WALKER

Gets Up a Rouser For Christmas.

What do I hear in my magical ear;
Santa Claus coming, with clatter and roar,
Coming again, dears, driving his reindeer,
Beautiful Christmas approaching once more.
Let us be tasty—not wild or hasty,
This is a business important, you see,
What we all choose to wear or to use,
What I give you and what you give me.

Something for Aggie, and Nellie, and Maggie,
Hisy, and Jamy, and Johnny, and Joe.
It's awfully funny how one can save money
At Christmas if only you know where to go.
Father and mother will give to each other,
Brothers give other chaps' sisters a ring,
A bracelet or pin, with a diamond set in—
Christmas is just quite the jolliest thing.

To guess what is needed a few have succeeded,
It's a labor of love and a most pleasing task,
If you get in a pickle, why then go to Walker,
He has everything under the sun you can ask
Platters and dishes, for turkeys and fishes,
Cook stoves and heaters; big, little—for all;
Furniture, bedding—Walker's fame is spreading
For beautiful presents, you owe him a call.

For carpet or curtain, my friend it is certain
His styles are the latest, his prices quite down
For the house or the table, our Walker is able
To furnish the cheapest, best gift in the town
From sofas to pictures, no limit or strictures,
He knows how to deck out a palace or cot;
And better than all meant, you pay by instalment,
You don't have to settle it all on the spot.

Walker's Christmas stock is a rouser; as the boys say, it's a "corker." His store is packed with new and beautiful things; all to make home the paradise it should be, so far as appointments go. You can afford to buy now (you can hardly afford not to) on the saving plan of Walker's Weekly Payment Store, 167½ QUEEN-STREET WEST.

P. S.—Listen to reason: Go to him in season and secure an elegant hanging lamp, a china tea set, or other handsome and useful present. Walker has the inside track. No more high prices.
