
